the rejoinder "I'll starve before I'll go to the Dome Mines." It transpired that in the great explosion in Halifax, his wife's eyes were filled with powdered glass, and the surgeon found it necessary to remove both eye-balls, and in consequence, she was stone blind. The morning after her eyes were removed, her sixth baby boy was born. I said to him "Your wife blind, and six boys to care for—how do you get on?" "Well," he said, "We get on just about as well as we ever did. My wife does all the work at home, washes, irons, mends the children's clothes, keeps the house as she did before she lost her eyesight. When we came to Etobicoke, the neighbors saw my wife putting clothes on the line, and were told she was blind. They hesitated to believe that it was possible. She is keen to go to Dome Mines, stating that we will get free fuel for the winter, and be that much further ahead in the spring." This woman could have said that she was part of the war wreckage, that someone ought to take care of her children and her home, but she had the fighting quality in her, and said "I have a husband and children, and a home; I will take care of them." As we separated in the city, my soldier friend said, "I am sure if you were to come with me now to my home, you would find my wife whistling or singing."

Not Towards Self-Reliance

You will agree with me I am making no overstatement when I say the spirit of the present time is not running in the direction of self-reliance. The popular view writes off the individualist as a selfish beast, who thinks for himself, works for himself, and who shirks responsibility for his fellows. As a theory of life, individualism has developed mean selfishness, and its advocates are frequently neglectful of those who are less strong and less able to take care of themselves. It represents, however, a vital principle of personal responsibility, upon which, whether they know it or not, the world of men and women rest and depend. It bases its advantages upon its discharge of this responsibility, through hard, determined, unflinching personal effort.

Dependence Upon the State

Lord Rosebery said this further thing in his address to the students of Glasgow University:

"As things are, we in Scotland do not take much, or even ask much from the State, but the State invites us every day to lean upon it. I seem to hear the wheedling and alluring whispers 'Sound ye may be, we bid you be a cripple.' Do you see? Be blind; Do you hear? Be deaf. Do you walk? Be not so venturesome. Here is a crutch for one arm, when you get accustomed to it you will soon want another. The strongest man, if encouraged, may soon accustom himself to the methods of an invalid, he may train himself to totter, or to be fed with a spoon. The lesson of our Scottish teaching was 'level up.' The cry of modern civilization is 'level down.' Let the government have a finger in every pie, probing, propping, disturbing. Every day the area for initiative is being narrowed, every day standing ground for self-reliance is being undermined, every day the public infringes on the individual, the nation is being taken into custody by the State. I should like at least to think, that in one powerful city, youth was being reared to know that most of what a man has to do in the world he must do for himself, and that it should produce men and women who shall look not to external or even legislative support, but to themselves for their success in life. May the tone and note of this University be independence and self reliance. May it produce not merely scholars, but men."

The reliance placed upon what governments can accomplish is pathetic, and the frequent determination of even thoughtful men to turn to government or to legislature, for relief in business and other troubles is part of the daily experience. Manufacturers call for the Department of Trade and Commerce to find export business for them. Farmers call for government controlled and operated Wheat Boards at the public risk, and with transportation charges relieved at the public expense. Labor seeks to secure through legislation, shorter hours of labor, assured employment, and minimum wages, and the people generally, through public ownership or government control are to be delivered from the tyranny of private enterprise.

A recent writer stated:

"Our Social Reform schemes are conceived on a theory of pleasure economy, but history and evolution show that man has come up through a pain economy—he has struggled up—found his way up through never ceasing effort and struggle and battle. Man is at his best rowing hard against the stream. In our facile plans for the future of society, no place is found for sacrifice, yet in all the long history of mankind, sacrifices had a conspicuous part. We are planning to rely too much upon social and political machinery, and we underestimate the importance of physical health, education, and the sense of individual responsibility. No society will survive without the integrating motive, which consists not 'in not having,' but in doing one's full share. The world is stirred to-day by powerful centrifugal forces like a whirling wheel, which will fly into pieces unless it is held together by equally powerful centripetal forces. These integrating forces are measured self-control, obedience, respect for law and authority, restraint, limitation of desires, the feeling of obligation. We have a superabundance of vital energy—what we need is vital control."

If you consult with a company of your associates in business for the correction of weaknesses or the increase in production, the usual result is that your officers will say "Give us more machinery and a larger organization." It is a rare thing for the men on the working lines to say "We will learn to work harder and more intelligently, and to make greater use of the existing organization and machinery." When the United States came into the war, the President made a call upon business men to assist the nation, and there came to Washington probably the greatest aggregation of executive capacity that was ever gathered for public service in one city. They came from all parts of the Union. They sat for weeks and months, not knowing what to do. Under the American system, the Chief of Ordnance is responsible for the production of munitions of war. I said to him, "We have had some experience in Canada during the war in making use of business men for purely business purposes. If you will draft these executive men whom the President has brought into Washington to carry on the business for you, your engineers can prepare the necessary specifications and furnish the needed technical inspection, in which case I think you will secure excellent results. This is the present British practice. They tried what you are doing, but had to drop it. Their army officers and engineers now prepare designs, and furnish inspection, but business men have charge of production." He replied "I will not pass over to a body of business men what this Department should itself perform." So he built a very wonderful organization, housed it in excellently constructed buildings near the White House. The organization reached, I believe, as high as twenty-two thousand men. There were miles of blueprints illustrating the organization. There were, however, few if any American shells fired during the war, and few if any American guns in service. Charged with the same duty in Ottawa, we had been at work for a year or more when someone asked for a plan of our organization. I replied "I fear we have not prepared one. In securing production of munitions of war, we have not thought of preparing a plan."

There is another aspect of this question of "Dependence Upon Organization" that is impressive. The Ford plant at Detroit is a wonderful place. You take off your hat to the men who have organized it, but looking at it from another side it is the most dis-spiriting place possible. Each man repeats the same operation on a piece of material passing before him upon a moving belt. He turns a screw, bores a hole, or does some other single act repeated all day long. As one looks at it one thinks of the noble profession of craftsmanship. I am not saying this to make light of the Ford organization, but to direct attention that we are living on our capital of craftsmanship, and one wonders what will happen at some later time when all these one-job people are called

Which is Better, Cash or Credit?

One Merchant Seeks Advice as to Whether He Should Change From Credit to a Cash Way of Doing Business, While Another Grocer Doing a Strictly Cash Trade Wants Advice About Giving Credit

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

THE TWO letters I use this week were received early in August, but the delay in publishing them is not all up to me. As each approached a serious problem, I hesitated to make more than general suggestions without fuller information, so I asked for it. After long waiting, I handle the letters.

Of course, it is up to any correspondent of mine to do as he likes about telling me what I ask. But I have never betrayed a confidence, and I feel put in an embarrassing position when I have to handle a problem on partial information and I think it might not be unsuitable if men would send me what I ask for—if, that is, they regard me seriously enough to ask at all!

Well, here are the partial letters:

Dear Sir:—Which is better, a cash or credit business? From reading your articles and from the one chance we have had to hear you talk, we get the impression that a few facts help you to talk back to us, also that you believe a credit business should be conservative. So here are facts: Business started 15 years ago, doing about half credit and half cash. Soon we concluded that we could not do credit and cash in the same store and do both of them right, so we took the easiest to hande and worked the cash. Now our business has grown to five stores and last year we did over $300,000, with net visible assets which have grown from the original $1,000 to $30,000. Our locations are fair. Most of our customers and all of our probable credit customers would be among those who are paid weekly, and we are within the range of a single carfare from Bigtown and its Consumers' Markets. Our "boys" are all young and might be inclined not to like any "conservative" suggestion as applied to a business they are ready to make grow rapidly. I am strong for the cash business, but I feel that our knowing this will not influence your opinion or its expression.

Here is my answer—dated last August:

Two things incline me to advise you to remain as you are. One is that quite evidently you have been successful. The other, that your stores are located among consumers who are paid weekly, and that means very limited responsibility. (Then I asked for some further information, saying): My thought is that, if you have made good earnings, you should hesitate to change. I believe in continuing as we have done unless there is good reason for change, for men who are accustomed to a cash business may readily fail of success in a credit business. Men who are used to credit, seldom succeed as cash merchants. Next, one essential to success in a credit business is a clientele with some tangible responsibility—such as enjoy fair incomes and are in general "good for" their accounts. Otherwise, why shoulder the burden of giving them credit? For the man from whom collection must be made weekly may be perfectly honest and well intentioned, yet he is liable to misfortune; and then you must lose something whether you cut off his credit or not. The temptation is to continue it in the hope of getting it back later on, also from the mistaken humanitarian promptings which creep into business everywhere.

Well, maybe that suited my inquiring friend. At any rate, I have no further word from him.

The Other Side of the Question

The other letter is so short I can quote it all:

Dear Sir:—I want to change an old credit business to a cash one on Oct. 1st. Will you outline some printed matter, etc., to use? I find I cannot get the turn and it is locking up too much capital under present system. Any help you can furnish will certainly do good. This is a farming section and they are sure long winded, but have plenty of cash for department stores.

You will note that my answer was likewise to the effect that radical changes are not to be made lightly, and to be avoided until or unless they are exhaustively considered in advance. Thus:

I assume that you have already decided that you want to change to the cash business. If I had some actual figures from you, perhaps I could persuade you not to do that. But, assuming the decision already made, I strongly advise against any form letter, cut-and-dried machinery stuff. My suggestions would be twofold: Have some signs painted thus:

"On and after October 1st we sell for cash only. No exceptions."

Put that ad. conspicuously on the front of your store, in your store, or in both and other locations about your store as you may conclude is desirable or suitable, having in mind the circumstances and character of your business. I cannot advise you more specifically in this connection without knowing more about you.

Now for the rest of it. Talk with every customer whose trade you value individually. Do not try to approach each and all the same way. You know those people personally. You would work hard to retain the trade of such as are desirable. Therefore, make it your own personal business to explain the situation to each of them. Make a strong, personal bid for each one's trade on the new basis.

Now let me caution you: Do not promise sweeping reductions in your prices. If you are a whirlwind of a manager, you may be able to reduce prices about five per cent.—possibly six, on groceries. I doubt if you can do better on your other lines. Now take a pencil and figure out just how much this means on purchases of 30c and 40c. You will then see that the price concessions you can expect to make are not such as will make a dramatic appeal to anybody. Further, I do not think you are a whirlwind at all, or you would be doing well with credit. Therefore, it is unlikely that you can reduce even as much as I indicate.

"Leaders" Not Important Influences

Of course, you will have "leaders" and those will be cut, but I doubt if you can really make any leaders more striking than you have been able to make in your former plan of operations, and so I say, go slow on promises of any wonderful "savings" under your new plan.

Finally, I think that if you really go into the cash business you should prepare in advance to face a tough job. The cash merchant does not repose on a bed of roses—not so you could notice it much! Everything will not come your way just because you determine to sell for cash. In fact, you will find that many desirable things seek distinctly other ways after you change.

I should like to have some further details of your business, its history, expenses, what you have made, what you have now, what proportion of your business is credit and what cash. Then I might be able to help you further.

As stated, I have no further word from either of these merchants.

The first I know rather well by reputation, and I incline to think he has accepted my suggestion to remain as a cash merchant and not to open credit at all. Therefore, I have no fault to find with his silence.

But what of the second? Has he also accepted what I said? If he has, I fear he will not improve things unless he also improves his methods and habit of thought. For it is quite evident from his letter that his customers and not he are running his credit department. That means, at best, that many years in the future he will awaken to the fact that all his earnings are on his books; and, at worst, he will go broke.

Now I should like to discuss the perhaps apparent inconsistency of my recommendations to these two merchants. Yet I am not inconsistent. I tell each of them to stay as he is. Maybe you think that obviously right in the first case—but do you think why it is right?

Credit a Banking Function—Should be Sound

You will have noticed that I pointed out the folly of giving credit to people of limited responsibility—in this already flourishing cash business. True, men extend credit to working people, who get their pay weekly, and find that trade profitable; but those men are masters of credit. They know its proper limitations. They work within its rules and they are of iron inflexibility in applying those rules.

But a business already properous on a cash basis—why should it seek a credit extension? Only to increase earnings, surely. Then it should take on credit only among those whose responsibility is such that they can be given accounts which run a month at a time.

And right here it is well to examine credit to see just what it is. It is, in fact, a species of banking. When you trust a man for $30 worth of groceries, you, in effect, lend him $30 with which to buy groceries. There is nothing else to it. You are his banker to the extent of the credit extended. Yet do grocers generally operate as if that thought had occurred to them? Do they, I ask you? They do not! No: they act as if their main business in life were to get rid of their goods—any way to get them out—give them away if necessary, but get rid of them! Result is, that most any grocer will trust a man for $30 worth of goods to whom they would not lend 30c of money on a bet.

A'int it de trut'? It is!

So now my further word to correspondent number two is this: If I have influenced you to stay with the credit business, that does not mean you are to continue just as you have been doing. No: you are to do entirely different.

Go over your list of accounts. Go over them with a fine tooth comb, individually, and set them down in a column of figures. Then make a second column of those that are most doubtful. Add up the second lot. It will hurt like blazes to see it; but face the music, and deduct it from the total as dead loss. Cut those off—dead. Not another cent to any of them in any circumstances.

Make another list of those who are probably good, but have been slow. Go after those people persistently, early and late, unrelentingly—but always with your temper in hand. Get as many as possible to see that you have awakened to the fact that you must have money to discount your bills and that 30 days is your limit; and let me add here that anybody who is not good for 30 days is not worth bothering with, generally speaking.

Have your rules. Stick to them as if made by somebody else whom you were bound to obey. Read David Copperfield and copy the firm tactics of Spenlow & Jorkins. Have a little Jorkins in your firm!

The good, prompt paying credit, keep. Keep it carefully, painstakingly, industriously. But keep it good. Do not let anybody backslide or become careless. Also, do not continue to trust a man who will not work on a business basis no matter how wealthy he is. Your rules must be paramount. Get me? I mean, work at your credit business. Make that investment pay just as well as any other. Then you will not regret the capital tied up.

Did You Ever Stop to Think--

By E. R. WAITE

THAT people are interested in reading the ads when their pockets are bulging with money to spend.

THAT they are INTENSELY INTERESTED in advertising, when what they spend must be carefully spent.

THAT then they buy what they can afford.

THAT when business is lagging is the time to spend more money for advertising.

THAT those business men who do so, feel a depression much less than those who cut down expenses by cutting down advertising.

THAT to curtail advertising cuts down sales.

THAT cutting down sales cuts down production.

THAT cutting down production cuts down employment.

THAT when employment is cut down, it leaves a whole lot of people with no money to spend.

THAT you should keep up your advertising so you can keep up your sales.

THAT it will increase production and that will increase employment.

THAT with increased employment, people will have money to spend.

THAT "BUSINESS BETTER THAN USUAL" is the slogan to use. ADVERTISE!

A Hit and Miss Method

A FEW DAYS ago a Canadian Grocer representative called upon a merchant just at closing time. The grocer was making up his statement for the day. The total sales amounted to $267.16, according to the piece of wrapping paper on which they were recorded. The amount was then written on a sheet of an old half-torn scribbler and added to the total of the previous three days of the week and the book-keeping of the store was completed. The cash drawer did not tally with the sales sheet, however. It was eighteen cents short. Once more the almost illegible figures on the brown wrapping paper were added up but still the cash drawer was out the eighteen cents so the grocer, after muttering something about having to check up the delivery boy in the morning, took eighteen cents out of his pocket and put it in a leather bag with the rest of the takings for the day. He reached up, turned off the lights in the little office and the day's work was done.

Such shocking ignorance of business principles is the reason of more than one of the problems in the grocery business that not only reacts upon the retailer, but is felt by the wholesalers and the manufacturers, and finally by the buying public. This grocer, although he does a fair business and has excellent prospects in his district, which is one of the best in this particular city, has not the slightest idea what it costs him to run his business nor an idea of what percentage of profit his different lines yield him. His is a hit and miss plan. Perhaps he enjoys the surprise of a balance in the bank at the end of the year. He cannot forecast either his buying or his sales one month ahead. The only thing he can tell is that last year on a certain date he sold so much, at least according to what the wrapping paper indicated.

When Canadian Grocer representative expressed some surprise at the simplicity of his scheme of accounting, and asked how he determined his buying, with a gesture of self satisfaction he said: "Well can't I see what I got on my shelves? When that's gone I buy more. That's easy enough." So blindly he works on. Day after day working for that day alone with little or no preparation for the future, and no guiding record of the past; content in the thought that he is doing a fair amount of business and is able to meet his bills as they come.

U. S. Protects Her Home Markets

THE UNITED STATES is not losing any opportunity of protecting her home markets by tariff changes. Peculiar power has been invested in the President so that he may at a moment's notice change the tariff if it is found that it is incompetent to protect United States industries from foreign competition in any particular line, owing to a sudden change of labor conditions or money values in that country.

Perhaps the most distinguishing feature of the new tariff, as compared with previous acts, are those provisions investing in the President the authority to render the basic tariff flexible, in accordance with proved differences in cost of production, to prevent unfair practices in import trade, and to meet discriminatory duties or practices against American export trade or shipping.

Broad powers are granted the President to change classification and to increase or decrease the basic duties within the range of 50 per cent., upon proof that the duties fixed do not measure the differences in cost of production in the United States and the principal competing countries. In cases of goods subject to ad valorem duties, when an advance in the rate is not found to equalize the differences in the cost of production, the President may order the duty to be assessed upon the American instead of the usual foreign valuation.

The President is also empowered to impose additional duties to 50 per cent. ad valorem or even prohibit the importation of certain articles by particular persons, upon proof of unfair methods of competition in import trade which tend to injure an efficiently operated industry in the United States, to prevent the establishment of such an industry, or to restrain trade within the United States.

Editorials in Brief

The salesmanship that is nothing but permitting the customer to buy is not salesmanship at all.

You can make good show cards in the store and window pay your rent and a good dividend in addition.

It is poor business to unload unworthy goods upon an unsuspecting customer, but to brag about it afterward is fatal.

When you sell goods that are not of standard quality, see that you explain their grade fully to the buyer, thus avoiding future trouble and complaints.

It is not enough merely to sell something to the customer. See that you sell what will give the best satisfaction while at the same time returning a profit to the store.

"EVERYTHING that increases mutual knowledge of the achievements and possibilities of industry and commerce increases the welfare of the people and acts as a stimulus to further progress. In this respect business newspapers perform functions which no general newspaper can undertake, and a limit can be set to their useful development only when a limit has been set to the march of knowledge or science, whichever you prefer to call it, as applied to production, commerce and finance."—Lord Burnham, Proprietor "Daily Telegraph," London.

"THERE never was a time when business newspapers could do a better stroke for the world than they can to-day by bringing it home to their readers and the great public that all the peoples profit by the peace and prosperity of each other. They are the most practical of internationalists and through the sensitive machinery of the market can estimate from day to day the reactions of policy and the supreme value of a settled order in the relations of states. They, better than anyone else, can realize the fallacy of the view on which nations have too often acted that what is one nation's gain must be another's loss. The world as we see it to-day is largely what politicians and statesmen have made it. Is it not time for the business man to take a hand?"—C. P. Scott, Editor, "Manchester Guardian."

upon to do some other work. This organization of repeat work kills the development of the craftsman. He is simply a cog in a huge operating machine, and we are in danger of forgetting that a man is a man, and has a right for all round development.

Dependence Upon Associations

A few years ago, three gentlemen from a town on Georgian Bay, called on me and said, "We desire to establish a packing house plant in our town, and want to talk to you about it." They submitted their plans, and we had an interesting hour together. These men had hitherto been somewhat bitter opponents for the North Shore trade. I asked them "Who is to manage this business?" and they replied, "Oh, we will all do it." After they had gone, I said to Mr. William Davies, "These people will come to grief; they have an impression that by building a house, and organizing with some sort of general oversight from themselves, that it will go itself. They will come a cropper." The plant, which cost five hundred thousand dollars, has been closed up for the past ten years or more.

I remember during the War, that manufacturers of munitions in this Province formed a munition section of the Manufacturers' Association. The President and Secretary came to Ottawa to lay their views before the Chairman of the Munitions Board. They stated: "Your revised prices for shells are too low. They cannot be made at a reasonable profit. We represent three hundred and thirty manufacturers, and we are expressing their view when we say it is necessary that we should have a higher price." I said in reply, "I am sure you are wrong; if the purpose of your organization is to secure higher prices, you do not need an association of manufacturers to convince the British Government that they should give a fair price for work done in Canada. What you have not known is that through the courtesy of a number of manufacturers, we have in detail the cost of producing various sizes of shells in their plants, and the prices we have fixed are based on their experience and upon their statement that they think the price a fair one. You will perform real service with your Association if you will co-operate, and those who have greater experience assist those who have less, in establishing better production with the same overhead. You will make more money, and you will assist a hard pressed British treasury." It has always appeared to me that one of the dangers of the Manufacturers' Associations was that it led to dependence upon assistance from outside, and did not look enough toward improving business from the inside. I have never believed in Trusts, nor been a member of a Trust or combination—not because I thought they could do much harm to the consumer over a length of time, as sooner or later the spirit of competition took care of that side, but that the harm came to the consumer because men depended upon the organization in place of trained judgment developed under the stress of necessity. I remember a manufacturer during the War saying "You will fall down in the delivery of munitions unless you pull these infernal munitions inspectors out of munitions plants, as they try to impose all sorts of ridiculous standards upon the manufacturer." I asked the Chief Inspector to send his senior officer to this plant, and to bring back a report. Upon his return, I had the manufacturer join in the conference. Complaints had reached the Board from the British authorities that the ammunition boxes pulled apart under stress because the screws did not hold. The Chief Inspector said, "My officer went into this manufacturer's shop at the finishing end, and inspected the boxing of shells. The workman was driving the screws in the boxes home with a hammer. The inspector asked him 'Do you permit that?' 'Permit what?' came the reply. 'Permit screws to be put in your boxes in that manner?' And for the first time the manufacturer saw it. He said 'You damn fool, what are you doing that for'?" Similar conditions were found all over this man's establishment. The correction of his troubles lay with himself, and did not arise from unreasonable standards set up by the Inspector.

Another Type of Co.operation

Prior to the War, I was asked to speak in the town of Ayr, where they had a very active Farmers' Organization and Women's Institute. The subject of my address was "Co-Operation," and I fear the Company was disappointed in the type of Co-operation I recommended. The Chairman of the meeting had been one of a group of some twelve hundred farmers, who had gone to Ottawa from all parts of Canada to prefer a plan about something—the nature of it I have forgotten. I said to them, "The Chairman of this meeting was one of a Company who went to Ottawa. I am not passing upon the question, whether what they wanted was right or wrong, but I would desire to say to him, and to you who are farmers present, that if every man in the Company who went to Ottawa had in place of going there to seek for remedy, formed themselves into a league, each with his neighbor and he in turn with his neighbour, to fight bad weeds, to cultivate the land better and deeper, to use better seed, and to get rid of their scrub cattle, they would make more money for themselves and add far more to the wealth of the country than by anything which they, or twelve times their number could cure from Ottawa."

Take Labor. We know the abuses under which Labor suffered, and respect the causes which led to the organization of Unions, and the redress of many wrongs made possible only through the pressure of organized Labor, but there has developed an insistence for collective bargaining, the closed shop, the sympathetic strike, and the policy of "Ca' Canny." Redblooded men are told that they must lower their output. Any action which through the force of organization levels the good man down, is a menace to society. The control of the spirit and purpose of a man, and his responsibility is with himself, not with his neighbour, his Union, his Group, his Party, or the Combination to which he belongs. It is a frequently forgotten truth from which there can be no deliverance "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The question was asked long ago "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"—acres of thorns or fields of thistles, because they are numerous, give no greater promise of grapes or figs.

There have developed bodies of determined men, in classes, in groups, in associations, in brotherhoods, in Unions, who claim they are righting injustices and relieving society of tyranny. They are found in politics, in industry, in agriculture, in education and in the Church. They are mostly sincere, and frequently uninformed or misinformed. The onlooker, seeing some of them in action, may be forgiven if he indicates they seem to be chiefly concerned in what they can capture for their theory, for their class, their group, or their organization, whether what they desire to secure presses upon others or not. It would appear they are too commonly possessed of the selfish purposes of the individualist without his creative force or courage. He seeks to create through his own effort, and if he will he can share with others. They depend upon organizations and collective power to force their plans, if they are not willingly accepted. They develop and exploit class consciousness, and determine to have their way if the forces at their command can compel its acceptance. One is inclined to ask—are we setting up another form of tyranny, without the compensating gain of individual responsibility and individual initiative and effort? The community needs both forces—individual initiative present in organized groups which are exponents of opposing views but neither should seek the exclusion of the other.

We are slow to see it, but our problem is not, how shall we obtain our share, but how shall we make something worth sharing; not one solved through capture, but through creation. It was perhaps natural in the reaction from the strain of the war to believe in the possibility of economic restoration along the path of less work and more enjoyment. We have entertained delusive hopes of a high standard of living to be attained with less effort and shorter hours of labor. It will not do. We must travel along the old highway of hard work with ungrudging service,

Quebec

J. W. Shaw, of Shaw and Aykroyd, manufacturers' agents, Montreal, was in Toronto last week on a business trip.

Fred McBride, of the firm of J. T. McBride & Co., dried fruit importers of Montreal, was in Toronto last week on a business trip.

G. M. Setliff has come to Montreal to be the local manager of the Sun Maid Raisin Growers of Canada Ltd., succeeding Alex. McLeod, who has gone back to the United States.

Fire of undetermined origin did considerable damage to the store and stock of Joseph Brassard's grocery store at 828 Centre St., Montreal, last week. In the investigation defective electric wiring was blamed for the outbreak.

In the November 3 issue of Canadian Grocer reference was made to the birthday of Charles Chaput, president of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Limitee, Montreal. However an error was made in stating that Mr. Chaput was 83 years of age, whereas he is only 81 years. This mistake is regretted and Mr. Chaput may be assured that it was unintentional to make his age two years more than it actually is.

The hearing in the Kellogg Corn Flake appeal case is set for Monday, Nov. 20.

The grocery business carried on by the late D. McRae and Son, in Lancaster, will be now conducted by the son, Ross T. McRae.

D. Hill, for fifteen years engaged in the grocery trade in Calgary, Alta., has moved to Fort William, where he resided before going West 20 years ago.

John L. Scott, for twelve years a grocer on Pape Avenue, Toronto, died at his home, 517 Pape Avenue, the other day. He was 63 years of age. He is survived by his widow and one son.

In the list of honors conferred by Mr. Lloyd George, as is customary on the retirement of a prime minister, appears the name of Baron Leverhulme, head of Lever Bros., soap manufacturers. Baron Leverhulme has now been created a viscount.

The warehouse of Thomas Kinnear & Co., at Galt, was recently entered by burglars in the night. The office was ransacked but nothing was taken except about ten boxes of cigarettes, one box of cigarette papers and five cartons of cigarettes.

The grocery store at Inkerman, owned by Leonard Burrell, was badly damaged by fire last week, loss to the extent of between five and six thousand dollars being the result. The loss is only partially covered by insurance. Mr. Burrell was awakened from his sleep by the smell of smoke.

BUSINESS CHANGES

A. Noble is now in business at 171 Roncesvalles Ave., Toronto.

A. Johnston is now in business at 1125 Gerrard St. E., Toronto.

T. H. McGee has commenced business at 1204 Danforth Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Good and How have commenced business at 1926 Gerrard St. E., Toronto.

Conference of Mfrs., Wholesalers and Retailers Next Month

The Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association will hold a general conference in the Prince George Hotel, Toronto, on December 12, 13 and 14. Representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, wholesalers and retailers, will be present to discuss various problems vital to the retail trade. Among the subjects for discussion is that of distribution. The Sales Tax and also the Receipt Tax which comes into effect on the first of the New Year will be dealt with.

Chief Dominion Analyst Announces His Retirement

Ottawa, Nov. 15 (Special).—The Federal Department of Health has lost the services of a valued official in the retirement, upon superannuation, of Dr. A. McGill, who since 1907 has been the Chief Dominion Analyst. It is after a lengthy and useful career, that Dr. McGill is retiring. The Food and Drugs Act, which has served to a very great extent in protecting the honest merchant against dishonest methods, was the product of Dr. McGill's fertile brain.

No successor has been chosen yet, it being the intention of the government to advertise the position, rather than to fill it by promotion.

Are Urging Closing of the Fraser River for Salmon Fishing

Ottawa, Nov. 15. (Special).—It is definitely understood that the interim report submitted to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries by the commission of members of the House of Commons which inquired into British Columbia fisheries contained a very drastic recommendation with regard to the Fraser River.

Messrs. Duff, Dickie, Stork and Neill, the majority of the commissioners, agreed to recommend a close season of five years for sockeye salmon fishing on the Fraser and its tributaries and all coast waters leading up to the same, providing Americans do the same on Puget Sound, and that an international commission be appointed consisting of representatives of the State of Washington and the Dominion of Canada to govern the matter of regulations during the period named and the term thereafter. Commissioners McQuarrie and Martell dissented from this proposal.

IS FOUND GUILTY OF OPERATING A PUNCH BOARD

Brantford, Nov. 15.—George Strobeydge was charged with having a punch-board in his possession for the disposal of goods, contrary to section 236, subsection E, criminal code. In view of the fact that this was the first case of its kind locally, Magistrate Blake registered a conviction against the defendant but allowed him to go on payment of costs.

Catalogs and Booklets

Gosse-Millerd Ltd., Vancouver, B. C., sent out an informative booklet on British Columbia salmon under the title of "Treatise of British Columbia Salmon." The author is W. D. Burdis, secretary of the British Columbia Salmon Canners' Association. In this booklet Mr. Burdis deals with the salmon in detail and gives an outline of the history of development of the canning industry on the Pacific Coast. Views of salmon canneries on the Fraser River and the different kinds of salmon found in B. C. waters are included. One statement made is that "all salmon are highly nutritious and differ from one another only in the color and relative firmness of the flesh and the proportion of fat and oil."

Will Not Use Additional Space for Display of Foods Next Year

Extension Will be Made to New Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition, Commencing This Autumn—Addition Will be 19,000 Sq. Feet

TORONTO, November 15. (Special).—While it is announced that the extension to the new Pure Food Building on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds will be started this autumn and completed before next year's exhibition, the additional space will not be used for displays of food products in 1923.

Several applications for space have been received by both the Food Products Association and the Exhibition, but the Exhibition Board do not feel that an extension of 19,000 sq. ft. of exhibit space could be taken up in one year's time. The present building has exhibit space to the extent of 26,000 sq. ft.

Not Satisfied With Some

One of the Exhibition officials stated to Canadian Grocer that there were certain firms in the present building that did not measure up to the requirements from their viewpoint and he thought it was likely these would be discontinued. This would make room for some of those who have made inquiries since the last exhibition.

On Monday last Geo. T. Irving, second vice-president and John G. Kent, managing director of the Exhibition were at the City Hall to secure approval of the council for the proposed extension. Members of the parks and property committee, after hearing the proposal, gave their approval of it. The Exhibition will begin this fall with the preliminary work as far as weather will permit. The matter will be taken before the entire city council at its next meeting, when it is anticipated it will receive the endorsation of that body.

Next year the Exhibition Board anticipates a display from the British Federation of Industries, which organization would likely require about 20 spaces in the proposed extension. A number of Ontario communities are seeking space for exhibits similar to the Made-in-Stratford show at last year's Exhibition.

Extension to Cost $100,000

The present building cost about $150,000 and the plan of the extension calls for an outlay of about $100,000.

Mr. Kent told Canadian Grocer that just as soon as the demand for space in the extension was sufficient, it would be given over to the manufacturers of food products. It was unlikely, however, that any part of it would be used in 1923 by individual food exhibitors, he said.

There will be no partition between the building as it is now and the extension. The aisles will be carried right through into the addition, which will include four more open courtyards. The plan calls for a wide entrance in the east end of similar size and design to the western entrance. There will be a large open air court just inside this eastern entrance.

Prices of Brooms Show Another Advance of 50 Cents Per Dozen

Stronger Values of Broom Corn Are Responsible for the Higher Quotations—Crop of Broom Corn is 75 Per Cent. of Normal

BROOM manufacturers announce a further advance in the price of brooms. The increase amounts to fifty cents per dozen, making a total advance of approximately $1 per dozen during the past few weeks. The higher prices are said to be the result of the strength and higher prices prevailing in the market for broom corn.

"There is a very good reason why broom manufacturers have had to advance the price of brooms," remarked one manufacturer to Canadian Grocer. "Last year we bought broom corn at $75 to $125 a ton. This year we are paying all the way from $125 to $300 and up. In fact, at the present time there is none obtainable at less than $230 or $240. All due to a short crop, when we expected a bumper one even right up to a short time before harvest."

Crop 75 Per Cent. of Normal

"Since the harvesting of broom corn commenced, it became quite evident that the crop would be a small one. Buying has been brisk. Even the poorer grades have found a ready purchaser, which, in a normal year, buyers would hardly consider at all. Prices which were predicted a couple of months ago have gone sky high and it is difficult to buy corn now at any price," stated another manufacturer. "Another factor is that there is no carry-over of any large amount, even speculators appear to have sold their holdings before this year's market opened. The price of broom corn is fully double that of last year and in consequence we have been compelled to advance the price of brooms."

The United States Bureau of Crop Estimates places the total tonnage of broom corn this year for the entire country at 36,900 tons, or 13,000 tons less than normal. It is estimated that in Oklahoma this year the production will only amount to 8,100 tons as compared with the production and amount in storage shipped last year of 23,000 tons. In the Lindsay district last year 1,000 carloads were shipped, while it is expected that the total production this year will not exceed 460 cars.

Halifax Grocer is Shot in His Store by Unknown Gunman

Halifax, Nov. 14.—Leslie A. Corkum, grocer, was shot in the abdomen in his store on Spring Garden Road here the other night by an unknown assailant who took a sum of money. Mr. Corkum was taken to hospital and is in a critical condition.

The shooting occurred about 11.30 at night when the wounded man was counting the money in an open cash register preparatory to closing up for the night. He retained consciousness and, following his assailant's flight, was able to crawl to the door of his shop and give an alarm.

According to the details which Mr. Corkum was able to give, the burglar entered the store, and pointing a gun at the grocer, ordered him to put his hands up. The request was refused and the gunman fired. It is not known how much money he took, but all the bills were missing from the register.

A fair number of people were on the street at the time of the shooting.

The assailant was described by Mr. Corkum and at another grocery store which he entered a little earlier, as a man about thirty years of age, five feet ten inches tall and wearing a ragged reefer and a grey cap.

OPENS A NEW WHOLESALE FRUIT BUSINESS IN WEST TORONTO

James G. Culnan has opened a wholesale fruit, produce and vegetable business in Toronto at 2778 Dundas St. West. Mr. Culnan has had several years' experience in this business, having been connected with one firm in the same line for the past eight or ten years. Prior to that he had considerable business experience with the Watt Milling Co., West Toronto, and at one time was with the T. Eaton Co. A new brick warehouse has been built for him at the above mentioned address.

Percy Roberts, of the J. T. McBride Co., Montreal, was in New York last week on a business trip.

WESTERN CANADA NEWS

Helen Maclachlan has opened a grocery store in Watrous, Sask.

The Northern Co-Operative Society Limited, Prince Albert, Sask., has moved into premises, now being established in the Masonic Building, Tenth Street East. This organization was formed in November 1920. The manager of the concern is Alex. Motherwell.

With fifty members present, Saskatchewan members of the Northwest Commercial Travelers' Association, recently elected the following officers to the Saskatchewan advisory board of the organization at a meeting held at Saskatoon: President A. A. Brown, Regina; vice-president, J. W. Lightbody, Yorkton; treasurer, D. D. Thompson, Regina; secretary, K. W. Ross, Regina, R. W. Birch, Regina, E. N. Argue and H. J. Trelevan, of Saskatoon, were elected provincial directors. Thos. Fox, retired president, was in the chair, and Fred J. C. Cox, general secretary, came up from Winnipeg to the meeting.

The Home Supply Company, 198 Smith St., was convicted in Winnipeg police court of a breach of the early closing by-law and Magistrate Macdonald imposed a fine of $5. It was shown that this store carried on a business of selling both fruits and vegetables and while it was permitted to sell the former after the regular business hours, the grocery section of the store had not been screened off as required by the by-law. This case was a test one. It was intimated that an appeal would be taken although this was not definitely decided upon. A meeting of the storekeepers affected is planned in the Odd Fellows' temple to consider the matter.

WHAT CONSTITUTES AN INFRACTION OF EARLY-CLOSING BYLAW

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 14.—Just what constitutes an offence under the early-closing bylaw was discussed by the police commissioners here recently.

"We are to have a report on what has been done in the way of enforcing the bylaw," said Mayor Fowler, chairman of the commission. "What we are anxious to do is to establish who is right in interpreting the bylaw. Certain lawyers claim that it is an infraction of the bylaw to have prohibited goods exposed, that is, not screened in, after the hours of closing. Others claim that this is not an infraction of the bylaw. They say that an infraction of the bylaw can only take place by the actual sale of goods. We are going to find out who is right."

Western Merchant is Held Up and Robbed of $3,000

Moose Jaw, Nov. 15.—Gunmen in a high-powered car held up J. Wilson, merchant and postmaster at Galilee, on the C. N. R., 35 miles south of Moose Jaw, the other night and made a getaway with $3,000 in cash. An envelope containing $2,500 which was in the store was overlooked by the robbers in their haste.

Mr. Wilson, who lives above the store, was awakened about midnight, when a big car stopped in front of the store and a demand for gas was made. Mr. Wilson dressed and went downstairs through the store. He went to the gas pump and in doing so saw that there were three men in the car. Just as he made ready to fill the gas tank one of the men flashed an electric torch in his face and called "Hands up." One man was left to guard Wilson while the other two ransacked the store.

When the robbers had found the $3,000 they came out and ordered Wilson back into the store. They left town travelling north.

Head of Wholesale Grocery House in Victoria is Dead

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 15.—William Wilson, closely associated with the pioneer history of the city of Victoria and the province of British Columbia, and one who for nearly sixty years had been very prominently identified with the business life of the place, passed away in this city recently. He was head of the wholesale grocery house of Wilson Bros. in this city until about four years ago when he retired. He took a keen interest in municipal and political affairs. He was for four years a representative in the B. C. government, and also for some time a member of the board of education. He is survived by five sons and one daughter.

SALMON AND SEA TROUT RUN WELL

Coquitlam, Nov. 15.—Recent rains have caused the flooding of the numerous rivers in the district and the salmon and sea trout are running in fine style. Fishing is reported very good in the Pitt and Coquitlam during the last few days and good baskets have been secured in the Brunette. All the fish are practically taking the spoon and worm.

A great annoyance to fishermen in the Pitt recently is the catching of numerous catfish, which have never before been seen in these waters.

Trade Inquiries

Canadian manufacturers and packers interested in the export trade of any of the following will be sent names of the foreign enquirers on request. Send the number of the enquiry to Canadian Grocer, 153 University Ave., Toronto, or to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, mentioning our paper.

587. Canned goods.—A well-established Leith firm of produce brokers and commission agents are desirous of being appointed as agents representing Canadian dealers in canned goods and acting as distributing centre for the East of Scotland. This firm has first-class connection in Edinburgh, Leith and surrounding districts. The lines which they are especially interested in are tinned fruits, tinned fish and table delicacies in glass containers, such as honey.

588. Skimmed milk powder.—Five thousand pounds of skimmed milk powder can be sold monthly to a large Japanese importer specializing in dairy products. Purchases have been made formerly in San Francisco: in June last, the price of the American goods was 11½ cents per pound c.i.f. Japan. Packing required in barrels of 250 pounds or less.

589. Full powdered milk.—Firm specializing in the import of provisions and supplies for the further manufacturing of food products, would be glad to purchase their supplies of full powdered milk from Canadian manufacturers if samples and prices run in line with competitors. Their requirements are between one and two tons per month.

590. Herrings.—A Manchester firm are open to consider quotations (f.o.b. Canada) on barrelled herrings.

Sudden Death of Manager of Marland Woolnough Co.

Niagara Falls, Nov. 15. (Special).—John W. Charles, manager, Marland, Woolnough Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., passed away suddenly at noon to-day.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

BUSINESS is moving in good volume in the wholesale grocery trade, and trade shows a considerable improvement. With the approach of the Christmas season buying for early preparations is under way. The feature of the markets this week is the strength of flour. Following on the advance reported last week, another jump in the price is again announced. Millfeeds, too, are quoted higher, and the general situation shows a decided tendency to stronger levels. Wheat is ruling at strong prices at the present time, and this, of course, is the chief factor in the strength of the flour market. Cereals, too, are very firm, and while no advances are reported the situation is strong. The sugar market is much the same as a week ago. Quotations are nominally on the basis of $7.75 per cwt. Montreal, but sales are being made, it is said, at a quarter of a cent under refiners' prices. Business from refiners' hands is reported light. The market in raws is quiet, with what business was moving being transacted on the basis of 3¾c. c. & f. New York. Heavy arrivals are reported in New York, more than sufficient, it is stated, to meet requirements, and on account of this fact, refiners were not interested on the above basis. U.S. refiners are quoting on the basis of $7 per cwt., with the exception of Arbuckle, which is quoting $6.90 and Federal refinery is still withdrawn from the market.

There is an active inquiry for dried fruits, and both raisins and currants are at strong levels. Shipments of new California raisins are quickly taken up. Supplies of currants appear ample for the demand, although dealers state that they are not at all heavy. Teas continue their upward trend, and higher prices on bulk teas are announced by some dealers this week. Coffee is selling freely at steady prices. New Southern rices are now offered. Canned goods are in good demand, and prices are steady. Spices are unchanged.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—Although there are few definite changes in grocery markets there is a stronger tone throughout with a decided improvement in general conditions. The most important fact is that price cutting is not as prevalent as it has been in recent months and that a steadier basis seems to have been reached with improved buying. The sugar market is steady but the wholesale trade is of the opinion that it has reached the peak and some men express the opinion that next month will see a downward trend. Buying at the present time is limited to small lots to meet immediate requirements. There is no change in molasses or corn syrups. Canned goods are steady in price with a good demand and a firm basis for the future. The whole market in dried fruits is stronger. The import cost of currants is higher. Late deliveries of raisins have been received and the retail trade is buying freely, in view of a strong future market. Late reports state that there will be more shipments of figs from Smyrna. New shelled walnuts have arrived and the import cost shows an advance of 5c over the cost of old stocks. Cereals are strong and the demand is good. There is no change in package goods but prices are on a firmer basis. The rice market has a better tone and spices are quiet. Tea importers state that the local market is still below the real cost of importation to-day and that another advance must come in the near future. There is little change in the fruit or vegetable market except for an easiness in oranges.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MORE STRENGTH IN COFFEE

Montreal.

COFFEE.—As far as the local coffee market is concerned it is only marking time, backed up by strength gained in the New York market. The system under which coffee has been marketed from Brazil during the past fourteen months seems so far to be working splendidly and there is no sign of a collapse which would result in a sharp break in prices. The demand is good and prices will likely remain at the present level for some time.

CEREAL MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

CEREALS.—A strong tone is evident throughout the cereal market, due principally to slow deliveries of grain at the mills. The demand is heavy and millers state that all the supplies they can turn out at present are going into consumption immediately, leaving no surplus. This applies principally to wheat and oats but the strength in these lines is reflected in others. Prices are unchanged as compared with a week ago.

CURRANTS QUOTED HIGHER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the dried fruit market is the advance in the price of currants. Spot stocks are cleaned up and higher prices are quoted on later shipments. The demand for figs is good and late reports state that there will be further shipment of Smyrna figs, arriving about the beginning of the new year. Raisins are in good demand and California shippers predict a higher price. There is a particularly good demand for dates on account of the low prices but this demand has caused such a drain on available supplies that the local market has a much stronger tone.

CANNED GOODS IMPROVED

Montreal

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market shows a much improved outlook. Price cutting is not as prevalent as it has been and small lots from independent canners have been cleared up. The situation in general is more healthy and the demand is good. The wholesale trade has more confidence now in the market than it has had for some time.

COTTON TWINE FIRM

Montreal.

COTTON TWINE.—The market for cotton twine and rope is firm after the recent advances. The prices quoted on twine to the grocery trade are much below that quoted in other retail businesses and with the continued strength in cotton the twine market is in a strong position.

MORE STRENGTH IN RICE

Montreal

RICE.—The rice market shows a stronger tone which is attributed principally to the threatening condition in the east, which, if it develops will cut off the supply of Oriental rices from some of the largest producing countries. Buying also shows a little improvement resulting solely from an increase in consumption, since buying is only from hand to mouth and there is no speculation.

SUGAR MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market remains steady but quiet. New York is quoting raws at 3¾ c. & f. but there is no activity. Buying in the local market is fair but the wholesale trade feel that the peak of the market has been reached and that with the offering of the new raws prices will ease off. Buying is limited to small lots to meet immediate requirements and some predict that a break downward will come next month.

ADVANCES TO COME IN TEA

Montreal.

TEAS.—Local tea importers predict another advance in black teas before the end of this month. They state that local prices are below the present cost of replacement and that, while the primary markets may have reached the peak, this market has not gone as high as import costs warrant. Japan teas are firm and unchanged.

IMPORTED VEGETABLES FEATURED

Montreal

VEGETABLES.—Imported and hot house vegetables feature the local market. High prices are quoted on tomatoes but lettuce is easier. Potatoes are unchanged in price but on account of ample supplies offered, the market shows no particular strength. The demand for root vegetables is good and the winter trade in imported vegetables is just getting started.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Buying is on a very much broader scale, according to reports of wholesalers. Preparations for the Christmas trade have lent a stimulus to business that is very gratifying. The sugar market is unchanged as compared with a week ago. There is the usual seasonable demand, with prices quoted at $8.09 per cwt., Toronto delivery. However, sales are being made, it is said, at a quarter of a cent per lb. under refiners' quotations. The market for cereals is very strong, as is also the situation in flour. The latter, while steady at last week's advance, is very strong, and millers express the opinion that another advance is most unlikely. Dried fruits are strong and in active demand. Canned goods are selling freely. Teas continue their upward trend and some dealers this week announce higher prices for spot supplies. Spices are steady. The rice market is unchanged. Supplies of Southern rice are now available. Nuts are moving in good volume. Peanuts are higher this week. Filberts are scarce and prices very firm.

BEANS IN GOOD DEMAND

Toronto.

BEANS.—The market for beans is holding at present levels. There is an improved demand for the same, and dealers are quoting the Canadian hand picked and 1 lb. pickers at from $3 to $3.25 per bushel. California limas are offered at the same prices as have been ruling at from 11 to 11½c per lb.

CEREALS RULE STRONG

Toronto.

CEREALS.—The market for cereals is very firm, and the situation generally is very strong. While dealers announce no change in prices as compared with a week ago, the congestion at the head of the lakes and the apparent inability to get shipments of Western oats moving, is responsible for the strength of the present situation in rolled oats. Wholesalers quoted 90s, at from $3.20 to $3.50, and oatmeal 98s at from $3.75 to $4. Demand for cereals at the present time is active, but buying is not in heavy quantities.

SPOT COFFEES FIRM

Toronto.

COFFEES.—Spot coffees are for the most part firm at unchanged prices, and importers state that there is a very good demand for the same. The volume of business is on the increase, and consumption of coffee shows continued improvement. The situation at primary points indicates some weakness as far as coffee futures are concerned, with some declines noted, and only moderate buying.

FIRMNESS IN DRIED FRUITS

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Firmness generally characterizes the market for dried fruits. Buying of Christmas fruits for the early Chistmas preparations is now in full swing, and dealers report a very considerable improvement as far as the demand for raisins, currants, peels, and such other dried fruits as are purchased for the first Christmas baking. Shipments of raisins, it is stated, are quickly cleaned up, and some dealers report stocks of currants not any too plentiful. It would seem that buying at once on the part of the retail trade is advisable. Some dealers are quoting old stock Thompson's seedless raisins, in 25 lbs., at 13½c per lb. Thompson's seedless raisins, bulk, to arrive, are quoted at 14c per lb. 15 oz. pkgs. seedless raisins on spot are quoted at 14½c per pkg. and Cal. sultanas are offered in 25 lb. lots at 13c per lb. Valencia raisins are quoted at 18½c per lb. Esmerelda figs in boxes of 22 lbs. are quoted at 11½c per lb. Hallowee dates are quoted at a reduction this week on the basis of 8¾c per lb.

Shipments of California prunes, that is the new pack, have not yet arrived on this market. Delays in transportation are responsible, but dealers state that arrivals of this fruit should be here any day now. Oregon prunes are quoted in 50-50s at 16½c per lb. and 80-90s at 13½c per lb.

CANNED GOODS ARE UNCHANGED

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—The market in canned goods is steady and unchanged, with dealers reporting a good volume of business at present quotations. Canned vegetables and fruits are in good demand. One dealer this week is quoting on this market, one brand of canned pears, twos, in light syrup, on the basis of $1.45 per doz. No change is noted in canned fish, and salmon has a good inquiry on the basis of $5 per doz. for ones, and at from $2.70 to $2.75 per doz. for the halves. Alaska reds 1s, are offered at from $3.75 to $3.95 per doz.

NUTS ARE IN DEMAND

Toronto.

NUTS.—Changes in the market for nuts are few this week. Buying is reported active, and the market as a whole is steady. Pecans and filberts constitute the strongest features. The latter are scarce, and spot supplies have been pretty well taken. New filberts have not yet arrived. Shelled filberts are quoted at from 35 to 38c per lb. Shelled almonds are slightly easier at from 39 to 43c per lb. No change is reported in quotations on walnuts. The market for peanuts has developed considerable strength, and dealers are now quoting the unroasted peanuts at from 13½c to 15c per lb.

BETTER INQUIRY FOR RICE

Toronto

RICE.—Shipments of new Southern rice are now being offered for sale on this market, there is an improved demand for this commodity. Dealers are quoting the new rice around 7½c per lb. Primary markets, according to reports are without feature, and the situation generally is firm. Higher prices are named this week on white sago, sack lots being quoted at 8¾c per lb. and broken lots are offered on the basis of 9½c.

SUGAR SITUATION UNCHANGED

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The sugar situation is unchanged as far as the spot market is concerned. The market is nominally on the basis of $7.75 per cwt., Montreal, and $8.09, Toronto delivery, but it is stated that sales from second hands are being made a quarter of a cent per lb. under refiners' prices. The movement locally is only seasonable, dealers state, and very little business is said to be transpiring from refiners' hands. In the raw market, heavy arrivals were reported N. Y. last week, more than sufficient for requirements. Some business was reported at 3¾c per lb. c. & f. New York. Since however refiners have declined to show interest on this basis. Reports from Cuba indicate favorable weather for the growing crop, but no operations on the same have as yet been reported as taking place. Sales of 1,000 tons, February shipment, are reported on the basis of 3 5-16c c. & f. New York. U. S. refiners are still quoting $7 per cwt. with the exception of Arbuckle at $6.90, and Federal is withdrawn. Some, it is stated, are meeting the Arbuckle basis.

SPICES ARE UNCHANGED

Toronto.

SPICES.—Spices are moving in very fair volume, and the situation is much the same as a week ago. Cloves are in fair demand, and the market is strong for the same. Peppers are active with quotations at from 18 to 20c for black, and at from 28 to 30c for white. Nutmegs, selects, whole, are from 30 to 40c per lb. and ground 28c per lb. Ginger is very firm.

SPOT BULK TEAS HIGHER

Toronto.

TEAS.—Some dealers announce higher prices for spot bulk teas again this week. The pronounced strength of practically all tea markets and the exhaustion of stocks of low priced teas, has resulted in a firm position for spot supplies. Demand is active. Reports indicate another advance of 2d. per lb. in Ceylons. Buying of teas at present values, dealers believe to be good business, as little hope is held out for easier prices, until the new crop is available.

POTATOES IN PLENTIFUL SUPPLY

Toronto

VEGETABLES.—Changes in this market are few this week. Arrivals of potatoes continue heavy, at from 85 to 90c per bag for Ontarios, and limited supplies of New Brunswick potatoes on this market are quoted at $1.10 per bag. Onions are slightly easier at from $1.40 to $1.50 per bag. Spanish onions for the large cases are offered at from $4.25 to $4.50, and half cases are from $2.35 to $2.50. California Iceberg lettuce is quoted in crates of from 3 to 4 doz. at $6.50.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 15.—Practically all lines of grocery commodities continue to show an upward tendency. Dealers in the West report stocks low and retailers buying in a conservative manner. The tea market continues upward and stronger. Coffee also continues firm. Canned vegetables are moving in good volume and sales of canned fruits are showing a slight improvement. There is a steady demand for salmon and sardines. Dried fruits on primary markets as well as locally continue upward. New arrivals of prunes, peaches and raisins are picked up readily. Bulk cereals maintain a firm tone and indications are that package cereals may advance in sympathy. Flour is ruling steady. The sales of jams and nuts are reported quiet. The sugar market is strong. The feature of the fruit market is the demand for apples at lower quotations. Imported vegetables such as head lettuce, cucumbers and hot-house tomatoes, are arriving in limited quantities.

FIRM TONE TO COFFEE

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The coffee market continues firm for prompt shipments but fluctuating for future deliveries. Roasters are holding off from buying except for immediate requirements.

CANNED GOODS ACTIVE

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—All lines of new pack canned fruits and vegetables are on the market. Sales of canned fruits are showing a slight improvement but hardly up to that of other years. The trade report the sale of canned vegetables, showing a marked improvement due to the fact that fresh vegetables are practically finished. There is a steady demand for canned fish, especially salmon and sardines. The California market for tomatoes, corn and peas is showing increased strength with the market advancing.

FIRM TONE TO CEREALS

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—Practically all lines of bulk cereals are showing firmer tendencies with the exception of split peas which are quoted at lower figures, 98 lb. bag being quoted at $6 and 49 lb. at $3.15. Beans are slightly firmer and cornmeal is ruling steady. Indications are that package cereals may advance in sympathy with bulk cereals.

INDIVIDUALISM AS A FACTOR IN AFFAIRS

while practising sound economy. This is an asset, not a penalty.

Many still believe that hard work for full hours is a penalty. Listen to Barrie's experience as recited to the young men at St. Andrew's:

"So you will have to work harder. The Almighty doubtless could have provided us with better fun than hard work, but I don't know what it is. To be born poor is probably the next best thing. The greatest glory that has ever come to me was to be swallowed up in London, not knowing a soul, with no means of subsistence, and the fun of working till the stars went out. To have known any one would have spoilt it. I did not even quite know the language. I rang for my boots, and they thought I said a glass of water, so I drank the water and worked on. There was no food in the cupboard, so I did not need to waste time in eating. The pangs and agonies when no proofs came! How courteously tolerant was I of the postman without a proof for me. The magic days when my article appeared in an evening paper! The promptitude with which I counted the lines to see how much I should get for it."

Here Barrie catches the spirit. Life is a great adventure in which a man of red blood plays his part with joy in struggle.

Years ago, at the plant of of the William Davies Company the level of the city drains permitted a minimum of fall to the Don River. In consequence, during high water, the street drains blocked, and had to be opened. It was a particularly bad place for the workmen, as the ground had all been filled in, and mostly with cinders, hence there was no bond. On one of these occasions, the Superintendent of the work came into my office, mud from head to foot, and declared with enthusiasm, "We have beaten ever previous record in the time spent in opening and clearing the drain." Even in this class of work there is joy in struggle and achievement.

Suspicion, envy, hatred, with consequent unrest, have been unloosed in the world to an unparalleled degree. There is no world deliverance from this and the economic burdens of the war except through individual courage, with patience, individual acceptance of the spirit of obedience, with the individual hard work and determined saving, and with it all cheerfulness. If we have concurrent, purposeful, national and international action, planning for sound economies by Government, re-established exchanges and better understanding between nations, there will follow the gradual emergence from the present state of confusion and distress in Europe. Probably greater progress than known has already set in.

Few Serious Losses

Canada has had few serious losses to bear. We can accept our moderate discomforts with dignity and restraint. We can secure no early relief from heavy taxation. There can be no freedom for years from the drain upon our cash resources through overbuilt railways, now the property of the State, but we have no cause for fear, if we play the game with high courage—and do not leave our cheerfulness—whatever happens, we must not lose courage, or abandon a sense of individual responsibility. Taxation is troublesome. It arouses a sense of injury, with anger. This may be useful if it curbs new and extravagant national and municipal expenditures. But otherwise surely it is a mistake, unless the burden of taxation is unfairly distributed. We fought a good fight. A great increase of national indebtedness followed, which must be met by taxation. There is a manlier way than scolding about the cost to us individually. We can still remember that the flower of our young manhood gave their services, and many of them their lives in the great struggle. If we have to go without some comforts because our share of the burden means the payment of heavy taxes, should we complain?

Slippy McGee said "Parson, think of me leading the brigade down here, keeping up the work, fighting things that hurt, and finding out things that help. Lord, what a chance! A hundred millions to work for, a hundred millions of one's own people, and a trail to blaze for the unborn millions to come. Lord God, that is a man size job!"

There is an honourable place for each man in Canada to do his job as well as he can each day, and that is the way the world's work, which matters, is done.

Getting the Dealers' Co-operation in Selling Eggs According to Grades

Adoption of This Method of Selling Eggs Will, it is Claimed, Work Out to the Advantage of All Concerned—Graded Eggs Are a Good Thing in an Export Way and Should Work Out in Domestic Trade

OTTAWA, Nov. 13. (Special) — The question of getting the trade to fall in line with the Federal Department of Agriculture's plans for selling eggs by grade, was discussed at some length at a recent meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Ottawa Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. The matter was introduced by W. A. Brown, chief of the Poultry Division, who told of the department's efforts to create a demand for graded eggs. The general plan was to offer for sale, specials, extras, firsts and seconds, and the department was endeavoring to educate the public as to the relative values of the various grades.

Want Retailers' Co-operation

"If you will co-operate with us in this matter," said Mr. Brown, "you will wield an influence second to none in bringing about an improvement in the egg business. Difficulties may be experienced at first, but the adoption of this method of selling eggs will work out to the benefit of all concerned. Graded eggs have been a good thing in an export way, and therefore should be a good thing in connection with domestic consumption. It is not the intention of the department to introduce compulsory legislation. We feel that we can accomplish better results by creating a popular demand.

"The retailers must do their part by requesting the wholesale distributors to supply these specific grades. There may be some difficulty in this respect at first, but if a sufficient number of retailers make it a point of persistently pressing their demands, the wholesalers will eventually fall in line.

Different Grades for Different Purposes

T. W. Collins, relating his experiences in this respect, said he had been candling his eggs for more than a year, and the difficulty he found was that people always wanted the best eggs they could get. The consequence was that he was constantly faced with the problem of getting rid of the lower grades.

Mr. Brown thought this could be overcome in time by educating the public as to the various purposes for which the different grades could be used.

One member wanted to know what the difference was between specials and extras. Mr. Brown replied that the only difference was that the specials weighed twenty-five ounces to the dozen, while the extras weighed twenty-four ounces to the dozen.

This Grocer's Experience

Mr. Collins, further relating his experiences with graded eggs, stated that on one occasion he purchased a case of what were represented to him by the wholesaler as specials. He had them examined by a government expert with the result that he found there were no specials, no extras, about nineteen dozen firsts, and the remainder were seconds. There was also one distinctly rotten egg. "That is the kind of thing that shakes the retailer's confidence in the wholesaler, and is likely to get him in wrong with the consumer," remarked Mr. Collins.

There was some discussion regarding the recent amendments to the Root Vegetables Act, providing for the selling of vegetables by weight. In spite of the department's instructions that in future a bag of potatoes must contain at least one hundred pounds, several members stated that they had failed in their efforts to purchase potatoes on this basis. The producers had absolutely refused to sell them one hundred pounds to the bag.

Chairman Kelly stated that he had endeavored to educate his customers, by placing a card in his window with the wording: "All Root Vegetables Sold by Weight."

Arrangements were made for sending a delegation to the annual meeting of the Carleton Place branch on the 21st of this month.

Those who attended the meeting were: A. E. Kelly, chairman; Duncan Bell, treasurer; J. C. Allan, secretary; James Regan, P. G. Allan, H. J. Hill, T. W. Collins, H. Armstrong, A. S. Moreland, A. Phillips, T. A. C. Kennedy, J. A. Wright, J. A. Walsh, P. Lamoureux, J. Paterson and S. Blushansky.

Propose Drastic Regulations in Regard to Oleo

Washington, Nov. 15.—An opportunity will be given to the producers and distributors of oleomargarine, adulterated butter and process or renovated butter to express their views on the most drastic regulations yet suggested by the government covering those commodities. A hearing has been set for November 20 at 10 o'clock by Assistant Commissioner Matson of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Suggestions have already been filed with the bureau by proponents of the regulations and oral testimony will come on the date named.

From the standpoint of the oleomargarine producers the proposed new regulations bring up some very serious questions, chief among which is the prohibition against the use of any word or illustration connected in any way with the dairy industry. In other words, it will not be possible to in any way use the words butter, butterine, churn or any other suggestive of the dairy industry, nor could there be used on the labels a picture of a dairy cow or even a silo. It is a pretty sweeping prohibition that is being proposed and the dairy interests propose to defend it to the limit.

The regulations also go into such questions as color and the kind of packages that may be used. They will further require strict compliance with the provision already existing, but which is not enforced, that oleomargarine be sold from the original package in which it is transported. It is already provided that this product shall be sold in the same way as the retailer is compelled to market cigars from the box in which originally packed and which bears the internal revenue stamp.

It is declared that this provision is being constantly violated and the packages of oleomargarine are being removed in the stores from the container bearing the revenue stamps and distributed through the stores. The dairy people are demanding that this be enforced.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 5.—As far as sales are concerned the produce and provision market shows more activity and a more healthy condition. Price changes are few but the general trend of the market is towards a stronger condition. Live hogs, although unchanged in price, are strong, but local packers do not favor an advance since they feel that the lower cost of feed this year will increase the available supply of hogs. Smoked meats are in better demand but quotations are unchanged. The cooked meat market is steady and without any feature of note. Lard and shortening are firmer, with a steady demand for small lots but no heavy buying. The butter market is quiet after recent advances and the export market shows no activity. While prices are unchanged and the market is a little dull there is no prospect for a reduction in prices at this season of the year. Cheese is firm and likely to remain so, although the quotations on the late makes are easier at country points. Eggs are strong and new laids are scarce, while the demand switching to storage stocks has greatly strengthened that source of supply. Poultry prices continue to decline but the demand is good. Haddock is one half cent lower in price.

BUTTER MARKET QUIET

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There has been no important change in the condition of the butter market. The undertone is firm and prices are fully maintained. Owing to the fact that demand from English importers has fallen off, the strength of the butter market to some extent is not quite so pronounced.

CHEESE PRICES HOLD

Montreal.

CHEESE.—The cheese market holds firm at the advanced level and a strong tone is evident throughout. New cheese is quoted at 25c. per lb. and old at 28c. per lb. The make for the season of 1922 is fast drawing to a close and receipts are decreasing owing to the fact that a number of boards in the country have already adjourned until next year. For the latest make of cheese there is a little easier tone at country points owing to the fact that the quality of this cheese is not up to the standard of other months.

NEW LAID EGGS SCARCE

Montreal.

EGGS.—The feature of the egg market is the increasing scarcity of new laid eggs. The few offered, are quoted at 75c. per doz. There is an increased demand from English importers for Canadian storage eggs and as cables are stronger, the domestic price is likely to show an advance. The demand for storage eggs shows a marked increase in view of the fact that the supply of new laid eggs is limited. Fall fresh eggs are quoted at 50c. and selects at 40c. per doz.

HOG MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—A stronger feeling is noted in the live hog market and although prices are not advanced the feeling in the trade is that higher prices are due. Offerings in the market have shown a decline since prices are not attractive to the farmer. In some cases the prices on fresh pork have shown an advance. Local packers claim that they do not expect that hog prices will show any marked advance between now and the new year, since there is plenty of grain in the country for the feeding of hogs. Select light weight hogs are now quoted at $11.25 per cwt. There is no change in the beef market. Prices are easy, but dealers are looking for an advance in price next month.

POULTRY PRICES DECLINE

Montreal.

POULTRY.—The supply of poultry on the market is steadily increasing, and prices are easier. There are two main reasons for this. First, on account of the new tariff on poultry shipped into the United States, the poultry raised in Canada must find a market here. Second, on account of the better supply of feed this year and the lower prices more poultry has been raised. While the supply is better and the prices easier the consumptive demand has also improved.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—The produce markets as far as butter, cheese and eggs are concerned, are all very high, with stronger prices quoted on both butter and cheese this week. There is a good inquiry for both these products. Eggs are strong, with supplies of fresh ones very limited. Lower prices are quoted this week on the majority of pork products. Fresh cuts of pork are easier, as are some lines of provisions and lard is offered at slightly easier levels. The easier trend in the market for live hogs is responsible for these generally lower prices. Poultry is for the most part steady, and fish shows a much better demand.

BUTTER MARKET STRONGER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market is stronger this week, with wholesalers quoting slightly higher prices for creamery prints number one and two. The former are quoted to the trade at from 41 to 42c per lb.., and the latter are from 37 to 38c. There is a very good inquiry at the present time for both domestic and export account, with a curtailment of the make.

STRIPS 500 LBS. SEA FOOD IN FIFTY-THREE MINUTES

Gloucester, Mass.—Ernest J. Mitchell, of this town, is the world's champion fish skinner, he having skinned 500 pounds of Georges cod in fifty-three minutes and five seconds. He dethroned Duncan White, last year's champion.

The contest lacked no element to make it conform with the accepted traditions of competitive sport. There were rules and officials as well as enthusiastic spectators who paid to see action, and demanded it.

The rules called for each contestant to skin 300 pounds "not-a-bone" codfish and 200 pounds of boneless codfish; there is a fine technical distinction here. We quote from the printed rules governing the joust: "Not-a-bone codfish shall be skinned, the fins pulled, napes picked, backbone cut out, wide-pieces cut away from all backbone.

"Boneless codfish shall have fins cut, skins removed, napes picked and backbones cut out of each fish."

The weapons were the regular fish skinners' knives, broad-bladed, razor-edged implements set in hardwood handles. The fingers of the competing aspirants were bandaged in soft cotton, against possible injury from pointed fish bone. The referee gave the starting signal, and the world's fish skinning series was on.

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

PECANS HURT BY RAINS

Advices from Albany, Ga., are to the effect that the pecan crop has been injured by excessive rains. The kernels of the nuts are discolored with black spots which cannot be detected until the nuts are cracked. On low land the damage is pronounced. Nuts from well drained areas are being harvested separately to take care of the trade which is looking for the best stock.

SEED POTATOES FROM CANADA

The 1,000 members of the Southern Produce Company in the Norfolk section expect to increase the importance of the Eastern shore as a potato producing district, says the New York Journal of Commerce. A cargo of 9,000 bags of seed potatoes from Prince Edward Island has been received with another to follow shortly. The crop is planted in February. The export market will be developed. In normal years $10,000 in potatoes is used in that channel. Prince Edward Island seed produces an earlier crop than domestic.

Shake hands with health every day

the big two-fisted idea back of Sunsweet this year

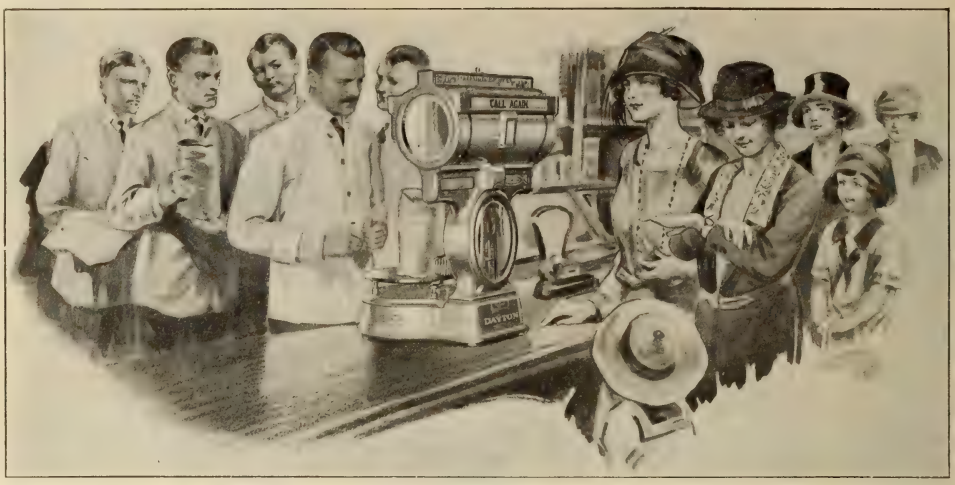
The 2-pound carton of prunes is the big merchandising idea back of Sunsweet this year. And it is tied to a big advertising idea: "Shake hands with health every day."

Our advertising in the national magazines, our advertising in the newspapers, our outdoor advertising, our dealer-helps—all will feature the 2-pound Sunsweet carton linked with a slogan that will soon be on every tongue.

"Shake hands with health every day" is a slogan that has ring and that has swing. It is easy to remember and repeat. And—because it has the "health-punch" it hits home to every reader.

In the 2-pound Sunsweet carton the California Prune & Apricot Growers Association has given you a new unit of sales that is bound to go big. The advantages of handling prunes in cartons are easy to see: There is no shrinkage of fruit. No loss from down weight or sampling. You spend no time wrapping. You have no packaging expense. It automatically increases your unit of sales. And it gives you an automatic display of Sunsweet Prunes for your windows and shelves.

To the consumer, too, the 2-pound carton of Sunsweet Prunes is a "happy idea." It is clean. It is handy. It keeps the fruit flavor-fresh. And it appeals alike to the small family or the large family with the small-sized pantry.



Now that Sunsweet advertising is focused on a pick-off-the-shelf package, it is going to be of more help to you. Translate the message of Sunsweet—"Shake hands with health every day" into cash-register terms and you have: "Shake hands with profit every day."

That, by the way, is the title of a little book Paul Findlay has written for his Sunsweet friends. Send for it today! And stock up now on the 2-pound Sunsweet carton—the biggest idea in selling prunes that has yet been put over!

The Customer who won't wait —are you turning her away?

You won't need to turn customers away—either because they are not satisfied with your service or because you can't serve them, if you use enough

International DAYTON Scales

Women won't wait long in line nowadays when they have a grocery list to order. Modern women are busy women. Modern methods have accustomed them to quick, accurate, courteous service when they shop. If YOU don't give it to them—your competitor WILL. They will leave the "line-up" and go elsewhere—where International DAYTON Scales are installed in sufficient number to serve every customer quickly at rush hours.

Perhaps you already use DAYTONS. But you may need an EXTRA DAYTON in order to keep that extra customer at the end of the line. Think it over.

DAYTON SCALES soon pay for themselves in profits saved through accurate weighing and customers retained through quick, efficient service. They are sold on attractive monthly payments. Discount for cash.

"Private Brand"

Of course you want to build up a permanent flour business. Of course you want every customer to buy again. Naturally you want to eliminate every possible cause for complaint.

So, as recognized purchasing agent for your clientele, you choose a flour that at a fair price will perform its duties most acceptably in the kitchen.

But what guarantee have you that the standard will be maintained—except the integrity of the miller? Why not adopt as your own a flour branded with its own reputation, which has been making good since 1887, whose name is solidly established throughout the nation?

ONE REASON OUR CUSTOMERS COME BACK

Here's what Mr. Harry Whittle, London St., Windsor says:

"I have never used anything but Eureka Refrigerators because I have never failed to get the utmost satisfaction from them. They are economical on ice and I can save all my perishable groceries, butter and cooked meats and keep them in first class shape. I can recommend Eureka Refrigerators to all who are in the Grocery Business, as a Refrigerator that will give every Service, Satisfaction and Economy."

Can YOUR Refrigerator beat this record? Does YOUR Refrigerator give you the "utmost satisfaction"? If it doesn't, you can't afford to be without the Eureka.

ANTS

Aware of your willingness to help subscribers, I would like to suggest that you insert in the Canadian Grocer a recipe for the prevention of red ants. I am sure this would be a great help to so many grocers, including myself, who have been greatly troubled with these pests.

Hamilton Subscriber.

Answer: Following are some recipes which we believe will prove of value to the subscribers of Canadian Grocer:

Balsam of Peru.—Rub a thin film of it near the bottoms of the table legs or on the floor, and renew the application in three weeks. In addition, boil one ounce of the balsam in a gallon of water for thirty minutes, and sponge this water, while hot, over wooden floors and walls.

Powdered Borax and Pulverized Alum.—Sprinkle underneath the paper on the shelves.

Oil of Sassafras.—Follow the train—for ants form a train in travelling—to its origin. Saturate a small cloth with the oil and apply to every portion of the distance covered. If they come out of a crack, pour a little of the oil into it, it is sure death to them.

If ants become troublesome about the pastry case in the summer time, insulate it by raising it on four inverted cups set in saucers filled with water. Give the case a good cleaning and in half a day the ants will become discouraged. Do not leave the case insulated longer than is necessary, as it is suggestive.

Retailer Goes After Toronto Daily

Merchant in Western Ontario Protests Against Advertising Propaganda in City Daily Seeking Extension of Mail Order Business Made Easy by C.O.D. System Recently Inaugurated—"Small Cities and Towns Would Become Mere Cross-Roads as Far as Retail Business is Concerned," he says

"IS THE retail merchant in the small towns and communities throughout the country experiencing a new menace in the way of mail order competition?"

This question is raised because of the propaganda now being carried on by one of the large Toronto dailies, The Globe, which, in circularizing its thousands of subscribers, points out, "we are now adding another feature, which we believe will be of value to you—A NEW MARKET PLACE—AN OPPORTUNITY TO BUY BY MAIL." Continuing, The Globe circular declares that the Dominion Government has recognized the importance of mail order merchandising and has passed regulations which are now effective, enabling people to buy goods by mail and pay cash against delivery of any parcel up to the value of one hundred dollars.

Action is Necessary

Asserting that concerted action should be taken by retail merchants throughout the country against this innovation, a merchant in an Ontario city of twenty thousand people writes to the secretary of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, W. C. Miller, as follows:

"Last week we drew the attention of your representative, who was visiting in our town, to the new form of mail order advertising that has been taken up by The Toronto Globe.

"We feel that this innovation is of such importance that concerted action should be taken by the Retail Merchants' Association and by the various merchants of the country. Not only is The Globe asking particular attention to this idea through the columns of its paper, but it is sending out circular letters signed by the business manager, drawing attention to this mail order feature, with addressed envelopes bearing the words, 'Mail Order Department,' for the return of a questionnaire to the newspaper office. This is a deliberate drive to take away the business from the small places to the larger cities.

"The writer has already written The Globe regarding the matter. In their reply, however, they offer the excuse that their object is to assist those people situated far from any shopping centre to secure what they require. In direct contradiction to this they have mailed these letters direct to residents of this town, and I have no doubt to many other centres, and it cannot be said that such citizens as these are remote from shopping centres.

"Should this idea prevail to the extreme, the small cities and towns would become mere cross-roads as far as retail business is concerned."

Much interest is being manifested in the new regulations providing a C.O.D. service on parcel post, in effect since October 1st. It was felt that because of the fact that mail order firms generally secure cash in advance in the ordinary course of their business they would not be much interested in this new feature of the parcel post service. However, investigations at Station "A" of the Toronto post office would indicate that city mail order houses are practically dominating the new service. During the month of October last 2,099 C.O.D. parcels passed through this station, of which 2,093 were of less value than $50 and six were valued at more than that amount. Of this number 1,763 parcels or 84 per cent. were those ordered on the C.O.D. basis by customers of a large city department store which operates a large mail order business as well. Of that number 104 parcels were from a competing mail order firm, 60 per cent. of the other 232 parcels were from wholesale woollen firms and the other 40 per cent. were from wholesalers of other lines of goods.

These records show that while the regular mail order business of such department store mail order firms dominates the regular parcel post, that through the medium of their city newspaper advertising and other efforts they are able to link up with the C.O.D. system and thus provide the country with a combination almost as effective as the mail order ca alogue.

Belongs to the Local Retailer

That the complaint of merchants in small communities against any well-defined effort to extend this mail order business is well founded, in the opinion of officials of the Retail Merchants' Association there is no doubt. The government's action in making it easy to ship goods through the mails, by the institution of this C.O.D. service, it is believed, in the best interests of the small town merchants, should be opposed. "City daily newspapers devoting pages to advertising from merchants with a special aim to securing business in the outlying communities, is taking trade that rightly belongs to the local retailer," declared a merchant in an Ontario town when discussing the new situation. "Every retailer in the smaller municipalities is going to suffer, and should rise up and protest to the government."

Canadian Grocer will be glad to hear from readers in regard to this question.

Increase in Price of Waste Paper Makes Saving of the Same Well Worth While

Dealers and Handlers Are Now Paying From $10 to $12 Per Ton for the Class of Paper That Accumulates Around Grocery Stores as Against $4 Last February

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—The value of waste paper has increased so rapidly during the past few months that at the present time it is worth about three times as much as it was at the beginning of the year. Dealers and handlers of waste paper today are paying from $10 to $12 per ton for the class of paper which accumulates around grocery stores, as against $4 last February. This kind of waste paper includes wrappings, newspaper and cardboard boxes. At present prices it would appear that the saving of this waste material means a considerable amount, and a source of revenue to the retail grocer which otherwise would be lost through destruction.

For the convenience in handling, a paper baler is the best method adopted. A baler need not be an expensive investment as they are made in all sizes, varying in price, depending on the size and the material from which they are made. These balers press the paper into a solid bundle weighing from 50 pounds upward. Merchants using them claim that it is just as easy to separate the paper during sweeping operations and dump it into the baler as it is to gather it all up and throw it into the garbage container. Furthermore, baled paper is less of a fire risk. It is practically impossible to burn baled paper. It will scorch on the outside, it is true, but that will be the extent of the damage. This was quite evident here in the city just the other day when a large waste paper and rag establishment was gutted by fire. While the fire lasted it was a raging furnace, but it was found when the fire was extinguished that the bales of paper were barely scorched, while the building and other material was completely destroyed.

Averages a Ton Monthly in This Store

The amount of waste paper which can be saved around a grocery store varies with the size of the business. For instance, Barron's Ltd., on Yonge St., average one ton per month; F. Simpson, also on Yonge St., runs about three-quarters ton a month, and still another example is that of D. W. Clark, on Avenue Road, whose waste paper averages about half a ton a month.

A Saving of Pulpwood

Another point to consider in the waste paper subject is the fact that for every six tons of waste paper saved and returned to the mills to be remade, a conservation is made of one acre of pulpwood. This is no small matter when it is considered that the paper industry will have used in 1922 nearly two million tons of waste paper. This two million tons of waste paper, therefore, means the preservation of more than 300,000 acres of good forest land. As an example of this, it has been figured that one of the big departmental stores in this city conserves 160 acres of pulpwood every year by saving and selling to the mills the waste paper which accumulates around the store.

Prices of Broom Corn Have Shown Steady Advances From Week to Week

A Broom Manufacturer To-day is Compelled to Pay Fully $1,500 More for a Carload of Broom Corn Than He Paid Three or Four Months Ago for the Same Grade

A MANUFACTURER of brooms in an interview with Canadian Grocer has the following to say on the broom and broom corn situation: "A normal year's broom corn crop is about 50,000 tons. The 1921 crop was 38,000 tons and the latest government reports estimate the 1922 tonnage at 32,000 tons. From this it will be noticed there has been a shortage of broom corn production in the last two years of approximately 30,000 tons. The effect of last year's shortage was not felt as keenly because of the fact that there were still a considerable quantity of finished brooms throughout Canada and United States which had not found their way to the consumer or in other words production was still keeping ahead of the demand.

"During the past year available supplies of broom corn had been gradually disappearing from the market, until about May or June of this year it was very difficult to secure corn of any kind. Many manufacturers were compelled to close down temporarily for lack of supplies. The result was that demand soon overtook the supply and this of course created a very keen demand for the 1922 crop of broom corn. The effect of this was immediately reflected in the steady advance in the prices of broom corn ever since there was any of this year's crop to be marketed. Practically every week during the past three months or more has shown some advance. Some weeks it would only be $5 per ton and other weeks it would run as high as $10 or $15 per ton. To-day the broom manufacturer is compelled to pay fully $1,500.00 more for a carload of broom corn than he paid three or four months ago for the same grade.

"Another remarkable feature of this year's crop is the absence of common corn. Weather conditions were ideal for the production of good quality corn and as a result what little common grade there is, is invariably being sold along with the better grades and practically the same price charged for it. A year ago one could purchase common grade corn by the carload at almost any price and this is the reason so many cheap brooms made their appearance on the market during that time. This stock all having disappeared from the market and practically no common corn being available this year, is the reason why there have been such large advances in the price of common brooms during the past few months.

"We have found it necessary to make frequent advances as we have been compelled to re-enter the market for further supplies and each time are obliged to pay a considerably higher price.

"The latest reports are that the bulk of this year's crop is out of the growers' hands and that most of it has been purchased by the manufacturers, very little of it being now in the hands of middle men or speculators. As a result we are told there is apparently no chance for any reaction in the market.

Frozen Chinese Eggs Are Again on Canadian Market

Despite regulations made last spring, Chinese eggs are again finding their way to the Canadian market. These eggs are frozen and are used by the manufacturing trade. Local egg dealers claim that they do not directly affect the retail egg market, except for the fact that they supply a demand that would otherwise be for the lower grade Canadian storage eggs, the grade which Canadian cold storage dealers find hardest to market.

C. M. Goddard, secretary of the Poultry Producers of Ontario, announced that ten carloads of Chinese eggs have already arrived in Eastern Canada. These eggs are what are called "canned eggs," and the poultry producers are endeavoring to have the government take a hand in the matter and prevent their importation. They are broken out of the shell before they leave China and in the liquid form put into sealed tins and frozen. In this form they reach this market and are used solely for manufacturing purposes.

Manhattan Piggly Wiggly Stores Fail

Piggly Wiggly Eastern Corporation With Stores in Newark, N.J., and Suburbs Also Goes Into Liquidation With Reported Liabilities of $1,000,000 and Assets of $25,000—Founder of Piggly Wiggly Stores Denies Any Connection With Failed Concerns

CANADIAN GROCER learned on Tuesday of this week of a report to the effect that the Piggly Wiggly stores in New York had gone into liquidation, and with a view to a confirmation of the rumor wired The New York Journal of Commerce, with the following reply as a result:—

New York, Nov. 21.—Following the failure here on Saturday of the Manhattan Piggly Wiggly Corporation with liabilities of approximately $1,250,000 and assets of $350,000, the Piggly Wiggly Eastern Corporation with stores in Newark, N.J., and suburbs, failed on Monday for $1,000,000 with assets of $25,000. These two corporations, New York City and New Jersey, operated under separate franchises from the parent corporation of Nashville, Tenn., under a group arrangement. They were distinct from the parent company, and Clarence Saunders, founder of the Piggly Wiggly stores, wires a strong denial of any connection, financially or otherwise, with the failed concerns. The two local concerns have been less notable in the grocery field than as objects of stock promotion under the management of James Elliott's "Business Builders" and in grocery trade circles the feeling has long prevailed that it was being over-financed for practical grocery operation. It is understood to have opened 38 stores, by no means reassuring in their present day success. Plans were said to contemplate opening 2,000 stores in the Metropolitan district.

LATER—The Piggly-Wiggly Corporation voluntarily applied for a receiver late to-day (Tuesday, Nov. 21). The Corporation operates four stores in New Haven, and three at Bridgeport. Liabilities are given as $50,000; assets $40,000. The other failures were precipitated by involuntary petitions of creditors.

Why Has the "Big Fellow" Succeeded?

Some Thoughts That Might Help the Smaller Man Who is Seeking the Road to Success—The "Big Fellow" Studied His Community, Gave it Leadership in His Line and Gave it Service—Ideas That Developed Big Business Can Also Be Applied to Smaller Business

THERE are many retailers who, when they see in a trade paper some article based on information secured from a big store, immediately assume the mental attitude that this information can be of no use to them. It is about the "big fellows;" therefore, entirely unsuited to himself. He says to himself, "He does business in a very big way; I do it in a small way. He has systems in operation in his store which are absolutely impossible in my store and which would be cumbersome and too expensive. His displays are for the big windows; my windows are small and totally unadapted to such elaborate displays." And he follows this line of argument through a dozen channels, so to speak, only to arrive at the conclusion that the problems of his and the big store are entirely different and, therefore, there is little he can learn by studying the methods of the "big fellow."

They Were All Small

One has but to have a smattering of knowledge to realize how destructive to one's self this kind of argument is. The retail establishments on this continent and in Europe that are now world-renowned all started in as small a way as the smallest man started in business during the year 1922. Marshall Field's, Lord & Taylor's, Selfridge's, Eaton's,—all world-wide organizations—had their beginnings in a small way. If the founders of these organizations could have looked into the future—into 1922, for instance—they would not have believed, even though they had seen it with their own eyes, what they see. They would have regarded it as a hallucination, an unrealizable dream, an altogether unattainable ideal. From the humble beginnings which marked their first efforts to a world-wide organization, sending its representatives into every foreign port where salable merchandise might be bought! Impossible! Ridiculous! Foolish dreams! Yet, these organizations stand to-day, monuments to their genius as merchant princes, as business statesmen.

Why Did They Succeed?

Does the retailer who is doing business in a small way ever ask himself why these men, these world-wide organizations, succeeded? The rudiments of their success are simple enough; the vast complications and intricacies of their world-wide business ventures came with the day-by-day study of business conditions, business systems, and the adjustment of their methods and organizations to meet the ever-changing conditions and developments. But the rudiments of their success were simple enough, as simple in 1922 as a quarter, a half, three-quarters or even a century ago.

They made a careful study of the community which they endeavored to serve from the very first. They studied the character of the people, their habits of life, their work, their play. They knew that their daily requirements would be governed by these. And then they laid at their customers' feet, as it were, the things they needed from day to day. And at the same time, they did not overlook their responsibility of leadership. They kept in touch with foreign influences that were bound to have a bearing on the development of fashion, that were part of the march of progress itself. And by bringing these things to the very doors of their clientele, they assumed a position of leadership in the community as vendors of the newest things offered in the various markets of the world. By studying carefully their community and its requirements, by keeping in touch with the outer world that could be brought within the walls of their own establishment, they catered to and finally received the approval of the community. And so they built and grew.

They Also Gave Service

There is one other thing they gave. They gave it as they grew as well as when they were grown up. They gave it in studying their community and its needs; they gave it when they placed on their counters merchandise from all over the world that would be acceptable to their friends. They gave service, with all that that word means. Sometimes in one act of service they lost their profits on the transaction, but they had made a life-long friend whose business meant long years of profit. If a small parcel were left out by carelessness in delivery a special messenger was sent post-haste to deliver it. If a small bottle of pickles were left out of an order consigned to gay picnickers they found out where the picnic was and sent a special messenger to the spot where the picnic was being held with the bottle of pickles. If a customer wanted something very badly on his way to the train they sent a special messenger with it to the train to place it into his hands. They did a thousand and one things that convinced the customer they were anxious to fulfill their obligations as a distributor of merchandise.

Little acts of service, you will say. Yes they were, but they were fraught with mighty consequences. And they were but typical of things they were doing every day inside and outside of the store to prove their service slogan to the public. Now, their establishments are given various names, but the name is just another name for service.

The Road to Success

The road to success in the retail field lies along these two paths—studying one's community, and giving a service that is unfailing. The big store was not always a big store; their methods of to-day are methods that developed as they rapidly travelled along these two pathways. During the days and years, perhaps, of their humble beginnings they studied the methods of the "big fellows" of that period: No idea was too big for them to learn about and to apply to their own business in some way or cherish till the day came when it could be applied. There was also something in what the big fellow did that gave them a cue to a better way to do something they had been doing in another way. They didn't regard the big fellow as a scourge; they knew him to be a leader because he gave a service that the people appreciated—and then they started out to do the same thing.

They had faith in their country. They knew it would some day be a big country with a place for many community leaders in the mercantile field, and they aimed to be one of those leaders. They grew up with the community because they studied its needs and gave it the necessary leadership in their particular line. Their usefulness extended beyond their community because they understood better than many other merchants who should have known what real service meant. They knew their community and their country. They gave service. And they succeeded.

Window Displays Appeal to Women and Should Be Built Accordingly

THE BOTTOM of a show window should be about twelve inches above the sidewalk. The passerby will see the display. It will come within his natural range of vision.

Have your windows just as modern as you can. The cost will be more than made up by their increasing advertising value.

Good lighting will increase the value of your windows. People see them at night when their minds are free from the worries of the day and more open to suggestion. A lighting expert will tell what style of lights to use and how to place them.

Plan Displays In Advance

Plan your window completely before placing the merchandise. Many of the best decorators draw a diagram before starting their work.

Metal fixtures are practical and serviceable. They are adjustable and different arms may be added. For some kinds of merchandise glass fixtures are best. Expensive devices for displaying your goods are not necessary. In most cases you can make fixtures that will answer your purpose quite as well.

Of all the money stores receive, 90 per cent. is spent by women. Make your displays appeal particularly to them. They are more easily influenced by suggestions and price appeals than men.

The experienced decorator uses his best windows to show articles which women buy.

Follow Nature's Scheme

A display should contain but one idea. This does not mean that only one thing should be shown, but if different things are shown they should be related in some way.

Do not attempt to show too much merchandise in your windows.

Some one has said that the value of a display is determined by what the decorator leaves out.

Pleasing colors beautify a window and attract attention. Wrong color combinations are displeasing and detract from the display.

It is a safe rule to follow the color scheme of nature, for she makes no mistakes. The brown and yellow of the sunflower or the blending of the colors in ripened fruit are good examples.

There must always be some connecting link to unite the different articles placed in the window.

This principle applies in making up displays of any kind of merchandise.

Showing the purpose for which an article is used attracts attention and makes the display more suggestive. Make use of the power and suggestion to increase the demand for your merchandise.

Each season has its calls for certain kinds of merchandise. Anticipate these demands in making up displays. Some stores have a display calendar. It reminds them to suggest the future wants of their customers.

Merchandise becomes unsalable if left in the window too long. For this reason, if no other, displays should be changed frequently. You would not repeat the same selling talk over and over to a customer. Neither should you allow the window to remain too long without changing.

Conveying the Big Idea

Use care in arrangement if you would have the public get your message. Keep in mind the big idea you want to get over and put it where it can be most easily seen. Leave an open space, arrange merchandise in masses and avoid straight lines.

Unusual displays are good, provided they help to centre attention on the big message you want the public to get. Freak displays that fill the sidewalk with people, but don't bring people to the store to buy, are wasted efforts.

The object of your displays is to sell merchandise, and any display is a poor display that fails to do this.

Don't use too many show cards. One is enough, and have it give some definite selling message. It should tell why the public should buy the goods shown in the display.

Good show cards will make your display windows sell goods.

Sales From Impressions

Make use of these displays and improve on them with your own ideas when you can.

Showing the different processes of manufacture, or the materials from which anything is made, always draws attention and inspires confidence in the product. Manufacturers will usually lend assistance in making up displays of this kind.

People's opinions of your store are formed to a large extent by your windows, and no pains should be spared to have everything exactly right. New customers are the ones you want to get, and if you make your windows interesting it will give new customers a good impression.

A price card wrongly placed or some little inattention to details will spoil an otherwise perfect display. Do not allow carelessness in your show windows. Keep the glass clean and everything in order.

Conference Will Take Place on December 5, 6, 7

Toronto, Nov. 22 (Special).—A conference between manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, regarding the Sales Tax, the stamp tax on receipts, and other matters of general interest, is to be held here at the Prince George Hotel on December 5, 6, and 7. The committee of retailers who are to attend on this occasion include J. G. Watson, Montreal: Henry Watters, Ottawa; E. A. Stephens, Ottawa; B. G. Crabtree (grocer), Ottawa; W. J. McCully, (grocer), Stratford, and president Ontario Board, R. M. A.; N. C. Dyan, Guelph; J. J. Duffus, Peterborough; J. A. Burry, E. Mack, H. Taylor, George E. Bingham, Toronto; E. D. Lowe, Ottawa; George Potter, Kitchener; W. C. Miller, Toronto, and E. M. Trowern, Ottawa.

Big Shipments of Walnuts Are Turned Down in New York

Montreal, Nov. 22 (Special.)—There will not be the supply of walnuts on the market this winter that was expected. Already New York shows a stronger tone on account of the large quantities of the nuts that have been turned down at the port of entry. The inspector of agriculture at New York has turned down shipments of the new crop Bordeaux halves as being waste and mouldy to the extent of 16 per cent. Much of the shipments of Marbot walnuts has been unable to pass the United States test of 85 per cent cracked. The result is, according to local importers, that supplies of walnuts from Cormes district will have to be relied upon. One importer stated that on account of the action of the New York authorities, who are very strict on this point, Marbot walnuts will be practically off the market at Christmas time.

As yet the Canadian inspectors have made no condemnation of shipments to Montreal but local dealers are expecting that on account of the recent turn down at New York, local inspectors will be all the more strict in their examinations. Some of the local importers of nuts view the action of the New York inspectors with favor since it will prevent the sale of stocks of low grade walnuts at a price that ruins the sale for the better grades and hurts the demand in general. As one of these importers said to a Canadian Grocer representative, "We would like to warn the retail grocers to be careful to examine a fair sample of walnuts before they place their orders for the Christmas trade. There is sure to be an effort to unload in Canada walnuts that have been turned down in New York."

A Further Discussion of Investment

Rate of Interest is of Slight Importance, Compared With the More Vital Element, That of the Safety of the Principal—Obtain Investments of the Highest Grade

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

COMMENTING on my article of a few weeks since on accumulating a competence through systematically putting aside a given sum each month, one brings forward an argument for building and loan associations. He shows how solid they are as a rule, and what excellent records they have made. He proceeds to indicate how much better seven or eight per cent. is than my six per cent.

Let me say, first, that the rate of interest is of comparatively slight importance. The vital element is safety of principal. The keystone to the entire structure is that there shall be no loss that is humanly preventable. Given such security and the habit of saving and rate of interest can next be considered. It merits careful, thoughtful consideration. Money at six per cent. compound interest will double in 11 years 265 days. At seven per cent. compound, it will double in 10 years 27 days. Hence, the rate of interest surely counts.

But who would care to risk the principal for the sake of doubling his money in slightly over ten years if he may be much more certain to play safe by waiting two more years?

Next, there is no such thing as an absolutely secure investment. There also is no such thing as a clock or watch that will keep perfect time. But we know that if we go to makers of good watches we can get a time piece that will keep time that seems perfect, that is in every way perfectly satisfactory and reliable. So also may we go to high grade, reliable people who have made a life work of investment and from them—provided we are willing to be guided to our own good—can obtain investments of the highest grade and greatest known stability.

Building and Loan Associations Often Good

Now, it is true that any number of building and loan associations have made excellent records. They are to be found in practically every community—and it is well to invest in your community to a very great extent. You can find instances everywhere of men who have invested at home and become rich. Unfortunately, also, you can find just such men who have kept all their eggs in one basket, have gone on for years in apparent prosperity, who then have been wiped out by some unforeseen accident or disaster.

Possible instances may be illustrated this way:

A certain city has gas works, electric light plants, business blocks—a flourishing, apparently stable city. But it was damaged very terribly by flood in 1921. Bondholders in the public works may have suffered. Holders of securities based on other local enterprises may have had to forego interest and perhaps suffer some depreciation or loss.

Now, I do not know that anybody suffered in the way I indicate. The strong probability is that many did suffer. Anybody who had invested his entire resources in certain utilities ran the risk of being sadly embarrassed, worried, of going without interest, perhaps of sustaining serious loss.

Maybe you will think of the conflagrations of other places, or of the "shakes" of the South.—"O, yes," you say: "I'd want to keep out of earthquake regions!"

The Safeguard of Diversification

Now, none of those things may happen to you. Neither may you ever have a fire. Yet you would not think of cancelling your fire insurance.

So, to render security doubly, trebly secure, to safeguard you on every hand in every possible way, the good bond houses of the country have long practised diversification in investment. The best-known securities are obtained—then your investment is divided up among many of them, covering widely remote territories.

A man whose fund of, say, $5,000, is subdivided up so he has $500 in each of ten high-grade securities is, humanly speaking, safe. And remember that while money at eight per cent., compounded semi-annually, will double in a little less than nine years—provided it is not lost!—those figures will mean nothing to you but bitterness if it is lost through too eager seeking for high rates.

So let us assume that a man has $5,000 in nine good bond securities mentioned.

Then assume that any of those bonds is temporarily out of business because of some disaster, all of his capital subject to question is $500, or ten per cent. of it! He need not lose a wink of sleep. Even assuming that the $500 is lost—which, for reasons I shall give, is unlikely—his income from the $4,500 will make it up in less than two years.

But it is not likely to be lost because the minute anything goes wrong with a security sponsored by a high-grade bond house, that house immediately takes steps so to handle the property that it may be saved to the investors. As trustee under the mortgage such a house has rights which enable it to safeguard its investors in many ways not available to you in most cases and seldom practical in any case because you cannot afford the time nor have you the facilities or knowledge to do it.

Why Learn By Experience?

Experienced investors know these things. The trouble with most of us is that we are not satisfied to learn by their experience. We like to burn our own fingers first: that seems to be the only way we can be satisfied. Then, perhaps a bit sadly, we turn into the road of conservative accumulation under the guidance of experts who were right there, eager to serve our interests, all the time.

Because those bankers make an exhaustive and continuing study of investment, they acquire great skill in judging of their soundness. One of the chief points about anything is management. The bond houses can and do investigate the personnel of all managements before they lend on any projects. They can do this in their regular work, but you and I could not do it at all.

Perhaps I have succeeded in indicating what I mean when I say, as I have said many times, that the buyer of sound bonds has the biggest men in the country working for him. He has. He is the man for whom the big public utilities earn and pay dividends.

But those of whom I speak are those who buy their securities through bond bankers of established record and unsullied reputation, who seek security as the prime consideration and are content to proceed along the conservative road toward solid accumulation.

And again I say: If in doubt, ask me!

Problem in Simple Arithmetic

A West Coast grocer writes me that he did a business of $33,675.92 last year at a cost of $3,376.15 and wants to know the percentage.

That is not very complicated. If the expense had been $3,366, ten dollars less than it was, the ratio would have been just inside of ten per cent. As it stands, obviously therefore, it is just over ten per cent.

Divide 3,376.15 by 336759 and you will get 10025 and a remainder. Point that off and you will have 10.025 plus.

Canning Industry in Europe is Growing

World War Taught European People Much About Canned Foods —Industry in France and Italy is Thriving—Latter Country is Specializing in Canned Vegetables, and is Insisting on Strict Grading of the Vegetables

EUROPE is fully a generation behind the United States in the use of canned vegetables, according to the United States Department of Trade and Commerce. This fact is accounted for largely through fixed dietary habits and a prejudice in some quarters against the consumption of tinned foods which existed up to the outbreak of the war. This prejudice has been considerably worn down through the wide war-time distribution of canned milk and meats.

Educational Advertising Needed

Certain vegetables, such as corn on the cob and sweet potatoes, which are popular in Canada are unappreciated in many parts of Europe. In Northern Europe white potatoes, cauliflower and cabbage are the three staple vegetables. The tomato has long been a standby in Italy, since it provides the sauce for the dish around which the domestic life pivots, namely, macaroni. This vegetable is rapidly coming into increased favor in England and although climatic conditions are against its cultivation as a field crop, it is being grown under glass successfully, probably not less than 25,000 acres being devoted to this purpose. The consumption of tomatoes is making some headway in Germany where until recently this food product has been poorly esteemed. France occupies an intermediate position between England and Italy regard to the tomato. The consumption of the vegetable is rapidly increasing, and excellent tomatoes may be raised out of doors particularly in Southern France. One may form the general estimate of the chances for the exportation of canned vegetables to Europe by taking them up in detail, eliminating the items in which our own canned vegetables have something less than a fighting chance.

Do Not Like Sweet Corn

It may not be worth while to advertise the merits of a preserved vegetable among a people which dislike it in a raw state, and a good deal of confidence would be required to undertake a pioneer effort to introduce canned corn in Northern Europe, as these populations have no liking for sweet corn in its fresh state. Even in Italy where corn is produced on a rather broad scale, the grain is ground into meal and is so eaten by the native population. In Europe, north of the Alps, corn in any form is considered hardly fit for human consumption, being imported principally for animal feed and for use in beer and distilling industries.

The same thing is true of sweet potatoes. In one small district in Italy, near the mouth of the River Po, sweet potatoes are raised successfully, but no where in all Europe does this vegetable form an important item in popular diet. The sweet potato would undoubtedly flourish in Southern Italy and would form a cheap and satisfying diet dish for the population of that region, but the flaw in the argument is that the Italians do not like sweet potatoes. This would seem peculiar when one considers the enormous food values derived from corn and sweet potatoes in Egypt and in our own country. It is a circumstance worth noting that fresh sweet potatoes imported from the United States are beginning to have a good demand in London, but the demand is traceable for the most part to the big hotels which seek to cater to the food fancies of the tourists.

Italy Now Canning Peas

Spain, Italy and France all go in for raising early spring peas and the small tender green peas packed in France have a world wide reputation. Italy, which for some years has been shipping raw peas across the border to be packed in French factories is now undertaking to compete with France in the canned peas business. This year in particular, this Italian industry has received a boost by the fact that in many districts of France the pea crop has been a failure. It is without a doubt a big potential market for the best quality peas such as are now being packed in France and Italy. The Canadian packer of canned peas has to meet quality competition therefore in the British market. This is being done to considerable extent. Canned peas are frequently bought on color and the Canadian packers are not permitted to use the iron chemical so freely used in France.

A Case of Habit

Lima beans are freely raised in Europe, but the chances for building up a trade in canned stocks are not good unless there is a stiff grading and the delicate green young beans separated from the hard matured stock. The European farmer allows such lima beans as are not put on the market in their tender state, to grow hard in the pod and when harvested are kept for cooking during the winter months. It is manifest that the European householder would see no point in importing hard mature lima beans put up in a can when he has quite a stock of dried beans hanging in a sack from the ceiling in his kitchen.

Italians Packing String Beans

The observations made on green peas and lima beans hold true of string beans. The European consumer has no use for over-grown string beans. The Italians are making quite a success of canning string beans grown on the volcanic soil around the base of Mount Vesuvius, and this success pivots on the fact that great care is exercised in selecting young, tender and delicate stock for processing. Already these canned string beans have found their way to the Canadian market and are competing with our own pack. One of the secrets of their ability to find a demand in Canada in competition with our own pack is that the grading is particularly strict and the goods are packed in a most scientific manner. The large wax beans of this country are little known in Europe and will have to be introduced, but here again the pioneer would be confronted with the confirmed dietary habits.

War Helped Canadian Canned Goods

Canadian pork and beans, widely distributed throughout the allied countries during the war, found ready appreciation. In other words, the groundwork of a popular demand has already been built. With the exception of the British, Dutch, German and Scandinavians, Europeans are, perforce, more vegetarian in their habits than Canadians. They cannot afford meats, which, in such countries as Spain and Italy, are considered by the poorest class a luxury to be enjoyed only on festivals and other special occasions. These great populations, living precariously on a narrow margin of subsistence, are accustomed to eke out their vegetable diet with a bit of cheese or salt pork. this forming the hub of the thick vegetable soup which is the dietary mainstay of countless European households. The combination of pork and beans finds a popular response therefore, and this trade ought to be capable of a good deal of expansion.

Asparagus in London

White asparagus tips, as put up principally by the American canners, occupy a position of undisputed superiority and sell readily as a luxury article in the principal European markets, particularly in London. This is one item in canned vegetable trade in which United States' experts are limited by lack of produc-

At Cross Purposes

"YOU CAN'T run with the hare, and hunt with the hounds" is an old, old saying, full of meaning and emphasizing the truth that you cannot serve two purposes, diametrically opposed to each other.

However it would appear that The Toronto Globe is attempting this generally accepted impossible task, and is endeavoring to serve its subscribers, by devoting a special page periodically to advertising, informing the people in outside cities, towns and villages of the splendid advantages to be gained through shopping by mail. At the same time, through the medium of the Retail Merchants' Globe, circulating as it does among retail merchants in these same small towns and villages, they are telling them how to build up their business and increase sales.

It must be apparent to the average retailer that The Globe in building up a mail order business, is taking trade that rightly belongs to the small town merchant, inviting their subscribers to give it to the big city retailer. Their mail order service and their retail merchants' service are entirely opposed, and the truth of the adage at the beginning of this little article is at once impressive.

The Worthless Cheque

WITHIN THE past few weeks a number of reports have come to light where unsuspecting grocers have been the victims of persons passing worthless cheques. The practice, it is stated, has usually been perpetrated on Saturday afternoons after the banks have been closed, and when the grocer cannot get in touch with the bank to find out if the account is good. However in a number of instances the cheques have been offered as having been given the payee in lieu of wages, and have been endorsed with apparently reputable signatures, under which has frequently been marked, "in trust—wages account." The amounts have ranged from $25 to $50.

The retailer and particularly the grocer who perhaps is in closer touch with the wage earner than any other merchant, should at all times be assured of its worth before accepting any cheque. If it is not possible for him to get in touch with the bank, and his confidence in the person tendering the cheque is not sufficiently well established to warrant his acceptance of the same, he should without hesitation refuse it.

"Selling Their Business"

THE GROCER must realize that if he is to remain in business he must bestir himself, and strive through service and better merchandising to meet the competition of chain stores, towards which he has heretofore adopted sometimes a complaining and complacent attitude.

The retailer should be the most concerned about his future and should be prepared to exert the greatest effort in his own defense. He is the pivot and if he refuses to work with all the spokes, there is no chance of accomplishing anything in his behalf. Too many have been prone to stand aside in the face of what they declare is unfair competition, and have done little to meet it.

From time to time Canadian Grocer has told how merchants in various parts of the country are successfully meeting this competition. They are telling people about their business and what they do for them. They are in other words "selling their business" to the public just as the chain stores have been doing right along. They are advertising their stores, not alone through the use of newspaper space, but through the use of attractive window displays with a real selling value, through good service, and what is most important because of selling only top quality goods.

Replacement the Proper Basis

A. C. Pearson, vice-president of Dry Goods Economist, in an address at the New York Advertising Club recently on the "Tariff and Advertising," made some interesting remarks on selling at replacement prices, says Printers' Ink.

This old war-horse, "Replacement values," is back with us again. During the war and the hectic period following it, it kicked up an enormous rumpus in the business world. Whether to sell at cost price or replacement value was one of the great cries of the hour.

At first the practice of basing the selling price on what it cost to replace the merchandise was not very extensively followed, but along toward the end of the inflationary period the practice became very common. In fact nearly everyone was doing it. But the custom never met with popular favor. The merchant who took advantage of a producer's replacement value on making a price was dubbed a profiteer. In many governmental quarters the custom was severely frowned upon. It was reasoned that a merchant should be satisfied to take his regular profit on his cost price and not also take the speculative profit which he won through the advancing market.

This question was being argued fiercely when the tide turned. Let it be said to the embarrassment of certain merchants, that when the market began to recede they reversed their former practice. They then started in to base their prices on cost value rather than replacement value. But they could not resist the tide. Eventually they had to yield, taking the losses on their investments, just as everyone else did.

It was these very losses, paradoxical as it may seem, that demonstrated the justice of replacement selling. If a merchant must take his losses when the market drops, it is only logical that he should take his profits when the market advances in his favor. That was the point that Mr. Pearson made and no reasonable person can deny the soundness of his contention. With prices advancing again, through the influence of the tariff, it is only right, Mr. Pearson said, that sellers take advantage of their replacement profits.

There is only one word of caution to add. Manufacturers should not allow their customers to speculate through overbuying with the hope of realizing extra replacement profits. In 1920 and 1921 that is the one thing that caused such huge inventory losses. Many had been speculating on the advancing market. When they did that they stopped merchandising and started to make their profits through speculation.

Give a thought to profits unless you want to stand losses.

Make your store inviting and the trade will not refuse your invitation to do business over your counters.

Send Us Your Problems

MANY complimentary references have been made to the Annual Fall, Christmas and Winter Issue of Canadian Grocer, Nov. 3, by the trade in all parts of Canada. These are much appreciated; but we would like to receive suggestions at all times for the betterment of our service to the subscribers. Don't hesitate to write the Editor at any time with your ideas. The paper is yours. We want to give our readers what will be most advantageous to them. One subscriber for instance requests us to suggest to him a Christmas advertisement. This is being done. Another wants information on the government ruling re extracts; a third on whether he should cancel deliveries and sell "cash and carry," etc., etc. Send along your own problems.

Following are extracts from a few of the letters we received about the Fall Number:—

Ontario

Another delay has occurred in the Kellogg cornflake appeal case and latest information is that it will come up about the middle of December.

W. C. Miller, Ontario secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, addressed a large gathering of retail merchants, at a banquet in Kincardine on Thursday night of this week.

A. F. Choate, general merchant, Warsaw, Ont., Peterborough County, has been a business visitor in Toronto this week. The live stock show at the Exhibition grounds was one of the attractions for him.

Charles Henry Gill, for 24 years clerk of Toronto Township, and postmaster and general merchant at Dixie for the past 36 years, passed away a few days ago. He was 61 years of age and is survived by his wife and one son and one brother.

Henry Azmier, grocer in Ottawa, was held up by three bandits who entered his store on a Saturday night recently, and compelled him to hand over $70 in bills and some silver. They then made their escape in a seven-passenger automobile in sight of several persons who had been attracted to the scene by the grocer's call for help.

HALIFAX GROCER SHOT BY BURGLAR IS DEAD

Halifax, Nov. 20.—Leslie A. Corkum, grocer on Spring Garden road, who was accosted by an unknown man, as he was about to close his store for the night, passed away as a result of wounds inflicted when shot by his assailant. Several suspects have been arrested by the police, but a murder charge has not been preferred against any of them.

Bauld Bros. Retire From Wholesale Business in Halifax

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 20.—The announcement was made by Henry Bauld of the firm of Bauld Bros., wholesale grocers, at a meeting of the Nova Scotia Wholesale Grocers' Guild, held at the Board of Trade the other night, of the firm's retirement from the association, which necessitated also his resigning from his office as vice-president of the organization. Mr. Bauld announced that his firm was retiring from the wholesale grocery business to enter the grocery specialty line, and expressed his regret at severing his connections with the Guild.

J. F. TAYLOR
of the E. B. Eddy Company, Hull, Que., who has recently been appointed general sales manager of the company.

The firm of Bauld Bros. is one of the oldest established and best known firms in Canada, having been founded about one hundred and thirty years ago, and has always been in the foremost ranks among wholesale grocery establishments. Mr. Bauld, the head of the firm, has been for many years an active member of the Nova Scotia Grocers' Guild, having served in the capacity of vice-president for a number of years past. He was also a member of the executive of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association.

S. O. Hogg, of the firm of A. and N. Smith, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Bauld's retirement. A resolution of regret was passed at the withdrawal of the firm and various members of the organization voiced their regrets at severing their relations with one who had been so long a member of the association.

Is Now General Sales Manager of the E. B. Eddy Company

Hull, Que., Nov. 20.—John E. Taylor, who for the past ten years has been secretary-treasurer of the E. B. Eddy Company, here, has recently been appointed general sales-manager of the company. Mr. Taylor has been forty-one years with the E. B. Eddy Company, starting at the age of nine years, as a messenger boy. Mr. Taylor is a member of Hull City Council, and has the distinction of being the only English speaking representative on the Council.

THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS IS TAKEN FROM CASH DRAWER

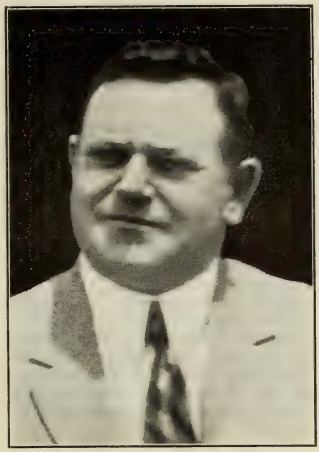
Hamilton, Nov. 21.—The upper James street store of Wm. Carroll was entered the other evening and thirty-five dollars were taken from the cash drawer. The burglar gained entrance to the premises by boring a hole in the back door and removing the lock.

Passing of "Jack" Charles is Mourned by Hundreds in the Trade

THE death of John W. Charles, manager of Marland-Woolnough Company, wholesale grocers, Niagara Falls, Ont., was mentioned briefly in last week's issue of Canadian Grocer. His sudden death was a big shock to not only the business community of Niagara Falls, but to the Ontario grocery trade and to many firms in the other provinces as well as in the United States.

Mr. Charles went to the Falls almost four years ago to take over the management of the above mentioned firm. Since that time he had become one of the leading figures in the community life as well as in the business life of the town. He was president of the Chamber of Commerce, and interested in everything that had any application to the building up of the community.

Members of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association who attended the annual meeting at the Falls last June, will remember with a great deal of pride, how Jack Charles had arranged for their comfort and entertainment so splendidly that his work, which was done practically alone, was commended by all the officials present.



Twenty Years on the Road

It was a good many years ago when Mr. Charles joined the staff of H. P. Eckardt & Company, wholesale grocers of Toronto—about 24 to be more exact. He traveled for that firm in Ontario for 20 years so that he was familiar with many retailers throughout the province. Not only that, but they all liked him for his sunny smile and amiable disposition. Always bright, cheery and optimistic, his was a welcome figure in the store of every customer. When he left H. P. Eckardt & Company at the end of 1918 he was tendered a banquet and was presented with a gold watch by Mr. Eckardt.

Director of Travelers' Association

He was for many years a member, and at one time president, of the Drummers' Snack Club which picnics each year at Georgetown, Ont., and formerly at Erin, Oakville and Alton. In this as well as in everything else he went into, Mr. Charles always made his presence felt in a way that tended to the betterment of the various entertainments. At one time he was also a director in the Commercial Travelers' Association.

William Charles, with W. G. A. Lambe & Company, manufacturers' agents and brokers on Front Street, Toronto, is a brother and it was from the residence of the latter that the funeral took place on Saturday afternoon last. The large number of friends present, both at the service in Niagara Falls on Thursday night, and Saturday afternoon in Toronto, emphasized strongly the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

THE LATE "JACK" CHARLES

It is interesting to recall that on the night of the dinner tendered Mr. Charles by H. P. Eckardt & Co., the song sheet contained some lines, sung to music, that illustrated briefly and effectively his salesmanship qualities. They run like this:

John sells tons of goods in Brampton;
He's the big noise in Owen Sound.
And he burns things up way up in Shelburne,
And in Guelph the rest don't sell a pound.
And they fall for John in good old Georgetown,
And they fall for him where'er he calls,
And they say he's taken on a new town,
And at last old Niagara Falls.

Letters To The Editor

Sales Tax Amendments

Editor Canadian Grocer:

I noticed some suggestions re Sales Tax amendments in one of your recent issues. I think it is about time the retail merchants of this country got together. If they do not they will soon be working for the manufacturers. Take for instance some of the breakfast foods, we could mention several lines, advertised at fifteen cents per package costing the merchant twelve cents and then they suggest placing a 4½ per cent. tax on the invoice of the retailer.

If the whole tax was placed on the manufacturer, he would add it to the cost of production and the manufacturer could then advertise his goods to the consumer at a retail price which would show the grocer a fair profit. This would induce grocers to handle same and not make the retail merchant the tax collector for the whole country.

Why does the manufacturer keep trying to shift his burdens? We retailers sell the manufactured product in small quantities at a close margin and it is about time we were waking up to these facts. Just look around Mr. Retailer and see who is getting the turkey.

Provincial Officers Address Merchants in Chatham, N.B.

Chatham, N. B., Nov. 20.—A large percentage of the merchants of the town gathered in the town hall the other evening to hear addresses from President R. A. Macaulay of the Retail Merchants' Association of St. John, and Mr. McIntyre, the treasurer.

Mr. Macaulay spoke very interestingly for over half an hour on the causes of business conditions of the day and urged on all merchants retrenchment and lowering of overhead expenses that prices might be reduced to the benefit of the consumer. Mr. McIntyre dwelt on the good effected by the association and the reason for membership in it.

On motion of Mayor Mersereau and ex-Mayor Hickey a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speakers of the evening.

It is expected that the branch in Chatham will be revived as a result of this meeting.

TORONTO GROCERS ENJOY SOCIAL GATHERING

Toronto, Nov. 22 (Special).—Toronto grocers to the number of eighty enjoyed a social gathering on Monday night of this week, the first of the fall and winter season. Progressive euchre was the order of the evening, and a very happy time was the result. Prizes were won as follows:—1st prize, John Mackay, 2nd prize, Donald McLean, 3rd prize, A. W. Johnston, 4th prize, T. A. Russell. The prizes were presented at the conclusion of the contest by Samuel McGiffin. Another social gathering of a similar character will be held early in January.

A. K. Coulter, sales manager, Thomas J. Lipton, Toronto, left on Tuesday night on a business trip to the Coast. He will stop off at Fort William, Winnipeg and other intervening points and expects to be back before Christmas.

Complaint is Made Against German Salt for Curing Meats

There have been a number of complaints in England against the use of German salt for curing meats, etc. A large provision merchant in Manchester says that the increasing use of German rock salt for curing bacon, butter and fish was causing considerable alarm among those who know the possible consequences on the general public.

"There is very good reason for alarm," he said. "German rock salt does not go through a refining process. It is simply ground down, leaving bacterial impurities free to work ruin. Recently this German salt was tried for curing several ship loads of Danish bacon. It was all spoiled, and the loads had to be sunk.

"Hundreds of boxes of Irish bacon and butter have been spoiled in the same way, and many tons of fish.

"The suitability of salt for curing depends on three things—first, its grain and hardness; second, its chemical purity—it should contain not less than ninety-nine per cent. salt and one per cent. calcium and magnesium compounds; and third, it should be free from decaying organisms. German rock-ground salt must contain more than one per cent. of the chemicals because it has not gone through the purifying process to which English salt is submitted.

"It should be remembered that decay starts immediately life becomes extinct in the animal or fish. If the curing salt contain chemical or bacterial impurities which prevent it from exercising its full curative properties, it is inevitable that a degree of decay must ensue. The danger to the health of the people is thus very real."

Heavy Shipments of Canadian Eggs Going to England

Canadian exporters are reported by the Birmingham Post of Oct. 6, 1922, to be planning to ship to Birmingham district and other parts of England a large supply of cold storage eggs in competition with Danish exporters. A fairly good demand for Canadian eggs exists in Birmingham, according to this paper, and at Christmas time Canadian eggs will be selling in England at from 51c to 61c a doz. wholesale. These Canadian exports of eggs will also affect French exporters, who have recently been sending considerable quantities of eggs to England.

This fact has been instrumental in strengthening the domestic market for eggs. While in the past few weeks there has been a rapid advance in the price of new-laid eggs, there has not been much change in the price of cold storage eggs. Prices, however, have now started on the upward climb and with the good demand for Canadian storage eggs in England the price may be expected to advance all the more rapidly as the available supplies for the domestic trade become depleted.

FRUIT PRESERVERS AIM TO STANDARDIZE CONTAINERS

The National Preservers and Fruit Products Association, Washington, D.C., says Printers' Ink, is studying the problem of reducing the number of odd sizes of glasses and jars used by the industry. In a bulletin to the association's members, Daniel R. Forbes, executive secretary, quotes a resolution passed by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, in which the association went on record as in favor of standardized containers and the elimination of odd sizes in glasses and jars. Mr. Forbes stated that he was convinced any effort on the part of the National Preservers and Fruit Products Association to eliminate wasteful, uneconomic and, in some cases, deceptive odd-size packages would receive the fullest co-operation of the bulk of the jobbing trade. Questionnaires have been prepared to ascertain the opinion of members on the subject.

MARLAND WOOLNOUGH LIMITED IS NOW INCORPORATED

Letters patent, under the Ontario Companies Act, have recently been granted Marland Woolnough Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont., for the purpose of carrying on the wholesale and retail business of grocers and grain and provision merchants in all its branches. The new organization takes over and acquires as a going concern all the undertaking, business, property, assets, good-will, and all debts, liabilities and engagements of Marland Woolnough Company. The new company is capitalized at $500,000 divided into 5,000 shares of $100 each.

CANNING INDUSTRY IN EUROPE

tivity rather than by a lack of foreign demand. In the canned goods market Italy is the chief competitor on account of their proximity to the centres of distribution and also on account of their specialization in the packing.

Europeans complain that a can of Canadian tomatoes contains over-much water and the stock undoubtedly suffers in comparison with the firmer and meatier Italian plum tomato, which gets to the consumer in its original shape rather than in a lumpy mass. But the Italian tomato has just as much moisture, only it is canned whole.

Meeting Popular Demand

The United States trade commissioner in Europe, in criticizing the offerings of American canners to the European market, makes some suggestions which should be of value to Canadian canners. His first suggestion is that the demand in Europe be carefully studied and the canned goods be made to suit that demand rather than an attempt made to educate the Europeans, who are conservative in changing their habits of life, to use canned goods that are now packed in this country. In his report he has said in part: "Introductory methods naturally would be concerned first with the fashionable hotel trade, then with advertising, along with the stocking of big chain grocery stores. England and Northern Europe are the best field for pioneer work; Spain is a thin market at best for Italy are competitors rather than customers in the matter of canned vegetables. The expansion of America's canned vegetable trade in Europe must be an evolution when one considers the limitations of buying power and dietary conservatism."

FORT WILLIAM RETAILERS ARE OPPOSED TO RECEIPT TAX

Fort William, Nov. 20.—The Retail Merchants' Association of this place recently placed themselves on record as being opposed to the stamp tax on all receipts of ten dollars and upwards, which it is proposed comes into effect on the first of January next. In a resolution that was unanimously passed this tax was described as a cumbersome and annoying arrangement, detrimental to the best interests of the retailer, and of a credit business. Rather would this branch of the association see an increase in the sales tax, if a new source of revenue must be found.

Quebec Grocers Seek An Increase in Peddlers' Licenses

Quebec, Nov. 20.—Peddlers' licenses in Quebec may be increased from $40 a year to $500 for those who travel afoot and to $1,000 for those who travel with horse and rig. They may be required to take out a license for each judicial district in which they wish to do business, and may have to have a photograph on their license, so they can easily be identified.

A delegation of members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Quebec called upon Hon. Jacob Nicol, the Provincial Treasurer recently and presented a number of suggestions for amendments to the liquor law, and also asked that the increase in peddlers' licenses be applied as stated above.

The delegation asked that grocers be allowed to open their stores for the sale of beer at 8 a. m.; permission to order beer by telephone, and a reduction of the grocers' license from $200 to $50.

WINNIPEG MERCHANTS FINED FOR VIOLATION OF EARLY CLOSING BY-LAW

Winnipeg, Nov. 21 (Special).—Fines totaling $54 were imposed on nine Winnipeg merchants convicted in municipal police court of violation of the early closing by-law, while 67 cases were adjourned for consideration by Magistrate Sir Hugh John Macdonald on plea for leniency entered by R. D. Guy, counsel for the Retail Stores' Association.

Leniency for the 67 merchants who failed to screen off their grocery stock, which is not salable after 6 p. m., from goods which are legally salable after that hour, was requested by counsel for the retailers on the ground that they had not wilfully violated the by-law, and were willing to co-operate with the police in the enforcement of the regulations.

Northwest Travellers' Association Holds Annual Meeting

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.—The annual meeting of the Northwest Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada was held here recently, when J. E. Holland, manager of the J. C. Wilson Co., Ltd., was the unanimous choice for president. Samuel J. Godwin was elected vice-president by acclamation, and Charles Holden was elected treasurer.

The association also went on record as favoring the re-establishment of the Winnipeg exhibition. During a general discussion considerable comment was heard on the hotels of Manitoba. Several members declared that there were a number of so-called hotels that were not fit to live in, though some improvement had been noted in others.

The illness of the president elect, J. E. Holland, was the subject of a resolution of regret.

New Amendment to Food and Drug Act Affects Citrus Fruits

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—(Special).—Recent developments in Western Canada in regard to the status of citrus fruit, provides food for thought for retail grocers throughout the rest of the country. This applies particularly to oranges which have been injured by frost. A very recent amendment, by Order in Council, to the Food and Drugs Act, provides that : "Citrus fruit in which fifteen per cent. or more gives evidence of having been injured by frost, shall be regarded as unsound and inedible."

Taking this as a foundation to work upon, federal inspectors recently entered the premises of a retail grocer in Winnipeg and seized a case of oranges which, upon investigation, were found to be below the standard specified in the regulations. The analysis proved that over fifty per cent. of the oranges in the case showed broken down tissues in more than twenty per cent. of the cross sections. Writing to the authorities in Ottawa, one of the inspectors stated: "The samples taken were of small size. It is in this size that most of the frost effects are most likely to be found."

As the regulations were of such recent date, no action was taken in this particular case, but the federal authorities are doing everything in their power to protect the consumer in this regard.

The trouble lies principally with the source of production. The deterioration is due to the fruit being frozen on the tree, and in the past quite a lot of frost damaged oranges have found their way from the United States into Canada. Efforts are being made by the federal authorities to prevent the importation of this kind of fruit, and in this they have been promised the co-operation of the American Department of Agriculture. The provincial authorities in British Columbia have imposed regulations of their own. They examine all importations of fruit offered for sale in the province. But they do not go so far as to prevent deteriorated fruit finding its way to the other provinces, and it is in this respect that the federal authorities are seeking ways and means of coping with the situation.

"The grocer who finds himself in possession of a consignment of frost damaged oranges," said one of the Ottawa officials to Canadian Grocer, "can protect himself by returning the consignment to the jobber, or at least by endeavouring to have the jobber take them back."

CLERKS' ASSOCIATION WANT TO QUASH COUNCIL'S RESOLUTION

Edmonton, Nov. 20.—The application of the Retail Clerks' Association to quash the resolution of the city council, which suspended the operation of the by-law compelling the city merchants to close one-half day per week was heard recently before Mr. Justice Walsh. The contention raised by the clerks is that council has authority to operate the provincial statute under which the by-law is framed, but not to suspend its working.

Record Loading of Grain Due to Exceptional Weather

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.—Good weather conditions have made possible continuation of the large movement of grain which has been making its way east since the commencement of the crop year. C. P. R. figures showing recent grain having left farmers' hands in those districts served by the eastern division of the road to have totalled 1,805,479 bushels as compared with 943,488 bushels, the figure for the corresponding 24 hours of the previous season. Cars loaded for the same day approached the record figure for this year more nearly than has been the case for some time, the number being recorded as 1,552, and against 608 cars for Nov. 15, 1921, and 1,767 cars, the largest number loaded this year, which is the quotation for Sept. 26.

Canadian National trains have moved during the present crop season more than 12,500,000 bushels of grain in excess of the amount removed in the corresponding period of the 1921 crop season, and about 400 cars more were loaded Wednesday than on the same date of last year. Tuesday's marketings totalled 1,244,000 bushels, loadings were 1,090 cars and 1,425,000 bushels, with 25,294,000 bushels in store. Loadings for the season to date were 60,865 cars and 77,661,000 bushels. On the corresponding day last year there were marketed 914,000 bushels, loaded 697 cars and 907,000 bushels, with 13,470,000 bushels in store. For the season's corresponding period there were loaded 50,746 cars and 65,072,000 bushels.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

TRADING in wholesale circles in preparation for the Christmas trade is shaping up well and is reported as greater than a year ago. In staple grocery lines, although there is a much better feeling and the volume of business passing is larger, there does not appear to be a great deal of purchasing of futures; the bulk of the business being based on immediate requirements.

The refined sugar situation remains about the same as a week ago, prices are unchanged but apparently merchants, both retail and wholesale, are fairly well supplied as there does not appear to be a great deal of business passing from first hands and most of the business in certain sections is being done at a shade below refiners' official lists. Cables indicate a stronger market for raw sugar, buyers offering 3¾c but sales ideas are on the basis of 3⅞c c. & f. New York and it is understood that some business transpired at 3 13-16c but holders are now firm at the higher figure. New crop Cuban sugar is offered at 3¼c f.o.b. Cuba. Weather in Cuba for the growing of the new crop continues fair. At the present time no central factories are operating but are expected to commence shortly. The full position of the raw sugar market is very strong. An important factor in the situation being the small supply on hand which is only 191,000 tons as compared with 1,684,000 tons at this time last year.

The situation in flour is strong with a further advance announced in quotations. Cereals are firm with strength particularly in rolled oats and corn products. The bean market is firm and advancing. In dried fruits there is little actual change as compared with a week ago but the future for currants indicates a weakness after the turn of the new year. Almonds and walnuts are steady at unchanged quotations but peanuts continue strong under some advances. Other grocery commodities are generally held firm and show practically no change from last week.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—The approach of Christmas has had a noticeable effect upon the grocery trade already. Buying shows a general improvement and prices are firmer. The feature of the market is the gradual disappearance of price cutting. The sugar market is strong with no signs of the break that the wholesale trade felt was coming in December. New York is firm with a slight advance on raws. The demand for syrups shows improvement. There is a small advance in rolled oats and the whole cereal market shows improvement. Flour is also advanced in price. The rice market is steady with some improvement in buying. Package cereals are a good buy in view of the strength of the cereal market. Self-raising flour is advanced on account of the higher values of wheat flour. Canned goods are firm with strength in canned tomatoes. The nut market is quiet but with more strength in walnuts. Buying for Christmas has not yet shown itself in dried fruits. When the demand comes, as it will with a rush, a much stronger market may be expected. In the meantime an easier feeling is noted in currants and evaporated apples. Oranges are easy and a better supply of lemons is on the market. Imported and hot house vegetables are in demand. Hot house tomatoes are a little easier in price. The tea market is in a strong position. There is no change in coffee.

COFFEE MARKET STEADY

ROLLED OATS ADVANCED

Montreal.

CEREALS.—Millers have advanced prices on rolled oats in bulk by 10c. a bag. The wholesale price now varies between $3.20 and $3.35 a bag, with a strong market. White beans are also slightly advanced and promise to be scarce. The whole cereal market is stronger, some lines through sympathy with the oat market but nevertheless the improvement is noticeable.

CANNED GOODS FIRM

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The market for canned goods stands firm with a good trade passing. List prices are well maintained and in some lines particular strength is noted. Canned tomatoes promise a strong future. The wholesalers predict that there will be a higher price quoted and probably a shortage since the demand has been heavy and offerings are being quickly cleaned up. Some wholesalers have advanced their prices on whole and sliced beets, 2s, making the price $2.40 a doz.

SUGAR MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Local wholesalers frankly admit that they are surprised the way the sugar market is holding up. Prices in New York show a slight advance in raws and in general the situation is more healthy. The fact that the wholesale trade is buying in small lots has practically cut out the price cutting that has upset markets in past months. While the market shows a stronger tone, buying is limited to small quantities. An important feature in the sugar market is the fact that at the present time approximately only one hundred thousand tons of old crop raws are held as compared with one million tons at this time last year and also that these raws are held in fairly strong hands.

TEA FUTURES STRONG

Montreal.

TEAS.—The tea market maintains its strong position but without any change in wholesale prices. Tea merchants are firm in the belief that black teas have not yet reached their peak in values and that another advance must come. The keen competition for business is the only thing that stands in the way of an advance. Primary markets are gaining points and present imports costs warrant higher quotations. Japan teas hold a firm position.

STRONGER WALNUT MARKET

Montreal.

NUTS.—Owing to the poor quality of the early shipments of the new crop of walnuts the supply is not what it was expected to be and prices have suddenly firmed up. Higher prices may be expected for next month since the demand for the Christmas trade has not yet been met and the late call for deliveries will add much strength to the market. Peanuts have scored a further advance.

EASIER CURRANT MARKET

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Owing to the quiet state of the market there is an easier tone to currants. Dried apples are easy and lower prices are expected. Raisins are steady. Local importers state that the trade has not yet been supplied for the Christmas season and that the demand is sure to come with a rush causing sudden strength and owing to the demand for immediate deliveries prices will undoubtedly be somewhat higher for the rush service. Doubtful reports about the fig crop come from Smyrna. It was stated that about 35 per cent. of the crop would be salvaged but it has since been found that the fruit is over-ripe for packing.

LEMONS EASIER

Montreal.

FRUIT.—There is little change in the fruit market. Oranges are easy in price. There is a little better supply of lemons and prices are easing off. Messina lemons are now quoted from $8.00 to $10.00 a box. Boxed apples are now in demand and they are quoted at from $2.75 to $3. The quality of Florida grapefruit is improved but prices are steady.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Business in wholesale circles is reported as showing some improvement and buying for the Christmas trade is commencing. Strength continues in most grocery commodities but price changes are not numerous this week. Hand picked beans are quoted at a higher figure while rolled oats and other cereals are strong. Flour and millfeeds are also advanced. Canned goods are moving in good volume at fairly steady quotations. The situation in currants is strong with a scarcity of spot supplies reported. New crop California prunes have arrived also mat figs. Peanuts continue to indicate strength under an advance, but other nuts show little change as compared with a week ago. Sugar is unchanged but refiners' quotations are purely nominal as most wholesalers are quoting below list prices. Teas continue in a strong position and there are indications for further advances.

HAND-PICKED BEANS HIGHER

Toronto

BEANS. — Wholesalers are quoting Canadian hand-picked beans at a higher price of $3.65 per bushel in bag lots; bushel lots are 10c higher and in smaller lots at 7¼c per lb. One-pound pickers are quoted at $3.25 per bushel.

CEREALS IN STRONG POSITION

Toronto

CEREALS.—The entire list of cereals continues to present a strong situation. This is especially noticeable in oat and corn products. In some quarters rolled oats are quoted at $3.30 while golden cornmeal is quoted at $2.85 to $3. Rolled wheat, barrels, is quoted at $5.75 and kegs of 50 lbs. at $3.30. Marrowfat blue peas are offered at 5¾c per lb., and small blue peas at 6½c per lb. in bag lots, while smaller quantities are ½c to ¾c per lb. higher.

SPOT CURRANTS SCARCE

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Supplies on spot of currants are none too plentiful, in fact there appears to be a scarcity at the moment; prices, too, are firmer with an advance of one cent per pound in some quarters. Although currants are strong at the present time, there is a tendency for an easier market after the turn of the New Year. Raisins are fairly steady at unchanged quotations. New crop Santa Clara prunes are expected in a few days and are quoted as follows: 20/30's, 34½c; 30/40's, 20c; 40/50's, 17½c; 50/60's, 15½c, and 60/70's, 14½c per lb. Figs continue firm. Spanish layers are offered as follows: 7 crown layers, 10's, 19½c; 9 crown, Sublime, 10's, 22½c and 7 crown Excelsior pulled, 19½c per lb. Mat figs are quoted at 7½c per lb., and Lepe fancy in 22-lb. boxes at 9¾c per lb.

PEANUTS ARE HIGHER

Toronto

NUTS.—The strength in peanuts is more pronounced this week with wholesalers advancing prices around 1½c per lb. Green peanuts in the shell are quoted at 13½c and roasted at 16½c per lb. Quotations on shelled peanuts are unchanged. Shelled filberts are quoted a shade lower at 32c to 35c and Manchurian shelled walnuts are also slightly easier at 48c to 50c per lb. New crop shelled Bordeaux walnuts are expected to arrive within the next few days and are offered at 55c to 58c per lb.

SECOND-HAND SUGAR MOVING

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Prices of refined sugar continue unchanged at $8.09 for standard granulated, delivered Toronto. This price, however, can be considered purely nominal as wholesalers' quotations are generally 25c per cwt. below list prices. Most of the business transpiring is said to be of a second-hand nature and only a small movement is reported from the refineries.

SHORTAGE IN TEAS

Toronto.

TEAS.—There appears to be an active local movement in teas of all descriptions. It is said that this is mostly due to the fact that importers and wholesalers are selling teas at prices considerably below the cost of replacement. Another factor in the situation is that there is a marked scarcity owing to the short crops. It is estimated that the production this year is 75,000,000 lbs. less than consumption. Advices from Calcutta indicate that the Indian season is rapidly nearing a close and that after the first of next month desirable teas will be practically cleaned up.

POTATOES CONTINUE EASY

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—The potato situation shows little change. Dealers claim that the open weather is having something to do with the easy feeling prevailing and look for no immediate change unless the weather should become stormy. Price f.o.b. track is around 60c per bag and dealers' prices to the retail trade from 75c to 85c. Canadian onions are unchanged while Spanish are quoted a shade higher at $4.75 per large case. Hothouse cucumbers are quoted at $4 per doz.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—Few changes are reported in the market for groceries this week. Fine weather has been adverse to improve business conditions and once cold weather sets in a steady demand is expected by the trade. Collections are showing a slight improvement. The coffee market at primary points continues to fluctuate. Canned goods show no change and the trade reports that canned corn, tomatoes and peas are in fair demand. There is an advancing tendency to the dried fruit market. Prunes in California are firmly held with some sizes unobtainable. Bulk rolled oats maintain a firm tone and indications point to higher prices. New crop Valencia almonds and French shelled walnuts are arriving on the market in time for the Christmas trade. Sugar is ruling steady and syrups are showing a stronger tone. Tea on primary markets is steadily advancing. There is a seasonable demand for fruits and vegetables.

CANNED GOODS UNCHANGED

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—There is practically no change in the canned goods market. Wholesalers report that canned vegetables such as corn, tomatoes and peas are in fair demand. Canned fruits are quiet as conservative buying on the part of merchants is affecting sales, but with fresh fruits off the market and colder weather sales are expected to show an improvement. There is a fair demand for all lines of canned fish and with primary market conditions showing no change.

STRONG TONE TO DRIED FRUITS

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—The dried fruit market maintains a firm tone. Apricots on primary markets have advanced 2c per lb. Prunes in California are firmly held and sizes 60 to 70s and smaller are reported scarce. Raisins are maintaining their usual strength. General indications are that present prices will be fully maintained and in fact are expected to go higher. There is a good demand for Turkish Sultana raisins and selected four crown in 30 lb. boxes are quoted at 25c per lb. with choice three crown ranging at 23c per lb.

ROLLED OATS FIRM

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—The bulk rolled oat market maintains a firm tone and indications point to higher prices. Beans show a stiffening tendency on primary markets, and the trade reports that the heavy fall demand has not yet started. Cornmeal is slightly easier with 98 lb. bags quoted at $2.30. There is a good inquiry for most lines of package cereals. Prices on these lines as in the case of bulk cereals are strong and the tendency is towards higher levels.

LAURENTIAN GINGER ALE AND SPRING WATER CO. TAKE OVER NEW PLANT

Montreal, Nov. 22 (Special).—The Laurentian Ginger Ale and Spring Water Co., of Montreal, have taken over the Laurentian baths that occupy the site next to their present plant and within the next month they expect to move into their new plant. The Laurentian Bath, which was operated for the last 29 years by the late Robt. White, has been closed and alterations are now being made to transform it into a bottling plant.

At a certain Columbus wholesale produce house, Jim, colored driver of one of the trucks, recently approached the manager with the request that he be given all the C. O. D. deliveries . When asked why he wanted this done, Jim delivered a monologue something after this fashion:

"When I gets de C. O. D.'s I says to 'em, 'Bounce de cash, bounce de cash!' and if dey don't bounce it I carts de bananas home agin. Dere's whar I has de upper hand an' gits to show mah authority." And, after a little reflection he continued, "Dat's de only place whar I shows mah authority."

Did You Ever Stop to Think---?

By E. R. Waite

THAT good roads are essential to the development of any community.

THAT a growing community must have good roads radiating in every direction or lapse back to where it was in the beginning.

THAT in many sections, because of poor roads the rural sections are practically isolated from their natural trading points.

THAT many sections stand between good roads and ruin.

THAT good roads mean better farming, better business, better markets, a better relationship between the cities and rural sections, and a growing community.

THAT poor roads hold down production, immigration, development, schools and churches.

THAT in sections where good roads are not first in the thoughts of the business farmers and the city business men, it means that the lack of energy, intelligence, progressiveness and far-sightedness of these men are holding back from the community things that would prove of incalculable benefit to the social and commercial life of a community.

THAT now is the time to boost good roads.

THAT live community builders through cloud and sunshine, depression and prosperity, stand fast in the faith of better things for their community. BOOST GOOD ROADS.

THAT IN SPITE OF THEIR WORK MANY COMMUNITIES HAVE A GROUP OF MEN WHO TRY TO PUT A SPIKE IN THE WORK BEING DONE.

THAT EVERY CITIZEN IS EITHER FOR OR AGAINST HIS COMMUNITY. IF HE IS FOR IT HE SHOULD BOOST IT AND WORK FOR IT!

Want Close Season on Sockeye Salmon for a Period of 5 Years

Royal Commission on Pacific Coast Fisheries Makes Some Important Recommendations—Restrictions on Orientals

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—The Royal Commission on Pacific Coast Fisheries, in its preliminary report, recommends:

(1) Creation of a separate Department of Fisheries, with thorough reorganization of fisheries both in Ottawa and in British Columbia; (2) that fishing licenses issued to Orientals be reduced by 40 per cent. in 1923; (3) close season for sockeye salmon on the Fraser River and its tributaries and all coast water leading to the same for five years, provided Americans do the same on Puget Sound; further, that an international commission be appointed, consisting of representatives of the State of Washington and of the Dominion of Canada, to govern the matter of regulations during the said period. (The last-named recommendation is a majority recommendation of the commission, Commissioner McQuarrie and Commissioner L. H. Martell dissenting).

Naturalizing Orientals

The commission, dealing with Orientals, also recommends that all naturalization papers in British Columbia, in so far as they affect Orientals be called in and revised, and that in future, while it is not desirable to naturalize Orientals, yet if this is done the papers be not granted to them without a photograph first being attached, as well as fingerprints, in accordance with the usual conditions approved by law.

"No Oriental," adds the report, "should receive a return of his naturalization papers unless he complies with the provisions that should be made by the department to protect against wholesale failure."

Additional recommendations of the commission include the appointment of two boards for practical scientific research in regard to fisheries, one to be located on the Atlantic and one on the Pacific coast; that drag and purse seines should not be permitted save where demonstrated to be the only practical effective and reasonably economic method of catching fish, and that, where permitted, only white British subjects and Indians be employed; close season on halibut from November 15 to February 15 in each year; that one or more boats be placed in readiness on the coast, so that they may proceed to the assistance of fishermen in distress.

An International Arrangement

In regard to halibut fishing, the commission criticizes the Department of Marine and Fisheries for "issuing regulations and taking action" after the commission had started work, and the commissioners "cannot but express the opinion that such departmental action was unfortunate, ill-timed and calculated to seriously hamper the commission in its consideration of several matters, notably the halibut situation in its international aspect, and also the reduction of licenses to others than whites and Indians. The commission also deplores the fact that when this commission began its operations any fishery matters in the way of regulations or other matters apart from routine should have been given to the press during the commission's operations."

An additional recommendation is that an international arrangement be made toward the securing of the proposed closed season for halibut in extra-territorial waters, "and we have the assurance of the Washington Fisheries Board that it will render aid toward assisting the said arrangement being arrived at on the part of the United States Federal authorities."

SOCKEYE DEPLETION GRAVE

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 19.—Regulations for the control of fishing for sockeye salmon in the waters of Puget Sound have not been formulated for next year, members of the Washington State Fisheries Board said when informed that a Canadian commission had recommended a five years' prohibition of sockeye fishing in the Fraser River, provided Washington authorities adopted a similar rule for Puget Sound.

The board, it was stated, had not been informed of the findings of the Canadian commission and members declined to comment pending receipt of the full report.

Local fisheries men said to-day that the rapid depletion of the sockeye salmon run through the waters of Puget Sound to the Fraser River had been a source of much concern for several years and that much study had been devoted to plans to rectify the conditions.

Under the State law regulation of fisheries within the waters of Puget Sound lies entirely with the State Fisheries Board.

Necklace Found in Butter

A necklace valued at 20,000,000 crowns, declared to be the property of the royal family of Bulgaria, was recovered in a lump of butter by the police while searching baggage of four merchants, preparing to pass over the border into Czecho-Slovakia.

If the smugglers' story is true, there is more romance attached to these jewels than th emanner of concealment. According to the four prisoners, the necklace was intrusted to them by an agent of the members of the Bulgarian royal family in anticipation of a political uprising, which might force the owners to flee the country.

American Tariff Keeps Canadian Poultry on Home Market

Montreal, Nov. 20. (Special).—At least one good thing for Canada has come out of the Fordney-McCumber tariff. It has brought larger supplies of Canadian raised poultry to the Canadian market with lower prices resulting. The supply is much more plentiful in all sorts, according to local dealers in live and dressed poultry. Owing to the tariff wall recently raised by Americans in the hope of protecting their market from the invasion of foreign goods, the poultry in particular that has been raised in past years to be shipped into the United States must this year find a market in Canada. Both the wholesale and retail dealers in poultry are well pleased with the result.

Carloads From the West

As an instance of this, is the fact that during last week a whole carload of live chickens arrived from Edmonton. This is the first year that live chickens have been brought to Montreal by the carload and the man who received the shipment in Montreal told a Canadian Grocer representative that he and his firm were well pleased with the result. It was brought to Montreal in specially fitted cattle cars, with three decks and equipped with drink and feed troughs. The shipment comprised 8,000 lbs. of birds. The trip only took seven days and the shrinkage, under proper care, was satisfactorily small.

East Shipped West

In speaking of this shipment a local dealer recalled that a few years ago a carload of breeding fowl were shipped to the west in order to stimulate that business and already the result is shown by the shipment of poultry back east to supply the market demand. The west, according to this merchant, has a future in poultry. "There," he said, "they have an abundant supply of rough grains that are splendid for scratch feed for poultry and the climatic conditions are ideal for making it a profitable business. In the past year or two we, in the east, have not seen the development of the poultry business that has occurred in the west, since most of the poultry has found its way into the United States. This year, however, we may expect the west to play an important part in supplying the demand in the eastern market."

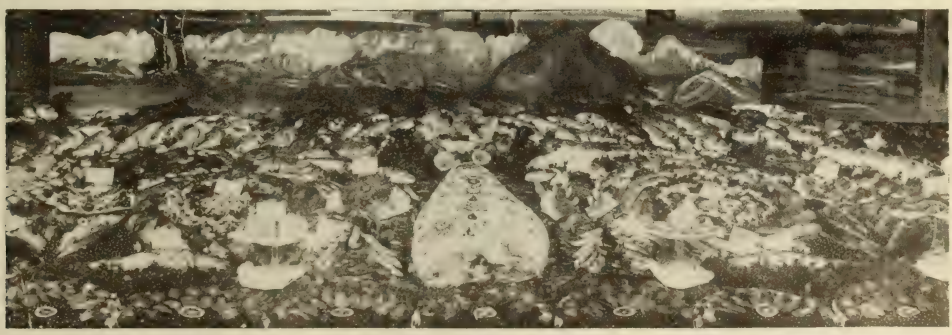
Pleased With Live Shipments

Local poultry dealers are particularly well pleased with the success in shipping live poultry since the birds can be more uniformly dressed and prepared for the market when they are done by comparatively few who make it a business. The dealers also claim that it is more economical to handle them live than dressed. As yet the reclassification of poultry rates has not yet come into force and therefore it has played no part in the general reduction of poultry values.

1922 Salmon Pack Reaches a Total of 1,251,000 Cases

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 22. (Special). —An idea of the total pack of salmon for the season 1922, is given in the following figures: sockeye, 295,000 cases; Red Spring, 26,000 cases; Cohoes, 85,000 cases; pinks, 580,000 cases; chums, 250,000 cases, and sundries 15,000 cases; making a total of 1,251,000 cases.

The pack of pinks was about as large as has ever been packed. A large quantity was sold in France and the Canadian trade took a very large quantity. The pack of chums was also very good considering the scarcity of cans. Stocks of chums are now very small. The pack of cohoes is possibly the smallest that has been packed for a good many years, due chiefly to the scarcity of cans.



The pack of sockeye was a good average, and although the English buyers did not come in with their usual demands, there does not seem to be a very heavy stock on hand, and it is quite likely that the English buyers will continue to purchase as requirements demand, and it is authoritatively stated that by the end of next March, there will be very few British Columbia sockeye to be had.

Determining Ripeness of Fruit According to Sugar Content

Ottawa, Nov. 21 (Special).—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the recently organized Canadian Horticultural Council, a few days ago in Ottawa, a resolution was adopted urging the Dominion government to conduct experiments with a view to arriving at some fixed method for determining the ripeness of fruit according to the sugar content.

This is a matter which considerably affects the retailer, for it is principally aimed at preventing unripe fruit from getting on to the market. An effort has been made in the past by government inspectors to protect both the trade and the public in this respect but no sure formula for determining ripeness has been arrived at to guide them in their efforts.

The necessity for some such method of determining the ripeness of fruit is apparent in the plum and grape growing districts of the Dominion. For instance there is the case of the Niagara white grape, which has been considerably hurt through over-anxiety on the part of the growers to find an early market. It is a well known fact that much difficulty has been experienced lately in marketing and selling these grapes. With the adoption of standard regulations such matters as this will be adjusted, most likely to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—The produce and provision market is without any feature of note this week. Prices are generally steady but with some minor developments. The hog market has strengthened with an advance on light weight bacon hogs but the prices of dressed hogs and cuts of pork are unchanged although firmer. Smoked and cured meats show no change. Cooked meats are quiet. Butter shows weakness and figures for the last six months show that the receipts this year are much over that of last year. The export butter market is quiet. Cheese is strong and receipts are smaller than last year but prices are unchanged. Eggs are firm with further decrease in receipts of new laid. The demand for No. 1 storage is good. Some Chinese eggs have reached this market. Lard and shortening are unchanged. Poultry prices are easy but a slight reaction in turkeys has come and prices are up. Farmers are reported as holding their turkeys for the Christmas market. Haddock is slightly lower in price.

BUTTER MARKET QUIET

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There is an easier feeling in the butter market owing to the falling off in both export and domestic demand. The retail trade is fairly well supplied to meet the immediate requirements and buying is limited to small lots while at the same time receipts are larger than that of the same week of last year and 15,257 packages in excess of those of the period from May 1 to Nov. 19, of last year. For the time being the butter market shows no strength and prices are likely to remain just as they are.

WEAK FUTURE FOR POULTRY

Montreal.

POULTRY.—There has not been any radical change in the poultry market during the past week, except a little stiffening in turkey prices. The market in general is weak for the future on account of the expected shipment of poultry from the west. Poultry dealers, however are pleased with the state of the market since they find a better demand than at the higher level of prices.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Butter and cheese continue to maintain a strong position with dealers' quotations to the retail trade a shade higher than a week ago. The egg market is firm but there is little change in quotations. Strictly new laid eggs are practically unobtainable from wholesale sources. Live hogs although advancing last week are again easier. Shortening is a shade higher while lard is quoted at a slight reduction. Smoked meats are unchanged but barrel meats are quoted higher. Chickens are easier but supplies are not over-abundant.

BUTTER CONTINUES STRONG

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The market continues to hold a strong position with quotations on the better grades advanced one cent bringing the price from 41c to42c. There appears to be considerable second-grade butter which is offered at 36c to 39c per lb.

FIRM EGG MARKET

Toronto.

EGGS.—There is little change in eggs as compared with a week ago. The market holds firm with quotations unchanged. Strictly new-laid eggs are practically unobtainable as far as dealers are concerned but a few make their appearance on the farmers' market. These, however, command a premium, the prices on Saturday last ranging as high as $1 per doz.

HOGS TEND EASIER

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—At the beginning of the week the hog market had decidedly stronger tendencies with sales being made at $11.50 on the fed and watered basis. Packers, however, claimed that this figure was altogether too high and endeavored to break the market. Towards the end of the week they were able to put into effect a lower price and as we go to press prices are ranging around $11.25. Lambs were also lower but in other meats little change is noted as compared with the previous week. About the only change in dressed meats is an advance of one cent per pound on fresh pork cuts.

A Grocer's Courtship

The grocer loved a charming girl,
  As lovely as the day;
He wondered if she'd marry him;
  And say, LET SOAP she may.
Then straightway to her house he went,
  Her lovely face to see,
Exclaiming, "Ah, I know full well
  That CHEESE the girl for me."
The girl was very kind and said
  That she was very glad
To see him there, and then remarked
  What a bad COFFEE had.
She grew to know him—yes, quite well.
  She let him kiss her brow;
But when he spoke of marriage, said,
  "O, do not TEAS me now."

10,000 Canadian Advertisers Invest $7,000,000 Annually in Canadian Trade Papers

There are over 10,000 trade paper advertisers in Canada. They invest $7,000,000 annually in Canadian trade papers.

There may be some advertisers who have allowed the glamour of big consumer circulations to blind them to the concentrated buying power of the average trade paper reader.

The average buying power of a trade paper reader, since he is a merchant and distributor of goods, is a hundred times that of the average family. The buying power of readers is what counts, not their numbers.

An advertising message must get to the right people, in the right way and in the right place, if every dollar is to perform up to 100% of its potentialities, and if advertising is to serve as a scientific sales instrument, rather than as a speculative plaything.

Advertising a food product to the public without first making it well known to the dealer through his trade paper is largely a waste of money. The dealer must first be made acquainted with the merits and selling points of the line before he will stock it and recommend it to his customers.

The most logical and effective way to get adequate distribution for your goods is to advertise them to the distributors, the retail merchants of the country, through the trade papers they read for the very purpose of securing information about goods they buy and sell.

Canadian Grocer, because of its paid circulation amongst the worthwhile grocery merchants throughout Canada, is the best medium to use in securing adequate distribution for any line of goods handled in grocery stores.

RECORD POTATO CROP IN U. S.

According to the official estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture, the potato crop of the United States for this year is 433,905,000 bushels, which is an increase of 97,000,000 over that of last year. Up to the present time the production in Canada is well up to that of last year, although some rot is reported in sections of Ontario, while the New Brunswick yield is only fair. Taking these facts into consideration there does not appear to be any indication that prices will soar this season as it will be remembered that other years large quantities were shipped to the U. S. causing prices here to advance.

"I Want to Buy Eggs According to Grade"

"YES, Mr. Brown, I think you should sell graded eggs. Other grocers do. Eggs for export are graded. Why can't you sell your eggs that way? I want to buy eggs according to grade."

"What is the difference, Mrs. Holmes? I get all my eggs fresh from the country."

"They may be fresh from the country, but sometimes I get one or two out of a dozen that are anything but fresh when they get to me. Why don't you sell graded eggs?"

"Well, I have never thought about it. I sell them just as I get them. I guess I could handle them—if there was any demand for graded eggs."

"Some of my friends have been buying eggs according to grade for a long time, Mr. Brown. Many dealers grade their eggs now. If you want to hold your customers you should do the same. It is only fair. Unless eggs are sold according to standard grades it is impossible to know what one is getting."

"Well, Mrs. Holmes, I'll buy some eggs according to grade, and sell them that way."

"Thank you, Mr. Brown; I think you'll be glad I suggested the matter to you. It is a real need."

Note to the Public

"No person shall ship eggs or cause eggs to be shipped or delivered or displayed for sale in cases or containers which are marked or labelled with the name of any class and grade specified in these regulations, unless the quality and weight of the eggs contained therein is equal to or better than such class and grade."

REDHEAD MATCHES

From your customers' standpoint matches are important. They influence their judgment as to the quality of all goods sold at your store. And your customers will tell you that REDHEADS are "better matches."

REDHEADS hold their heads and burn more freely because they are square; and being made of tough wood they do not split. Each box lasts longer because each match is a light. They are "better matches."

Quaker Talks

How Much Do You Owe Your Bank?

How much money do you owe your Bank or the Houses from whom you buy?

What have you got this money invested in?

Is it tied up in a lot of "shelf clingers" that refuse to move from your store?

Are you paying interest on borrowed money because you cannot get your money out of goods you were persuaded to buy?

Popular goods of quality with advertising behind them come into your store and quickly go out. For instance, the products of the Quaker Mills. They pay you a generous margin—they sell quickly—you turn your money over many times.

The public accept the package with the Quaker trade-mark—they look for it—because of its reputation. They know that the Quaker stands for the very highest quality in cereals.

You take no chance with Quaker products; you are assured of maximum profits and absolutely satisfied customers.

There's a Quaker cereal product for almost every cereal need;

Quaker Oats,
Tillson's Aluminum Oats,
Quaker Corn Flakes,
Tillson's Scotch Health Bran,
Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice
etc.

Why not invest more money in attractive package cereals that sell at sight—the Quaker line.

Any wholesaler can give you prompt delivery.

EUREKA REFRIGERATORS
NONE BETTER!

Mr. Hickson, Grocer & Butcher of Wheatley, Ontario, gives his reasons

Why he likes his EUREKA Refrigerator

"I installed a large Eureka Refrigerator in my store in January for use in my butcher and grocery departments, and it has given me the best of satisfaction.

"The temperature in the provision room, averages around 36 deg. F. and the refrigerator requires only one ton of ice per week. It is very economical as well as efficient and I can honestly recommend the Eureka to anyone.

"I also note that the finish on my Eureka Refrigerator is particularly good and I would suggest to anyone contemplating the purchase of a refrigerator, to place his order early in the Winter, before the Spring rush starts, for by doing so, the necessary time and attention can be given for a beautiful lasting finish."

If you place your order with us, we can give you the same satisfaction!

The Modern "Milky Way"

Follow the modern "Milky Way," you enterprising merchants, and you will find your "lucky stars" Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk, high above all others in quality and public esteem.

These delicious natural flavored dairy products are more convenient and in many instances purer and more sanitary than the milk and cream the regular milkman supplies. Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk are taken from healthy selected herds to the can, via a wonderful new scientific route over which none of the purity or natural flavor is lost.

These two products will act like magnets to draw customers to your store. The public must have milk and cream and will follow the lines of least resistance to get them. Your store is the most convenient source.

MOVE! Mr. Modern Merchant! Make a display of modern milk and cream for Keepsweet. It collects customers and keeps them "sweet" for you. We will supply you with full window dressing materials upon application.

Good Judgment

In the good judgment you exercise in the choice of lines you handle lies the foundation of your success. In the matter of Brooms, for instance, retailers should be particularly careful, for there are few things in which the demands of the average housewife are so exacting.

Waterloo Broom & Brush Company's high-grade brooms are just the kind of "out of the ordinary" brooms that will please the most particular housewife. Their exceptional ability to retain their shape over a longer period of time combined with their perfect balance and fine finish never fail to build up an increasingly profitable broom trade.

"Means Loss to the Country Retailer"

Another Merchant in Making Protest Against the Mail Order Advertising of The Toronto Globe Declares That it Cannot Fail to Take Away Business That Rightly Belongs to the Community Dealer

FOLLOWING on the complaint of the retail merchant in Western Ontario, against The Toronto Globe, and outlined in last week's issue of Canadian Grocer, come complaints from merchants in other parts, who assert that if the present propaganda of this newspaper to extend mail order business throughout the country results in any degree of success, and is continued, it means that much loss to the retailer in the smaller towns and villages will result.

The Globe in its circular sent out to subscribers and which is reproduced on this page, draws attention to an enclosed questionnaire, which is introduced in this way:

"Your courtesy in answering the questions below, and returning to The Globe, Toronto, will be appreciated as an acknowledgement of our efforts to assist manufacturers and merchants in supplying you with goods in the most economical way possible."

Some of the questions which follow include: "How often do you visit Toronto during the year? Check off any of these articles you have purchased during visits to Toronto: Men's clothing, women's clothing, children's clothing, shoes, furniture and house furnishings, musical instruments, rugs or carpets, automobiles, trucks, office equipment, books, trunks or suitcases, sporting goods, confectionery and jewellery. Check off the classification of advertising you read regularly in your Toronto morning newspaper: Groceries, toilet goods, financial, clothing, books, autos, furniture, and want ads."

Takes Trade from Small Merchant

"I think The Globe's policy in its endeavor to build up an extensive mail order business for the merchants in the larger cities and towns, cannot fail to take away from the community dealer a large share of the trade that rightly belongs to him," declared the proprietor of a general store in a village approximately one hundred miles from Toronto. "In its questionnaire it asks the co-operation of its readers to assist it to supply them with goods in the most economical way possible, and by way of doing this, draws attention to the page of mail order advertising, which with but few exceptions are the advertisements of Toronto merchants. Is that not a direct invitation to the buying public in my particular community to patronize the big city fellow, who will deliver to their doors the goods advertised, free of all carrying charges? Does it not place me in direct competition with the city merchant? Is it not a deliberate attempt to take away business from the small town dealer and give it to the city man? I believe that it is and that such a policy if effective will work at least to the disadvantage of the retailers who are serv-

COPY OF CIRCULAR SENT SUBSCRIBERS

Dear Sir or Madam:

The Globe has always been interested in giving you and its tens of thousands of readers outside of Toronto the most complete news of the day, and the kind of features that appeal to men, women and children. This is doubtless why you are a regular reader of The Globe.

We are now adding another feature, which we believe will be of value to you personally — A NEW MARKET PLACE — AN OPPORTUNITY TO BUY BY MAIL.

Beginning Saturday, October 21st, and continuing each Saturday thereafter, a special page or more of Mail Order Advertising will appear in The Globe. A copy of the first page is enclosed. Please read it carefully. Make it a HABIT to read this page each and every week. Goods and articles which you need will be advertised. The Dominion Government has recognized the importance of Mail Order Merchandising and have passed regulations which are now effective, enabling you to order goods by mail and pay cash against delivery of any parcel up to the value of $100.00. It is a big step forward and our Mail Order Page will put this new market place within your reach.

We are also enclosing a short list of questions which we know you will be glad to answer, and return to us in the self-addressed envelope. Our object in asking you these questions is that we may learn to know you as you know The Globe, so that we may all feel as a member of each other's family.

You need not sign your name, if you prefer not to, but you may rest assured that any information you give will be treated confidentially.

When you return the list of questions, won't you please write us a letter and tell us how you like the Mail Order idea, and whether you feel that it will be helpful to you in making purchases?

With very kindest regards, I am

Very truly yours,

(Signed) A. R. Malton,

Business Manager.

ing small towns and villages in this country, and who have always been the backbone, as it were, of such centres.

This Merchant Gets Circular

"Any successful propaganda to increase mail order business of retailers in the larger places cannot fail to take trade from such merchants as myself. The Globe's assertion in its reply to the merchant in Western Ontario that its idea was to serve the man or woman living in rural parts and some distance from town is hardly the case, in view of the fact that I myself received one of the circulars and questionnaires, and had intended to take the matter up with them, when you brought it to my attention. Nor again is the statement, that the lines advertised consist of specialties which are carried by very few retailers in rural sections, exactly in accordance with facts. A number of the lines advertised on a recent Saturday are stocked in this general store. These include such articles as men's and women's suits and coats, dresses, etc., shoes, fur coats, suitcases, a number of hardware lines that we have in this store. In any event if we do not have the article in stock, we are always prepared to get it for the customer at the first possible opportunity.

"I believe the development of a mail order business that is taking trade that rightly belongs to the small community merchant is not in the best interests of the country, and retailers who are feeling the competition in the development of their business should oppose any extension of mail order privileges on the part of the government such as the recent C.O.D. parcel post legislation."

This merchant also called attention to the "Retail Merchants' Globe" which claims to be published in the interests of all retailers in Ontario.

"It seems to me," he said, "that this publication is not issued in our interests at all, and that the real opinions of The Globe are to be found in its daily medium through which it endeavors to draw trade away from the country towns and cities to a few of its advertisers in Toronto."

Another proprietor of a general store writing to Canadian Grocer this week suggests that merchants in the towns and cities throughout the Province should get up a petition protesting against the Globe's propaganda to boost mail order business, and seek through this petition to have The Globe cease, in what he terms is a drive to take business away from the retail stores that it pretends to help.

What is your opinion about this matter, Mr. Merchant?

SAVING WASTE PAPER SAVES FORESTS

"The shortage of waste paper on the American continent to-day is more than a business problem of the paper industry — it is a conservation problem involving the forests of the entire country," said Grellet Collins, President of the Book Paper Manufacturers, in a recent address to paper manufacturers.

"Every ton of waste paper that is used by the paper mills means just so much of our forest resources saved for the future. Taking good pulpwood land as an example, it can be said that the use of six tons of waste paper is equal to saving one acre of timber from devastation."

To-day a reasonable price is being paid for waste paper — and the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers with quantities of waste paper to dispose of—can do so to good financial gain. To-day in many parts of America waste paper is so scarce that it costs the paper manufacturer more than new pulp. A shortage exists and higher prices prevail.

This Merchant Lost Money Because He Was Late in Making Christmas Displays

J. A. Hewson, Montreal Stresses the Power of the Christmas Display, and Believes That it Should be Made Early—Already Has a Christmas Table for Showing Specialties

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 (Special).—With the approach of the Christmas season, comes the opportunity for bigger and more varied sales in the grocery business but the amount of these sales and in fact the general turnover in the grocery business at this time largely depends upon the grocer's ingenuity in increasing the sale of specialty lines. The truest thing that was ever said about selling is that the merchant who starts early to boom the Christmas buying sells the most in the long run. If a customer leaves all the Christmas buying to the last week, the mere necessities of the holiday seem so large, that there is little hope for the grocer selling many of the specialty lines and dainties that he stocks particularly for that season.

The Christmas Table

J. A. Hewson, a retail grocer of 871 St. Catherine St., West, Montreal, has already arranged a table of Christmas specialty lines near the front door of his store. This table is prettily decorated in bright colors and trimmings, symbolic of Christmas. On the table are all the fancy lines for the Christmas dinner. His idea is that by having them before his customers early, he has an opportunity to introduce them and make his customers familiar with them, that he would not have during the last week. Then, too, he believes that if his customers were to see these lines for the first time down town in some of the other stores, they would either make their purchases before he had displayed his goods or else, having got the suggestions elsewhere, they would buy elsewhere.

The Value of Xmas Displays

Last Christmas season, this grocer left the responsibility of the displays upon one of the staff, but unfortunately this man was laid up just at the time that the displays should have been made. After the holiday trade was over Mr. Hewson told the Canadian Grocer representative that he figured that on account of not having the proper displays made at an early date he lost from four to five hundred dollars' worth of business during the holiday season. This is a proof of how much the displays mean to the turnover at this time. Naturally this grocer is determined not to lose in this way again.

The Xmas Atmosphere

The displays suggesting Christmas have a powerful influence over the purses of the buying public and an early display means that this influence will be brought into play sooner. One of the secrets of making the Christmas spirit mean most to a particular line of business is to adapt the idea to as many lines as possible. One grocer in this city makes a feature of Christmas gift fruit baskets. These baskets are artistically arranged, bearing the festive symbols of holly, mistletoe and red ribbons. He has in past seasons sold big quantities of particularly high quality fancy fruit at a good profit. Another grocer features gifts of staple food lines, such as canned goods, bacon, etc., nicely packed. These he sells to people who through generosity wish to make donations to charitable institutions or to families who need this practical help. This is a particularly practical line of selling campaign for the grocery trade and a feature that is sure to attract attention.

No Changes Are Proposed in Law as to Price-Fixing

Toronto, Nov., 29 (Special).—Attorney-General Raney's projected legislation against price-fixing agreements in the industrial world has fallen by the wayside, and the Special Committee of the Legislature appointed to take evidence respecting it and return a report, has decided that there should be no change in the substance of the governing law. The committee will, however, report a bill at the next session which it considers will materially assist the department in a measure of regulation and supervision of industrial agreements.

At its concluding session at the Parliament Buildings yesterday the committee voted unanimously to make a substitution for the original bill. In the legislation which it was decided to recommend, the privilege will be given the Attorney-General of the right of discovery prior to action being taken. According to the contemplated measure, the Attorney-General will have the right of filing an application with the High Court, ex parte, to examine any parties to an agreement, or any person who has knowledge of the agreement, and to have the documents, memoranda, books, and so on produced before any civil action is taken.

Gives Attorney-General The Right

Another important clause in the substitute bill which will be recommended is one that will make it perfectly clear that the Attorney-General of the Province has a right to bring civil action for an injunction to restrain the carrying out of agreements detrimental to the public interest. In previous litigation Mr. Justice Orde had interpreted the law to be that the Attorney-General has no such powers. It is proposed to give to him this authority beyond peradventure.

Outstanding among the considerations which persuaded committee members to modify the original proposed legislation, were the strong representations of various commercial organization principals, and the apparent lack of co-operation of public opinion or public bodies generally in pressing for the more drastic law. Not a single resolution or favorable expression of opinion, it was said, had been presented to the committee in support of "anti-combine" legislation, since the committee took up its duties early in the year.

Opponents Impressive

Opponents of the measure, on the other hand, sent a number of capable representatives to state industry's case against it, and their arguments were very impressive, notably those of the Ford Motor Car Company, who set out to establish before the committee that their sales and service agreements were absolutely in the best interests of the public, and actually saved money to the consumer.

A. W. Roebuck, K. C., acted as committee counsel throughout the sittings.

AVERAGE PRICE OF FOODSTUFFS ADVANCES ONE-THIRD OF ONE PER CENT. IN NOVEMBER

THE average wholesale prices of 32 leading staple food commodities during the month of November show an increase as compared with the general average during October of .323 per cent. or about one-third of one per cent. The outstanding feature in the markets during the month of November was the steady increase in the price of flour, which showed an advance of from 10c to 20c every week during the month, the average price on Manitoba hard wheat flour being $7.05 per barrel as against the average of $6.75 for October. Cereals also inclined upward, particularly rolled oats and cornmeal, the average price of the former being 15c per bag and the latter 27½c per bag higher than the average in October. Eggs and butter were higher by 2c per lb., while cheese increased 4c per lb. The comparison of prices shows as well declines of a few cents per dozen on canned tomatoes, corn and peaches, while a shade reduction is noted in shelled almonds, walnuts and rice.

How to Advertise for Christmas

Price is not a Consideration at This Season and Every Effort Should be Made to Make the Advertisement an Interesting Story —Making Suggestions for Christmas Gifts That May Be Procured From The Grocer

THERE are so many things in a retail grocery store to advertise during the Christmas season, that the writing of business bringing advertising copy can hardly be considered a difficult task. But as advertising is an investment and not an expense, some thought and judgment should be given to it. A long list of prices cannot be considered good judgment, as it smacks of cheapness and, goodness knows, the public—that is speaking generally—are not looking for bargains at Christmas time. Rather the public gets on a "spending jag" and price is not usually the first consideration, but merchandise showing merit and quality is generally chosen.

The advertisement which brings the best results, is the one containing the most interesting story about the particular items advertised. This story need not be written with high-sounding words, but in simple readable language, the same as used over the counter every day. If the advertisement is on material for making Christmas cakes and pudding, it could have an introduction something like this:

A Royal Christmas Gift
Big Golden
Juicy Ripe Peaches

Can you conceive the pleasure of the recipient when she opens a can of these splendid peaches? Perfect halves packed in a heavy syrup. Truly a thing of beauty. Send your best friend a case or if you prefer we will include a few cans of Bartlett pears, strawberries or raspberries of the same fine quality. The price is ..... per case for either assorted or all one kind.

Christmas Gift Baskets

Come in a large assortment of sizes. Overflowing with good things. For instance, some are filled with an assortment of fresh fruit, others with nuts, cluster raisins, figs and dates. Then there is the cute little basket containing just one jar of preserved fruit. Or perhaps better still you would like to make your own assortment. All, of course, are decorated with Christmas ribbons and holly.

Advertisement suggestion carrying out the gift idea.

You can't be too particular about the quality of the ingredients which go into the making of your Christmas cakes and plum pudding. The fruit we are offering you this year is the finest we have ever sold. The raisins and currants are free from grit and dirt and are plump and juicy, while the nuts and peels are the best the world produces. Prices too, are low, consistent with the high quality.

Following the introduction, a list of the various ingredients should be written. This need not be very long, a few words will suffice, but make it read in such a way that it will make the reader actually want the goods.

Suggestions for Christmas Gifts

Besides the material to be used for Christmas baking, the retail grocery store is cram full of things which could be suggested as gifts. In fact almost every article in the store can be suggested as Christmas gifts. One might say that an article of food hardly lends itself as a Christmas gift, and yet through suggestive advertising and surrounding the article with a Christmas atmosphere it can be made highly desirable as a gift. For this purpose perhaps the idea of a Christmas hamper is one of the best and has already been in use by several merchants for several years. One such merchant is French & Co., London, Ont. The idea commenced with this firm by suggesting fancy baskets of fruits but since then the idea has been extended and now the firm, not only suggests a basket of fruit, but suggests a hamper of staple groceries, and the assortments sold in this way literally run into the hundreds.

Suggesting Gift Baskets

J. McTaggart & Sons. Ltd., Vancouver, B. C., and Montreal, Que.. are merchants who have also used the idea of the gift basket. These baskets contain fresh fruit and vegetables, condiments, candy and other articles. Some of the baskets are quite fancy and others plain. All, however, are trimmed with a bit of holly, a red ribbon tied on the handle or some other manner of decoration, which at once gives the basket a Christmas atmosphere.

Then there are other firms who use the box idea. A cardboard box is lined with white or red tissue paper, in it is placed a half dozen or more cans of canned fruit or perhaps mixed fruit and vegetables. Some boxes are of a size to

These Windows Brought Good Results

Displays of Christmas Lines Such as Nuts, Dried Fruits and Boxed Chocolates Can Be Made Very Attractive, and Are Always Productive of Results From the Standpoint of Sales

ON THIS page are reproduced two excellent Christmas selling window displays from British Columbia. The one at the top is from J. McTaggart & Son, Ltd., Vancouver, and was put in last Christmas season. It is made up with nuts, dried fruits and boxed chocolates. The firm reports this window as showing good results. "To get the best results from window displays they must be changed often," stated Mr. McTaggart.

The lower picture is a Christmas window display put in by J. F. Fumerton & Co., Kelowna, B. C., and dressed by W. G. Lock. This is a good type of a bulk display and the fact that the floor of the window is on an incline helps to bring the goods closer to the eye of the passerby. The display is composed of material for Christmas baking. Also nuts in the shell, canned fruits and vegetables, oranges and fruits in glass jars and many other good things suitable for the Christmas Festivities. "This window sold more goods than any similar window we ever put in," remarked Mr. Fumerton. "In fact, it was a real business getter."

Getting the Early Christmas Trade

Displays Under Glass on This Merchant's Counter of Such Lines as Raisins, Currants, Figs and Shelled Walnuts Remind His Customers that it is Time to Prepare For Christmas—J. S. Boyd, Peterborough, Ont., Finds Display a Big Factor in Sales

"WE ARE already selling a good deal of Christmas goods," J. S. Boyd, grocer on George Street, North, Peterborough, Ont., told a representative of Canadian Grocer this week, when discussing with him the early Christmas trade. The chief reason to which this activity is attributed is in the fact of display. About a year ago Mr. Boyd had one half of his counter enclosed in glass, this section of the counter being divided into seven compartments, thus making it possible to show goods to the very best possible advantage. At the present time, he has the various sections filled with figs, shelled walnuts, raisins, currants and the new evaporated peaches. "We put these goods in a little over a week ago, and at once it started them moving. During the past few days the turnover in these lines has been steadily increasing," Mr. Boyd stated. "It is a splendid reminder to the customers that it is time to get busy with the early Christmas baking. We will keep these lines on display for the next couple of weeks, and then replace them with other Christmas lines.

Paid For Itself Many Times

"Having part of the counter enclosed in glass the way we have it now, has been well worth while. The cost of doing so has returned to us a good many times, by way of the increased business that it has been the means of stimulating. Displaying food products in this way meant a greater turnover of the lines shown. We only had it installed a year ago, and it has proved a good investment. Last winter we sold more dried fruits, such as prunes and apricots, than we ever had done before. Our sales of chocolate bars and similar confections have also increased. We very frequently have them shown on the top of this glass case, and the fact that they are right out where everyone at the counter can see them has meant a very much greater demand for them. A week or ten days before Christmas we will display in place of the bars, a nice assortment of high-class chocolates in boxes. Last year we sold more than 100 boxes, which we thought very good in view of the fact that they constitute a line that we had not previously carried. We also sell a good bulk chocolate for the Christmas trade, and such other high-class lines as glazed fruits table raisins, Christmas crackers and Christmas stockings."

Mr. Boyd is a firm believer in the assertion that people are more concerned about the quality of the article, than they are about the price. He has proved this in his own experience, and a glance at the stock on his shelves indicates that he is carrying high-grade lines. Pointing to a pile of a certain brand of canned corn he remarked to Canadian Grocer, "I sell more of that corn than any other in the store, in spite of the fact that it is priced at a very much higher figure. Two months ago I made a window display of it, and commenced suggesting it to my customers. Since that time I have sold more than five cases of it."

Directing attention to another display of canned goods, Mr. Boyd told Canadian Grocer that he only recently stocked these lines. "They represent top quality products, and promise to be big sellers. I only put them on display the other day. A lady came in and purchased a tin of the green beans and the following day she came back and got three. She was very enthusiatic about the article, and thought it was the best that she had tried for a long time."

"Get Goods Out Where They Can Be Seen"

In this store, one is at once impressed with the manner in which goods are shown to the public. No opportunity is lost by Mr. Boyd to display his products, as he declares there is no better way of getting people to buy. "Get your goods out where they can see them," is his advice. Noticing a certain brand of olive oil in a well-arranged display, the Canadian Grocer representative inquired as to its sale. It was shown in half pint tins. "This is the season to boost the turnover in a line such as this," Mr. Boyd added. "It is a time when the ladies are doing a lot of entertaining, preparing dainty salads and such like, and we find we can sell a good deal of it in this district."

A Fair, Reasonable Profit

That this merchant is not daunted by the competition of the cash and carry stores, nor of the "cut price" man, is shown in the fact that his business is showing a steady increase from month to month. He is conducting a service store, giving his customers delivery and credit. "Our accounts are all good, and we have had no losses worth speaking about because of credit," Mr. Boyd stated. "We are carrying only the best quality goods and we are getting a fair reasonable profit on the same. I am constantly introducing new goods if they represent high class products, and have found it profitable to do so. An attractive display of goods with sometimes a suggestion to the customer invariably results in a sale."

HOW TO ADVERTISE

just take a bottle of Christmas wine. All, however, are tied with colored twine or ribbon and a Christmas tag attached, thus carrying out the gift suggestion. Then others carry the idea still further and suggest full cases of canned fruits as Christmas gifts. These merchants are taking advantage of the gift idea and getting good results because they recognize the fact that the Christmas season is a short one and take every opportunity to make sales.

HAVE SWEET POTATO SURPLUS

A survey of the sweet potato yield in Sussex County, Del., has been conducted by County Agent Malloy C. Vaughn, of Georgetown, and shows that there are more than 2,000,000 baskets stored in the different storage houses in the country. It is estimated that the farmers who do not make use of storage houses during the winter, have possibly 250,000 baskets buried or housed on their farms. Sussex County produced this year 1,394,000 bushels, the average being 164 bushels to the acre. The county raised 82 per cent. of all the potatoes grown in Delaware. This year the yield was 1,700,000 bushels, practically the same as in Maryland, and 87 per cent of this is for market. This year the yield was not only almost double that of last season but the quality was exceptionally good, being 94 per cent. perfect of high medium grade.

Finds Christmas Trees and Holly Profitable

S. Bone and Sons, Avenue Road, Toronto, Sells Hundreds of Christmas Trees in the Ten Days Preceding the Yuletide Festival —Finds it is Best to Sell Holly in One Pound Bundles

THE Christmas season means a busy one for the retail grocer and many merchants look months ahead planning for the big selling campaign of the year. Goods are gathered together from all points of the compass and particular pains are taken in choosing the various lines to see that they are of the best quality obtainable, because no one wants poor stuff to eat during the Yuletide season.

There are other things however, other than foodstuffs, which can be sold with much profit and which go to make the Christmas time a happy one in the homes. Among these many may be mentioned such as Christmas trees, holly, flowers, Christmas crackers and Santa Claus stockings. Some merchants have been handling all of them for several years and sales have shown a substantial increase each year.

Such merchants as S. Bone & Sons, Avenue Road, Toronto, make the most of selling the lines mentioned above. It is no uncommon sight to see hundreds of Christmas trees on display the ten days previous to Christmas day. Their store is admirably situated for displaying of trees, being on a corner and with the sidewalk on the side street several feet from the store, leaving a space between. This space is cemented and makes a fine place for displaying Christmas trees and holly. Trees and holly are also placed near the front entrance and help to give the whole store a Christmas atmosphere.

"In handling holly," stated C. Bone to a representative of Canadian Grocer, "we have found the best way is to have it tied up in one pound bundles. This saves us a lot of time during the rush hours, because it is rather awkward stuff to handle when you are in a hurry. Holly, too, needs to be kept cool or else it becomes dry, so we keep the bundles ready for sale in the back warehouse where it is cool. And in displaying we simply place a case of it outside at the front of the store."

Christmas crackers and Santa Claus stockings are also featured in the Bone store and year after year sales have been growing. Window and store displays of these lines play an important part in bringing about the increased turnover. Personal letters to customers and prospective customers have also been used with marked success. As Bone & Sons are good merchants, they take every effort and give much thought to the selling of articles which are commonly known as Christmas lines because they recognize the fact that the season is short and a clean up with no left-overs make them profitable lines to handle.

The Cost of a Grocer's Love

George Abraham, a grocer in Pennsylvania, says in a breach of promise suit on file there that his love affair wrecked him "physically and financially."

He set out in his petition asking for $25,000 that he used two motor cars and "nearly all of his time" in wooing Mrs. Mary S. Albert, of Conemaugh. When she promised to marry him he gave her a $1,600 diamond engagement ring, he says, which she now refuses to return.

He itemizes his "lost love" cost as follows:

Use of two automobiles by defendant for "her pleasure and convenience," $2,000.

Diamond engagement ring, $1,600.

Profits lost in grocery store by not remaining on the job, $5,000.

Disappointment and loss of his health, $15,400.

Slow Lines Must Bear Wide Margins

Rapidly Moving Lines Are Sold on Narrow Margins—Perishables Should Show Close to 30 Per Cent.—"Seeker for Light" is Further Informed on Question of Margins

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A CRATE of strawberries, 24 boxes, bought at .15c and sold as follows:

15 boxes at 18c	$2.70
5 boxes at 15c	.75
4 boxes at 13c	.52	$3.97
Deduct cost		3.60

shows margin of nearly 9.9%. My friend asks what profit. Maybe none. Maybe a loss. I have not analyzed it carefully enough. But I can say that perishables must pay the ordinary grocery merchant an average margin of close to 30% to yield the normal average profit of around 3% on sales. Even so, every merchant must adapt what principles underly this section of merchandising to fit his own business and environment. That means that every merchant must observe, reason things out for himself and apply rules modified to suit his circumstances. Further, we must all keep wakeful to note changes in practice and conditions, for business changes constantly, and always will. "The only constant thing is change."

On a broad generalization it may be said that slow-moving lines must bear wide margins and rapid movers are sold on narrow margins. Yet at that coffee, which is a fast mover in most properly-run stores, is also a wide-margin item, probably because it is a luxury and therefore logically bears a liberal margin. But prunes, the all-year staple in dried fruits, also carry a liberal margin, usually around 25% or more. That happens to be one of the inconsistencies of merchandising which provide much of the earnings that otherwise would have to be gotten elsewhere. Retail merchandising science is far from fully developed or understood.

Comparative Records Very Valuable

It would be difficult to overstate the value of my friend's comparative record system. There is no stimulant to increased application and endeavor like a current comparative record of our own performances. For those performances are our own. We have only ourselves to beat. That makes us just "nachelly" buck up and put an increase across.

Such records are also valuable to indicate weaknesses and errors—and, of course, that means that we shall set out to correct them pronto.

Note that my friend has "raised a dead little dump with turnover (he means sales) of $4,000 a year to a snappy, popular little store whose income (he surely means sales here, too!) for the first six months of this year ran to $19,584." From $4,000 two years ago to over $39,000 now, an increase of nearly ten times in business, is going some.

How did he do it—how does he continue to do it? That is the interesting thing to the rest of us. Well, take his own statement: "I take a careful inventory at replacement cost at New Year's each year; arrange for it gradually, a week in advance; then slap on a good, capable night force, go at it with a rush and complete it easily in 16 hours, carrying out all extensions during the quieter days that follow."

You see: that is work—just plain, old-fashioned application to the job in hand. The entire letter evinces a habit of investigating, digging out facts about the business, thinking about those facts when dug up, analyzing, dissecting, questioning constantly. He works both ways from his collar. That is the reason and cause for success.

Doing Well—But HOW WELL?

The desire to know just how fast the progress is, daily, weekly, is an indication of the real merchant. He is not satisfied with generalities. Neither does he feel that he is up against a stone wall when somebody says: "It's never been done that way before!" Get the idea?

With the systems I have suggested to him, he will get much of what he seeks. I might add "Efficient Marketing for Agriculture," by Theo Macklin, as a final study. From all this he will evolve what will enable him to keep tab on his own progress. Soon he will be able to tell anything about his business—and when he reaches that point, he will seek for more!

He asks for a suggested system for keeping track of advance orders so he shall not duplicate them and have double stocks. You recognized that common trouble from what I printed of his letter last week.

I think the most practical thing is to have a future-order file. It may be almost any kind of file so long as it is kept for the one purpose of holding future orders.

The system is to get a carbon copy of every order given for later delivery, whether a week, fifteen days, thirty days or six months—any time that is deferred beyond the usual time for quick transport. Then file those orders in succession, keeping the ones to arrive earliest on top and filing the others successively downward until the one to arrive last is on the bottom of the file.

When goods come in, remove the copy of order. Check invoice by it. Attach it to invoice. That gets it out of the file and keeps it for any necessary reference.

When you want to order goods of any kind, take that file, have it before you pretty constantly on future order. It is little work to turn over the orders to make sure you are not duplicating.

This is a worthwhile feature, too, because excess stocks lead to losses of many kinds, not the least of which is the loss least appreciated by the average merchant—the loss of turnover.

French Canadian Perks Up

Last February I got a letter from this man which indicated that he was in a really very bad way. Here is another, more cheerful:

....., Quebec, Aug. 22, 1922.

Dear Sir:—I thank you for your sound suggestions of March 3rd which I often re-read and try to practise. But to reduce stock is difficult, being 280 miles from Quebec; and in a general store so many things are necessary which go slowly. But things are going better this year ..... I now keep account of family expenses and pay them with straight salaries to myself and wife. May expenses were $125.52 and June, $136.11 for food and upkeep of house except insurance which does not fall due in these months. I have had interior of store done up and installed bureau for men's clothing. It looks cleaner and brighter, but I find I do not sell enough men's clothing for stock I carry. I am thinking of advertising this line. I have still a large stock of goods and hope the autumn will bring better business. Here are some figures:

Sales for May—

	1922	1921
Cash	$1220.80	$975.13
Credit	1846.79	484.56
Cash rec'd	1082.67	540.73

Goods received May, 1922, $2,675.73; freight paid, $21.07.

Sales for June—

	1922	1921
Cash	$1326.09	$907.59
Credit	1494.42	466.56
Cash rec'd	356.98	251.41

Goods received June, 1922, $1,749.61; freight paid, $20.87.

I kept no account of goods received in 1921. I add freight to cost when checking. Your advice is appreciated. I await a few lines again in (name of paper) soon as possible.

As I remember it, this man's condition was apparently desperate. He was so badly off that failure seemed inevitable. When I gave him drastic suggestions for reduction of expenses and stock he balked. Then I showed him there was no way to avoid radical curtailment plus the most strenuous efforts to increase business.

He seems to have come through with the performance and now is on the way to prosperity. Some things seem plain enough: With fixed family expenditures and such small cash receipts as he had last year, the family expenses ran between 8½% and 10% of sales. Now they run between 4% and 4.8% approximately.

But why such expenditures should embarrass him even last year with a business of $27,000 puzzles me in view of the present business of only a little over $35,000. Still $8,000 extra business helps. And yet again: Why such light cash receipts per month? Cash received should equal total sales every month—on the average at least—or something is radically wrong. I wonder if I have correctly interpreted his figures since he writes French?

I shall be glad to hear further, but heartily congratulate him on bettered conditions, even if I do not quite get some of his points.

Finding Market for Canadian Honey In Great Britain

Ottawa, Nov. 28. (Special).—Although the possibilities of marketing Canadian honey in the United Kingdom have been the subject of occasional inquiry, very little business has ever been done.

Recently interest in the trade seems to have revived because not only is a representative of the government of Quebec undertaking a campaign both in Great Britain and on the Continent with the object of finding a permanent outlet for the surplus products of the province, but both the governments of Quebec and Ontario made considerable displays of their honey at this year's Dairy Show in London, which has just been held.

Writing to the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa in regard to this question, Trade Commissioner Harrison Watson says: "It is quite impossible to form any estimate as to the prices likely to be realized for Canadian varieties, but several of the leading importers are prepared to receive, consider and report upon samples, which should be representative of what will be regularly sent and also of sufficient bulk to enable thorough investigation, accompanied by lowest quotations c.i.f. London or other United Kingdom port.

"It has been understood in the past that the irregularity of any considerable surplus of Canadian honey available for export has deterred action, but as the excellence of much of the Canadian honey has been established, there is no reason why export trade cannot be inaugurated, provided that regular supplies of standard quality can be guaranteed, although it is probable that the prices securable will be less profitable than those usually obtainable in Canada itself."

ABOUT HALF OF ALBERTA'S WHEAT CROP IS NOW MOVED

Calgary, Alta., Nov. 28.—The enormous quantity of 27,000,000 bushels of grain has been moved by the Canadian Pacific in Alberta from the beginning of the crop season up to Nov. 15. Approximately 25,000,000 of this has been wheat. This shows a considerable advance compared with last year. The total figure up to the end of December was 20,500,000 bushels.

During the past week, the movement reached its peak for the season. From Monday to Friday, 2,219 cars were loaded, representing 3,200,000 bushels. Practically the whole of this went to the head of the lakes.

It is estimated by Canadian Pacific railway officials that about half of the wheat crop in Alberta has now been moved.

In an attempt to pass a worthless cheque on T. R. Dunkin, a grocer in Cornwall, Ont., a fellow going under the name of Harry Miller was arrested the other day. Mr. Dunkin when the cheque was presented to him was rather suspicious of it, and got in touch with the bank and found that there was no such account.

The Christmas Trade

WITH THE greatest shopping season of the year now under way it behooves the merchant to make the most of his opportunities. A number of grocers have already laid their plans for big business, and their stores have taken on a Christmas atmosphere. In this issue of Canadian Grocer special attention is directed towards Christmas selling, and articles designed to help the merchant in this regard are published. How some retailers are stimulating early Christmas buying, building the Christmas advertisement that will get results, illustrations of attractive window displays, are all covered in this issue, and should be carefully perused by the dealer.

Every retailer and salesman should be quick with suggestions to customers by way of increasing sales in the next few weeks. It is a period more than at any other time, when the customer is most amenable to suggestions, and it is up to the dealer to cash in on this fact. Apart from the many good things to eat that will be bought for the home table for the Yuletide festivities, the grocer can achieve a greater turnover by giving some attention to the solution of his patrons' gift problems. Presents of the choicest fruits and confections that are always available at this season, make acceptable gifts, and the retailer will find it worth while to develop this feature.

It is up to the merchant and his staff to see to it that the cash register rings up a gratifying total on Christmas Eve.

The "Bazaar Donation" Problem

A MANUFACTURER of a grocery product showed a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day seven or eight letters which he had received in one mail asking for donations of his goods for church bazaars. He states that at this time of year his firm receives letters like this practically every day. He had them from Lindsay, Sault Ste. Marie, London, Toronto, and a number of other places. Some of them were couched in phraseology that made one think before refusing. In one case a woman had stated that after the last donation received she personally had purchased this particular product ever since and advised a number of her friends to do the same.

Firms which are doing a national business are receiving these requests from coast to coast. The claim is made that in many instances the wives of retail grocers who buy and sell these particular lines are among the offenders in a great many instances. This firm answers these letters by pointing out that each individual employee is a member of a church and is contributing regularly to its upkeep, and that it is absolutely unfair for this firm to give to one and not to them all.

Another complaint from manufacturers is that their travellers are held up by clerks, usually young women clerks in stores, for tickets for different kinds of church events which they cannot possibly attend.

Retail merchants are troubled with the same thing in so far as their own customers are concerned, and the whole matter represents a problem that requires careful thought.

In these days of keen competition a retailer cannot afford to give away any of his stock, nor can a manufacturer afford to send out samples of his goods for every bazaar or other event that comes off.

The Retail Merchants' Assn. in some cases have done good work in having cards printed to be put up in stores to the effect that requests for donations must be taken up with the secretary of the association. The merchant is able to point out that he belongs to this association and that he has to abide by the rules and regulations, so that he cannot make any donations that are not supervised by the central organization. Perhaps manufacturers in competing lines might be able to work out something similar. At any rate, the giving of donations to every one indiscriminately is not good business if business is to be done at the lowest possible cost.

Reader Interest is Essential

WHEN John Wanamaker, some years ago, withdrew his advertising from free-distribution mediums, it was mainly because these had no fundamental reader interest. This was the finding after a deep study of the subject. It was the conviction that the man who subscribed for a newspaper or other publication, expected to find advertising in it and valued that advertising as in the light of an investment, as something he had appreciated sufficiently to pay for.

The opposite was the effect of the free-distributed product. Here the receiver had no primary interest in the publication; it appeared in unexpected places, without request, and had somewhat the status of an unexpected guest.

Then, as now, free-circulation mediums were found to recognize no responsibilities toward the problems attending the business or industry, offered no constructive service through their columns, had no means of developing helpful discussion, offered no interchange of news or views, and in short had no interest beyond that contained in their advertising pages and the revenue they represented.

Editorials in Brief

No matter how good it may be nothing wears out as quickly as the excuse for being late to work.

A little tact in talking to customers will produce a brand of salesmanship that will make business anywhere.

The clerk who does not know what advertising his store is doing to-day is in a position to turn away more trade than a little.

Customers are more ready to enter a store that looks busy from without than one that is empty and looks as if a visitor would be conspicuous.

The days when business is dull in the store are not days when one need be dull mentally. All the better those days for planning methods for bringing more trade later.

Customers find no fault at not being waited on immediately by clerks who are busy, but when kept waiting by clerks who are busy only with one another, that is different.

Tea and Soap Do Not Mix Well

So This Farmers' Organization Found Out to Their Sorrow—More Trouble Caused by Tobacco Shipment—The Likely Reasons Why Farmers' Co-operative Stores Do Not Make a Success

HON. T. A. CRERAR, president of the United Grain Growers Limited, in his annual report at Calgary stated that the total earnings for the past year for the parent company amounted to $2,427,293.74 with expenses $118,340.31 more than this amount.

Readers of Canadian Grocer will readily appreciate the further statement of Mr. Crerar that it was the supplies department and the co-operative machinery end of the business that caused the loss, while the grain end had been a profitable part of the year's business.

In other words, this farmers' organization made money on the department with which it was familiar, but lost out on the merchandising end which is a specialized business in itself.

This, following closely on the heels of the closing out of so many farmers' co-operative stores in Ontario, once again indicates the desirability of the farmers keeping out of the retail business. They have plenty of work to do in organizing their own marketing systems for their grain and live stock without getting into deep water in the merchandising.

Something Wrong With the Tea

Many stories are told of the incapacity of the farmer for understanding the various methods in the retail business. One of these comes from a district in Ontario. Two or three years ago a number of farmers formed their own co-operative association and decided to purchase goods wholesale and distribute them among the members. When the various shipments of goods arrived at the station the farmers went down, broke the packages and took home those things which they had ordered. Among other goods in one shipment, there were a number of cases of soap and a 125-lb. chest of tea. The cases of soap were opened at the depot and the contents divided. Then the chest of tea was broken open and, having nothing else on hand, it was carried home by the different purchasers in the empty soap boxes.

Pretty soon there began to be quite a general criticism of the character of the tea. It had been purchased from a Montreal house. Samples of it were sent back to Montreal to be tested. The farmers objected strenuously to paying for such quality of tea as had been supplied. The Montreal firm replied that when the tea was shipped it certainly was in good condition, and did not have the soapy taste that their experts found in the samples returned.

The secretary of the farmers' organization insisted on the cancellation of the charge for the tea and determined to return it. The cause of the trouble was eventually discovered and naturally the farmers' association was the loser. The tea had absorbed the soapy flavor from the empty soap cases. Tea seems to always take advantage of soaking up a new aroma from anything close at hand.

Another story comes from a section about an order for plug tobacco that was sent to a certain firm. This firm at the time manufactured two plugs, one that sold for 15c and one for 20c. When the tobacco arrived it happened that the 15c

Hamilton Grocers Make Presentation to Picnic Chairman

Hamilton, Nov. 28.—The regular monthly meeting of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' association was held the other evening. President John Young presided. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the officers and members of the chamber of commerce for the kindness and accommodation always shown the association in permitting the association the use of its rooms.

The Root and Vegetable act was discussed at length. Selling by weight was favorably commented on by those present.

After the regular business a very pleasant event took place, when President Young, on behalf of the association, presented Frank Smith, chairman of the picnic committee, with a handsome chair. Mr. Smith replied very suitably, thanking the members for the assistance rendered that made the picnic a success.

Grimsby, Ont., Merchants Got Together to Keep Christmas Business at Home

THE MERCHANTS of Grimsby, Ont., all combined last year to prevent most of the Christmas gift business going to the nearest large city, by a series of seasonable attractions, the chief of which was a community Christmas tree. This beautifully-decorated tree stood in the heart of the town, and all sorts of publicity was resorted to in order to bring the greatest crowds to Grimsby on the Saturday before Christmas. The preliminary event was a Christmas parade, with Santa Claus, who beamed on the crowd that lined the streets, riding in a gorgeously decorated motor car. A boy scout band preceded Santa's car, with more boy scouts marching alongside the automobile. The parade concluded before the Community Christmas Tree, before which a large and enthusiastic crowd gathered.

Bags of candy were handed out to the kiddies, with inexpensive gifts for the grown-ups. More excitement was provided by the releasing of fifteen balloons from a tall building. Attached to each balloon was an order good for a free chicken, goose or turkey. A scramble ensued for the balloons, which flew all over the town. This co-operation served to keep the people in the town on the busiest day of the year, and all the Grimsby merchants experienced heavy sales.

A PERSONAL TRIBUTE TO THE LATE JOHN W. CHARLES

By A. Marland Woolnough

Here where John Wilson Charles wrought so great a work, where his genius and unique personality touched men directly, where his kindness was known to have been the full measure of his wonderful abilities, here, the shadow of a heavy sorrow rests, and the sense of a great personal loss is keenly felt by all.

The reflection of his life—his justice, his thoughtful consideration for others, his accurate understanding of men, his strength which was so gentle to the weak, his faith in man, his love for the city and community, and his passion that it might be increasingly, the home of thrift, beauty and contentment—leaves no other conclusion than that we have suffered almost irreparably.

For a little while there is a numbness which has seized us by the sudden passing of a friend, and we instinctively feel that he must needs be moving among us, a very valiant knight, a prince among men, a thoughtful and lovable citizen and friend. So difficult is it to associate such an active man with death. Yet it is true his life has been cut off, at the very zenith of its power and success, but his influence goes on and shall abide, for "The good shall stand in Immortal Bloom."

USING THE SALES SLIP TO GOOD ADVANTAGE

"Pay Your Grocer First—Some Reasons Why," printed at the top of the back of his sales slips, with the ten reasons beneath, has proved a valuable stunt to one middle-Western grocer in speeding up collections and getting action on old accounts.

Whereas the backs of sales slips usually bear nothing more important than a few lines about the store's merit, this merchant has made the slip backs bring money to his store. The copy beneath the heading reads:

"When you pay your bills, give your grocer first money.

"He supplies you with the most necessary thing in life—food.

"The most important thing in the world is to get something to eat.

"If you must put off paying anyone, therefore, let it be anyone but the grocer.

"He is not wealthy. He seldom has a surplus in the bank. His money is all invested in merchandise and accounts.

Ottawa Grocers Hold Opposite Opinions in Regard to Proposed Receipt Tax

Matter is Discussed at Recent Meeting of the Association—A. S. Moreland is Again Elected Secretary of the Pure Food Show—District Meeting is Postponed Until January

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (Special).—Discussion regarding the importance of the Credit Report Book, took place at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Ottawa Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, a few days ago. District Secretary J. C. Campbell introduced the subject by calling attention to a letter that was being sent out to the members outlining the principle of the Credit Report Book. The letter in question reads as follows:

"An important service in connection with our Association work is that of giving our members a Credit Reporting Book containing the names of those delinquents from whom retail merchants have been unable to collect book accounts. In order that our Credit Reporting Book may be made as complete as possible, and be of the greatest service to you, it is necessary that it should contain as many delinquent names from as many places as possible. We are, therefore, enclosing you a form which we would like you to fill in, giving the names and addresses of those customers from whom you have been unable after notifying them, to collect, and whose accounts you are sure have not been, and cannot be disputed.

"If you think that it would assist you to make a still further attempt to collect the accounts that are now owing to you, it might be well to send out another letter stating that unless the accounts are paid in five days, it will be necessary to send their names in to us to be placed on the delinquent debtors' list. In any event we would like all the names that you have, not later than December 1st as we expect the Credit Reporting Book will be ready for distribution to our members by the first of the year."

Discuss Receipt Tax

The tax on receipts, which comes into effect the first of January, came in for some discussion, and opinion was divided upon the necessity of launching a vigorous protest and fight against it. T. W. Collins said he could not see how the measure was going to greatly affect the grocers, as in most cases accounts were paid by check, and the check was recognized as a receipt in itself. Others took the opposite view. The check idea might apply to the man doing business on a big scale in a prosperous community, but it would not apply the same way to the small corner grocer catering to the working man, who came in Saturday evenings to settle up. If his account was over ten dollars, the stamp would have to be affixed to his receipt.

J. C. Campbell urged the members to fight the measure on the ground that the retail merchant was already too heavily burdened with taxes which he could not pass on to the consumer.

A. S. Moreland, who handled the arrangements for Ottawa's Pure Food Show last summer, was again elected secretary of the show, with authority to select his own committee. Mr. Moreland will choose his committee and report at the next meeting.

Postponed Until January

It was announced that the district meeting which was to have been held on the 22nd of November, in Carleton Place, had been postponed until some time in January.

The chairman stated that he had been advised by the officials of the Fruit Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture, that window cards calling attention to the recent changes in the Root Vegetables Act, requiring potatoes and other root vegetables to be sold by weight, were being sent out to every grocer in the country.

Those who attended the meeting were: A. E. Kelly, chairman; Duncan Bell, treasurer; J. C. Allan, secretary; B. G. Crabtree, J. A. Walsh, J. Paterson, D. C. Cowan, A. M. Richardson, H. J. Hill, P. G. Allan, A. S. Moreland, T. A. C. Kennedy, A. Phillips, P. G. Allan and T. W. Collins.

FORT WILLIAM GROCERY IS SCENE OF DARING HOLD-UP

Fort William, Nov. 27.—A daring hold-up accompanied by a brutal assault on the man in charge of Sutherland's grocery store, who refused to hold up his hands when ordered, ended in the capture of the two men alleged to have been guilty of the crime, after a short but sharp chase by Chief Dodds, Inspector Watkins and Constable McMurray.

In the afternoon two men entered Sutherland's grocery store, which is near the Union Station, ordered young Sutherland to put up his hands, took him to a back room when he refused to do so, tied his hands with a tire chain, and rifled the cash register of $20.

DOMINION POULTRY PROMOTER TALKS TO RETAILERS ON EGGS

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—The importance of selling eggs on a quality basis, was the point emphasized by A. C. McCulloch, poultry promoter for Manitoba, under the livestock branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, when speaking the other night before retail grocers and meat dealers in the offices of the Retail Merchants' Association.

The speaker gave four reasons for selling eggs on this basis: First, that the producer must be rewarded with a reasonable price if the production of eggs in Canada is to be increased, and second, the per capita consumption of eggs is increasing in Canada. In 1891 it was 11.8 dozen, in 1901, 13.7 dozen, in 1911 17.3 dozen, and in 1921 it was 20 dozen. In the third place this growth in consumption was desirable because of certain specific food properties contained in eggs and not present in most other articles of diet, and fourth, that customers buy eggs for various uses, for boiling, for pastry and other cooking. A certain quality of eggs was essential for each use, he said. If eggs were sold according to grade it was easy for the customer to choose the grade required.

E. W. Mallet, senior egg inspector under the branch, was also present.

ESTABLISHING A STURGEON FISHERY AT FORT ST. JAMES

Edmonton, Nov. 28.—While at Fort St. James, in the interior of British Columbia, recently E. W. Bowness, consulting engineer of this city, met a party of Edmonton men who were looking over the terrain mentioned with the possible intention of establishing a sturgeon fishery there.

Sturgeon fishing on a small scale is at present carried on at Stuart lake, the fish being taken for the caviare they contain, which latter is cured at Fort St. James prior to shipment. Some of the sturgeon taken in Stuart lake tip the scales at 400 pounds weight, and there is a probability that this industry will be considerably commercialized during the next decade, says Mr. Bowness.

BRITISH COLUMBIA PRODUCES 711,350 LBS. OF HONEY

Vancouver, Nov. 28.—The B. C. bee harvested this year 711,356 pounds of the sweetest crop on earth, according to compilations made by W. S. Sheppard, provincial apiarist. This is a record.

Fifty-three tons are contributed by the Kootenay bees; the Okanagan and Thompson valleys including another fifty. From Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands twenty-nine tons were gathered, while twenty-four tons were harvested from Greater Vancouver and New Westminster. The populous Fraser Valley, with its commercial beekeepers and farmer side-liners, produced more than half the whole crop, nearly 200 tons coming from this district.

TEA AND SOAP DO NOT MIX WELL

variety was sent, but the shipper had made some mistake and charged it up at the 20c price. The farmers who purchased the tobacco soon discovered they could buy a larger plug for less money. The secretary was accused of double-dealing, and the reader can imagine just what kind of a time he would have for a few months. The secretary, of course, was not to blame, as he did not know anything about what the size of the plug should be for the price.

These things go to show that it is not an easy matter to conduct a business at a profit if one does not know anything about the business. Retailing is a scientific trade, and if one does not apply himself to it, or if he has not been brought up in it, his chances of success are not bright.

HERE IS A POTATO RECORD

Here is a Vernon potato record:

Noel Leishman, B. C., planted 55 lbs. of seed and dug 1,500 lbs. of Carmen No. 1, marketable spuds. This is a yield of 27 to 1.

He also planted 9 sacks of Netted Gems to the acre which yielded 17 tons. Next!

Did You Ever Stop to Think---

THAT satisfied customers are the greatest asset a business can have.

THAT courtesy, service, price and quality merchandise keep them satisfied.

THAT Advertising Brings New Customers.

THAT the up-to-date merchandiser who advertises gets them.

THAT a merchant who does not keep up-to-date loses them. Keep Up-to-Date.

THAT the persistent advertiser can always say "Business is Good and Getting Better."

THAT the progressive, up-to-date citizens who believe in their city and work and boost toward making it a better city in which to live and make a living, are the ones who make better business.

THAT they read the advertisements and believe in buying from the live merchants so the home money can circulate through business channels and work for the whole community.

THAT these citizens and the big up-to-date business men are the leaders in a Chamber of Commerce. They are active members, not for the benefit it might be to themselves alone, but for the benefit it will be to their city.

THAT they realize that what benefits their city benefits the citizenship in general.

THAT to be Known as a Live, Up-to-Date City Brings More Business.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THERE are few features in the markets for general grocery commodities this week, but trading on the whole is fairly active, particularly on lines suitable for the Christmas trade. Refined sugar made two advances during the week under review, making a total advance of 25c and bringing the Montreal basis to $8 for standard granulated. The market situation is fairly strong under some recent advances in the raw sugar market. Cuban raws sold as high as 4c c. & f. on the New York market, the highest prices reached for this crop. There are also rumors of sales of new crop Cubans for January shipment at 3¾c c. & f. New York. Grinding of the new crop Cuban sugars has not yet commenced, but several centrals are expected to start operating within the next week or ten days. Dried fruits of all descriptions are moving in good volume and spot quotations hold fairly steady. Currants on spot are inclined to be scarce in some quarters and prices are firmly held. Primary currant markets, however, indicate a weakness and lower spot prices are likely after the turn of the new year. Dates are also easier and there is a possibility for some declines in the future. Cereals continue to maintain the strong tone which has characterized this market for some time. The situation in rolled oats, however, appears a little easier in Quebec while a scarcity and strong prices prevail in Ontario and a firm market in other provinces. Canned goods rule steady while rice and spices show little change as compared with a week ago. Teas continue in a very strong position with primary markets steadily indicating a shortage and higher prices, which is reflected in the spot situation and in consequence some advances have been registered.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—The wholesale grocery trade is unanimous in the report that the grocery business, during the past week, has shown another marked improvement, principally due to the buying for Christmas. There is, however, a firmer tone to all lines which builds confidence and above all more enthusiasm on the part of the retail trade. Sugar has taken another jump on account of the advance in the price of raws and, as few were able to take advantage of the advance, prices are uniform and strong with practically no cutting. Canned goods are firm without any change of note. The rice market is steady and shows some improvement in buying. Coffees are marking time but gaining strength in primary markets. Black teas have taken a further advance, making a total of ten cents a lb. during the past month. Rolled oats are reduced slightly but still are in a strong position, the reduction having been made on the grounds of better deliveries of grain. The spice market is quiet. Good quality walnuts are scarce and higher in price. Currants are weaker for the future but spot prices are steady. There is an excellent demand for dried and prepared fruits. Package goods are unchanged. Molasses is strong but without any price change. Oranges and grapes will be plentiful for Christmas with prices easy.

ROLLED OATS SHADE EASIER

Montreal.

CEREALS.—The feature of the cereal market is the advancing price in white beans. Local wholesalers report that good quality beans are scarce and producers are demanding higher prices. Rolled oats are a little easier and millers have dropped their price 10c. per bag. They state that the congestion at the points of trans-shipment in the west has been cleared up and deliveries are better. The market for rolled oats, however, is in a good position and there is a good demand for supplies. The corn meal market is strong and prices are well maintained.

PACKAGE GOODS UNCHANGED

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—There is no change of note in the package goods market. Since the easier feeling in rolled oats there is not the likelihood of an advance in package goods that there was a week ago. The market is firm however. The demand for package goods of all lines is good and price cutting is not as prevalent as it was.

CANNED GOODS FIRM

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is no change in the canned goods market. Prices are steady with little or no cutting and there is a good demand all around. In some lines of canned vegetables there is a strong and healthy tone. Lobster offerings have been well cleaned up and about all that is left are halves. Packers state that their supplies of quarters and flats are finished and consequently a strong market results.

BLACK TEAS ADVANCE

Montreal.

TEA.—During the past month local dealers in tea have advanced their prices on black tea by small amounts which now total 10c. per lb. Even in package teas there is talk of higher prices. Tea values have been soaring and import costs are much higher than that of spot stocks. Local tea merchants are of the opinion that the peak has not yet been reached in values of black tea. The market for Japan tea is strong at the present basis with a good demand.

SUGAR PRICES ADVANCED

Montreal.

SUGAR.—All refiners have advanced their price to the $8 basis and a strong market is expected in the next few weeks. Raws have reached the new high level of 4 cents c. & f., New York. The demand for sugar is good for small lots to meet immediate requirements since the trade has run out of the lower priced sugar and all are buying from hand to mouth. The immediate future of the sugar market is strong but with the new crops of sugar coming into the market in January easier prices may be expected. Few have been able to take advantage of the recent advance in price and it is expected that list prices will be well maintained.

WALNUT PRICES HIGHER

Montreal.

NUTS.—The feature of the nut market is the sudden increase in the demand for all lines. Good quality walnuts in shell are scarce, and what supplies are on the market are demanding a high price. During the past week some large shipments of walnuts have been turned down in Montreal. Fancy Grenoble walnuts in shell are demanding as high as 33c. per lb. Peanuts are higher in price and have a strong market. There is no change in almonds. The demand for the Christmas season has had a noticeable effect upon the nut market.

GOOD MOVEMENT OF DRIED FRUITS

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Local dealers in dried fruits report a particularly good demand for fancy glace fruits and candied peels. The market for spot currants is firm but import costs are easier and lower prices may be expected in January. Raisins are firm in price and are in good demand. With the low price of dates this fruit has become very popular and there is a good demand. Figs remain high in price. Evaporated apples are weak and lower prices are expected.

COFFEE MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There is feverish strength in coffee in primary markets but there is no change locally. Competition is holding the prices at the present basis and local distributors do not look forward to an advance in the near future. The main feature of the market, however, is that Brazil is in a strong position to hold stocks on hand and a firm market is evident in the future.

ORANGES WILL BE LOW

Montreal.

FRUIT.—Local fruit dealers state that there is no reason for high priced oranges for Christmas. Grapes are easier in price than they have been at this season for many years. California crate grapes are pouring into this market and prices for Christmas are on the downward trend instead of upwards as is generally the case. Fruit dealers also state that wholesale prices on fair quality bananas are comparatively easy for this time of the year.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—The sugar market is fairly strong under a small advance during the week and recent advances in the raw market. Cereals continue to show strength particularly in rolled oats which are showing some signs of scarcity as some mills have none to offer this week. Coffees rule firm while teas show indications for further advances. Canned goods are in a fairly steady position with a good volume of business passing. Currants are scarce on spot and prices are firmly held at the higher level. In primary markets, however, the situation on currants is the reverse and lower prices can be looked for after the turn of the new year. Peanuts are higher but other nuts are unchanged. Rices, spices and syrups are steady at the moment. Cranberries are higher while lemons are easier. Vegetables are fairly steady and show few price changes.

BEANS HOLD FIRM

Toronto.

BEANS. — Quotations on Ontario beans are firm at $3.65 for hand picked and $3.40 for one-pound pickers. California limas are quoted at 12½c per lb. and Madagascar at 6¾c to 7½c per lb.

ROLLED OATS ACTIVE

Toronto.

CEREALS.—Throughout the cereal list, the strength which has characterized this market for several weeks still prevails. Millers continue to have some difficulty in obtaining shipments of oats and consequently rolled oats and oatmeal are in active demand. The general price on single bag lots of rolled oats is $3.30 but in some quarters a price of 5c lower is quoted.

CANNED GOODS UNCHANGED

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—There is little of interest featured in the market for canned goods. Vegetables and fruits continue to move in good volume but generally in lots to meet the requirements of consumer demand. At present the market is in fairly steady position. One brand of shrimps is offered at a lower price of $2.30 per doz.

PACKAGE CEREALS LOOK HIGHER

Toronto.

PACKAGE GOODS.—A strong tone prevails in package cereals, reflecting the strong market for grain. Some talk is heard of an advance coming on package oats, but so far nothing definite can be learned and at present quotations remain unchanged. SPOT CURRANTS SCARCE

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Evidence of the scarcity of currants on spot is not wanting this week. In some quarters the only variety offered is Patras, while in others only Filliatras and Amalias can be obtained. Prices, however, show little change, the two latter varieties being quoted at the same price of 19c per lb., while the former is quoted at 19½c to 20c per lb. Table raisins are slightly higher, four crown being quoted at $5.75 and three crown at $5.25 per box of 20 one-pound packages. Other dried fruits hold steady to firm at unchanged quotations.

FURTHER ADVANCE IN PEANUTS

Toronto.

NUTS.—The strength prevailing in peanuts for the past few weeks continues and, according to reports, a still higher price is likely. Roasted Virginia Jumbos in the shell are advanced to 18c per lb., and green to 14½c per lb. in bag lots and broken lots are about one cent per pound higher. In other nuts the situation on spot is fairly steady and quotations show no indication for any change, at least until after the turn of the year.

SUGAR ADVANCES 25 CENTS

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar made two advances since our last report. One of 10c. and the other of 15c. bringing the price delivered Toronto $8.34 for standard granulated. The market situation continues fairly strong under some recent advances on raws. On the New York market during the week Cuban raws sold as high as 4c. c.& f., but the average price was around 3 7-8c. c & f.

TEAS TEND HIGHER

Toronto.

TEAS.—At all primary centres teas continue to show evidence of the shortage. Prices are still advancing and buying quite active. The spot situation reflects the primary position and, although few recent changes in quotations have been registered, importers and wholesalers maintain that prices quoted to the retail trade are still below replacement costs and higher prices are inevitable.

LITTLE CHANGE IN VEGETABLES

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—The system of buying and selling potatoes by grade is not yet being enforced by dealers, but it is expected to be in general operation within the next week or ten days. The market for potatoes shows little change as compared with last week. F.o.b. prices are around 65c per bag and dealers' prices to the retail trade range from 75c to 90c per bag. California Iceberg lettuce is quoted a shade lower at $6.25 per case, while Canadian hothouse tomatoes are offered at 30c to 40c per lb.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 29.—Dealers report a fair volume of business passing, but not as much as expected. Fine weather predominates but a break for colder weather would help materially. Collections are showing an improvement. The coffee and tea markets are showing a firmer and upward tendency. Sales of canned vegetables are improving. The market for cereals is very strong with an advance on bulk rolled oats. Dried fruits maintain a firm tone and with the approach of Christmas season the demand is reported satisfactory. The feature of the flour market is the advance in price in sympathy with the upward tendency of the wheat market. There is a seasonable demand for all lines of nuts and with spot stocks light the usual shortage will no doubt develop before Christmas buying begins. An advance has again been reported in the price of sugar and the raw market continues with a firm tone.

FIRMER COFFEE MARKET

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—Futures in the coffee market have a firmer tone. Santos is advanced about 2c. per lb. Rios about ½c. and all grades of Milds from ½c. to ¾c. The demand locally is good and prices are fully maintained.

CEREALS RULE STRONG

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—The market for all cereals is firm while bulk cereals are advancing rapidly. Rolled oats are advanced and 80 lb. bags are now quoted at $2.85. Even the above prices are not in keeping with to-day's costs and if the firm tone of the market continues, higher prices will no doubt prevail. Barley, cornmeal and other cereals have advanced to some extent in sympathy with the strength of the grain market.

SPANISH RAISINS IN DEMAND

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is a good demand for new Spanish table raisins and boxes of 20 one pound packages are quoted at $6 to $8.50 according to quality. Turkish figs will not arrive in time for the Christmas trade. Old stock of Turkish cooking figs are practically absorbed and the trade is now offering Greek and Portuguese figs at 7¾c. to 9c. per lb. There is a wide variation in quality and merchants would do well when buying these lines to take this into consideration. Transportation difficulties are holding up many lines of California dried fruits from arriving on the market in time and some brands of raisins are reported in short supply while the larger sizes of prunes have been scarce continually since early fall. Apricots have advanced 2c. per lb. Peaches maintain their recent advance. Indications from primary markets are that raisins and prunes are firm and in fact the entire fruit line is on a firm basis.

SEASONABLE SALE OF NUTS

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—There is a seasonable demand for all lines of nuts. Prices this year are much lower than they have been for some time and as the quality is extra fine, sales are stimulated. Jobbers' stocks are only normal and the usual shortage will likely develop before the actual Christmas buying season begins. Valencia shelled almonds are quoted at 44c. per lb. Trade Inquiries

Canadian manufacturers and packers interested in the export trade of any of the following will be sent names of the foreign enquirers on request. Send the number of the enquiry to Canadian Grocer, 153 University Ave., Toronto, or to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, mentioning our paper.

478. Canned Salmon, etc.—A firm in La Rochelle, France, wish to be put in touch with Canadian packers of canned salmon, canned sea trout and other canned fish.

479. Canned Salmon.—Canadian salmon canners are invited to communicate with a commission agent in Rotterdam who desires to represent a good exporter of red and pink canned salmon.

480. Canned Lobster.—A Swedish import firm desire to be put in connection with a first-class Canadian packer of tinned lobster.

491. Canned Fruits and Jams.—An organization lately formed in Yokohama by several large wholesale food product importers for the purpose of distributing their goods, would be glad to receive from Canadian manufacturers samples of canned fruits and jams, together with their best export prices. This organization is in a good position to distribute such products throughout Japan.

493. Evaporated and Dried Apples.—A Dutch firm wish to enter into relations with a first-class Canadian packer of evaporated and dried apples.

660. Cheese, Bacon.—An importing house in Leicester, England, wish to hear from Canadian exporters of cheese and bacon.

661. Cheese, Bacon and Hams.—A firm in Leicester, England, desire quotations on cheese, bacon and hams.

662. Codfish.—A selling agent in Kingston, Jamaica, desires a Canadian connection for dried codfish in tierces of about 400 pounds. Would prefer a Halifax connection.

663. Eggs.—A firm in Leicester, England, desire to hear from Canadian exporters of eggs.

664. Eggs.—A Swansea importer desires to open direct communication with Montreal egg exporter, owing to the fact that there are now steamers with direct service between Canada and Swansea.

665. Turkeys.—A firm of importers in Birmingham, England, desires up to 2,000 turkeys before the end of November. Birds should be fattened.

666. Turkeys.—A firm of commission merchants in Birmingham desire up to 20,000 turkeys before the end of November. Birds should be fattened.

667. Sugar of Milk.—A reliable importer of Shanghai wishes to receive quotations on sugar of milk, together with samples.

668. Seeds.—A well-known and responsible importer of seeds in Buenos Aires requires quotations for Canadian forage seeds such as rye grass, timothy, rape, etc. Prices c.i.f. Buenos Aires. Correspondence preferred in Spanish.

556. Syrup.—Cane and corn syrups are of interest to a Dutch firm of commission agents.

554. Canned Lobster.—Commission agents in Rotterdam want to hear from Canadian exporters of lobster.

Showing the interior of the store of J. McCorvie & Son at Chatham, Ont. The attractive arrangement, it will be seen, is carried out with the idea of displaying merchandise to the best possible advantage.

Equipment of a kind to facilitate service has been installed in this store. Patented bins, Mr. McCorvie declares, keep bulk goods in a clean, sanitary condition and are easily accessible at all times.

Holdings of Poultry and Beef Show Marked Increase on November 1

Butter in Cold Storage is Practically the Same as in October—Cheese and Eggs Show Falling Off

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (Special).—A marked increase in the quantity of poultry in cold storage at the beginning of November as compared with the corresponding date in October is noted in the preliminary report of food commodities in cold storage and in process of cure, etc., on November 1. The total amount of poultry on hand Nov. 1 was 1,208,793 pounds, as against 695,602 pounds in October. The stocks in the latter month included: broilers, 174,771 pounds; chickens, 308,085 pounds; fowl, 236,553 pounds; ducks, 53,183 pounds; geese, 66,683 pounds; turkeys, 97,465 pounds; unclassified, 272,053 pounds.

Beef Holdings Larger

There was also a considerable advance in the quantity of beef in storage at the beginning of November. The total amount on hand was, 23,469,867 pounds, as compared with 16,440,332 pounds in the previous month. The quantity of fresh frozen beef was 15,120,128 pounds, as against 10,070 811 pounds in October. The difference in the amount of unfrozen fresh beef was not so great. The amount on hand in November was 6,454,015 pounds, compared with 5,019,899 pounds in October.

Butter holdings were practically the same as in October. There were 24,131,064 pounds of creamery and 336,928 pounds of dairy, as against 23,939 389 pounds of creamery and 404,079 pounds of dairy in October. Oleomargarine stocks were 252,727 pounds the beginning of November, compared with 133,212 pounds the previous month.

Cheese in storage amounted to 9.713,687 pounds, this being a falling off of 8,784,471 pounds from October. The eggs in cold storage amounted to 10.077,462 dozen, compared with 14,750,164 dozen in October. There was also a decrease in the quantity of frozen eggs. the holdings of this class being 987,502 dozen as against 1,483,457 dozen the previous month.

Pork Holdings 19,036,072 Lbs.

Pork holdings totaled 19.036,072 pounds and included: Fresh frozen, 2,040,237 pounds; fresh, unfrozen, 2,490,621 pounds; cured, dry salted, 1,539,170 pounds; cured, sweet pickled, 3,219,353 pounds; in process of cure, 9,746,691 pounds. These figures were practically the same as those for October.

The lard in storage amounted to 1,619,425 pounds, an increase of 26,000 pounds over the previous month.

Mutton and lamb holdings jumped from 1,276,960 pounds in October to 4,414,568 pounds, the beginning of November. The quantities in storage the first of the latter month were, frozen, 3,941,819 pounds; unfrozen, 472,719 pounds.

There was an advance of approximately a million pounds in the fish holdings, the total for November being, 20,744,234 pounds, which included, 17,998,482 pounds in cold storage and 2,745,752 pounds other than cold storage.

Other commodities in cold storage the beginning of November were: Condensed milk, 1,301,166 pounds; evaporated milk, 4 290,028 pounds; whole milk powder, 297,166 pounds; skim milk powder, 931,165 pounds; barrels of apples, 47,338; boxes of apples, 96 538.

Sells a Thousand Turkeys During Christmas Season

Vancouver (Special).—Sam Pritchard, grocer on Davie Street, Vancouver, told Canadian Grocer that he has found poultry a splendid line.

"I have found that regular trade can be very easily developed among the customers who deal with me regularly for their groceries. I get several dozen chickens each week, which are usually sold before they come to me.

"For my Christmas trade I have ordered a thousand turkeys, having previously taken orders in advance for most of them," said Mr. Pritchard.

Mr. Pritchard has a whole section of shelving—in fact the most valuable part of his shelves—reserved for pickles, jams, marmalades, etc.

The Retail Merchants' Bureau of the Board of Trade, Owen Sound, is planning to hold a banquet early this month. A committee has been selected to arrange for the same.

The above illustrates how S. Pritchard, Vancouver, B.C., displays poultry. This firm sells on the average of a thousand turkeys during the Christmas season many of which are sold by soliciting orders well in advance.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—There is very little change in the produce and provision market. Hog prices are holding steady with an improved demand and in consequence a steady feeling is noted in smoked meats. The feature of the market is the strength of butter on account of an improved export and domestic demand. While prices are so far unchanged an advance is impending. Cheese is steady with some weaknesses in the later makes although this is not directly shown in the wholesale market. New laid eggs are advanced and a stronger market throughout is evident on account of an increased demand. Strictly new laid eggs are almost unobtainable. Lard and shortening are firm with an improved demand. The supply of fresh fish was for a few days limited by the storms on the Atlantic coast but it has been re-established and prices are steady except for a half cent advance on haddock. There is no change in cooked meats.

CHEESE PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

CHEESE.—Wholesale cheese prices are unchanged but there is an easier feeling on the later makes of cheese. The demand is fair and the feeling is that the present prices on cheese will hold.

BUTTER MARKET IMPROVED

Montreal.

BUTTER.—A much improved condition is noted in the butter market. As is usual a demand for Canadian butter comes from the United States at this season. The demand for the domestic trade is also improved and a much stronger market is apparent. An advance in the price is more than likely before the end of the week.

FRESH PORK STEADY

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market locally has ruled steady after the advance of a week ago and on account of the more seasonable weather the demand for fresh killed hogs has shown an improvement. Select light weight bacon hogs are quoted at from $11.75 to $12 a cwt., weighed off cars and dressed hogs are selling at $16.50 and $17 per cwt. The demand for fresh meat has shown some improvement all around. Beef prices show no change.

Montreal.

FISH.—The colder weather has brought an improved demand for fish as well as an increase in the number of retailers handling fish. The unusually mild weather in the past month hurt the demand but the change has come. Prices are about steady except for an advance of one half cent on haddock. The bad storms on the Atlantic of last week for a time tied up the supply of fresh fish but it has been righted and the market is steady again.

POULTRY MARKET FIRMER

Montreal.

POULTRY.—Although there is no definite change in the poultry market there is a stronger feeling since supplies are not as plentiful and in a wholesale way there is a better demand. Dealers are buying now for the Christmas demand and poultry raisers are holding their supplies for the Christmas demand lend-a stronger tone throughout. Turkeys in particular show the upward tendency.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—There are few price changes in the produce markets this week. The firmness which characterized the butter and cheese markets for the past few weeks is not so noticeable and a quietness prevails. Live hogs are lower, but lard, shortening, smoked and cured meats, and other hog products, are steady and unchanged. Poultry is firmer under light receipts. The season for fresh caught lake fish is rapidly drawing to a close but a good supply of frozen fish is coming forward.

BUTTER MARKET QUIET

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The firmness which has prevailed in the butter market for the past several weeks does not seem to be quite so pronounced this week. In fact, dealers report the market quiet, which is accounted for by the lack of demand at the moment for export. Stocks of creamery butter in the Dominion on Nov. 1 amounted to 3,291,513 lbs. over that of the corresponding date last year.

CHEESE LESS ACTIVE

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The activity and strength which has characterized the cheese market during the past few weeks is not so pronounced this week, and like butter, the reason is attributed to the quietness in the export market. Stocks, however, are not large. According to the government report, stocks for all Canada on Nov. 1 showed a decrease of 12,834,379 lbs., as compared with same date last year.

SHORTAGE IN BACKS

Toronto.

PROVISIONS.—Other than to an inclination for a slight shortage on back bacon, this market is without feature this week. In the case of backs, some packers are having some difficulty in filling orders, claiming that the reason for it is due to the big demand at this season for fresh loins of pork. The demand for smoked and cured meats is active and quotations are steady and unchanged.

GIVES EXCELLENT VALUE

The MacLean Publishing Co., Ltd.

We enclose cheque for $4.00 for one year's subscription to CANADIAN GROCER. We consider this trade paper of excellent value. The "Henry Johnson" articles are worth the price of the paper. Be sure you keep them up. We don't like to get an issue without one as we always turn to them the first thing. He has the right line of valuable facts and the experiences of brother merchants given in his articles gives a very personal touch. Good luck to you.

WANT GROCERIES INCLUDED IN LIST OF GOODS EXEMPTED

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—Representatives of the Retail Stores' Association appeared before the city council recently and demanded a show down regarding the closing by-law. They will urge that groceries be included in the goods exempted, and, in the alternative, that enforcement of the by-law be suspended till representations made to the provincial legislature have been dealt with.

LIPTON'S "Coupon System" will help you . . . . . .

TO SHOW your customers how good Lipton's Tea is and to help you in selling it, we have commenced a coupon system that will wean many of your customers away from buying poor grade, cheap teas from the peddler at the door.

Give us a list of your customers—especially your best ones. We will send each of them a post card coupon. This coupon is worth 10 cents to the customer in your store. We ask you to redeem it on a pound of Lipton's Tea and you will receive a cheque for full amount of redeemed coupons.

Don't let the peddler get away with the tea trade of your district. He cannot duplicate Lipton quality, or Lipton flavor.

Buying and Selling

no longer a personal matter

Commenting upon the advancement made in better merchandising, an influential newspaper editor recently said:

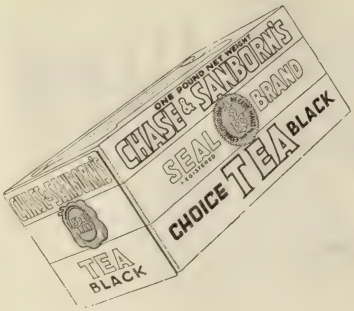
> "For countless generations buying and selling were intensely personal matters. During our own generation an innovation known as advertising —or massed selling—became a factor. It constitutes an advance far greater than all the progress made in past centuries."

No one better realizes the true significance of this fact than the wide-awake grocer.

His better judgment has taught him to put public opinion first; he wants to know what his customers think of the goods he stocks.

The good-will of the great Canadian consuming public, together with the friendly co-operation of the grocer, is the biggest asset of the Canadian Postum Cereal Company.

It took many years of steady year-round advertising to establish the national popularity of POST TOASTIES, GRAPE-NUTS, INSTANT POSTUM and POSTUM CEREAL.



That, together with Highest Quality and Moderate Prices, make the Buying and Selling of the Postum Line an easy matter for every grocer. Furthermore, the sale of these products is guaranteed.

There's nothing more to add but our famous slogan—

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

Increasing Sales $4,600 a Year

This Wayne Honest Measure Pump has sold more than 31,000 gallons of gasoline for its owner in eighteen months. At, say conservatively, 22c a gallon, this is almost $7,000 in sales from one line of merchandise alone --- about $4,600 a year.

A Wayne Honest Measure Pump in front of your store will add a good volume of gasoline sales to your yearly total. And gasoline is a line of merchandise which has a very high turnover and which every grocer can handle profitably.

Many grocers sell gasoline now, but only a very few take advantage of the trade possibilities in selling it at the curb. All your regular retail gasoline business can be handled at the curb, of course, where the fire danger is greatly reduced and where unpleasant odors are kept outside your store.

And, in addition, you can change your handling of gasoline from an "accommodation" proposition to a real profit make because you can sell to the automobile trade which passes your door.

A Wayne Pump will be your choice, of course. The one shown here has been entirely satisfactory. "It's a good pump. There's no better," says its operator, But then all Wayne owners say the same thing.

Write for Bulletin 276-CG and let us tell you how you can profitably increase your annual volume of business. No obligation, of course.

LARGE HAULS OF HERRINGS ON PACIFIC COAST

According to a recent report there have been some very large catches of herring made off the coast of British Columbia. In fact, one firm says that they themselves have caught as much as 200 tons of herring in one day which would probably mean 1,500,000 fish. Their total catch during the last season, which begins about the middle of February, was in the neighborhood of 50,000 tons, about 400,000,000 fish.

Grape pressing in October opened the 1923 season for Grape Juice. We have been busy pressing a large tonnage of Choicest Grapes,—preparing Marsh's for the new season.

The Juice from October pressing will be available for distribution early in the new year.

The Marsh Grape Juice Co. is the only manufacturer in Canada of Grape Juice, who sold their entire 1922 production. Our empty storage cellars permitting us to take full advantage of the splendid Grape Crop, and assuring our distributors that Marsh's for the new season will be all the juice of new pressing.

Marsh's for 1922 has been widely distributed. Our product has easily proven to be the best seller in Grape Juice. It pleased the consumer, —both Jobbers and Retailers have been well satisfied and convinced that, "There is another Grape Juice."

1923 PRICES.—Buyers are well advised, who withhold placing orders for Grape Juice until they know of the Marsh selling plan for the 1923 season. Prices to be announced in the immediate future.

That's why Mr. P. J. Stacey, of Chatham, Ontario, put Eureka Refrigeration Equipment in his whole store

LISTEN!

"I bought a large Eureka Butcher's Refrigerator some time ago from you, which gave me perfect satisfaction. I soon found though that it wasn't large enough, so I decided to put in an ice machine and equip my store with first class equipment.

"I decided that the Eureka Refrigerator Co., could 'deliver the goods,' because of the satisfaction I got from the first refrigerator. So I gave them the order for another large cork insulated Refrigerator together with my order for 20 ft. of Mechanical Cold Storage Counters. My confidence was not misplaced, for both the new equipments are working fine. I can keep my meats in A1 shape in my refrigerators and can display them in the best way to increase sales, in my new Counters.

"The service that the Eureka Refrigerator Company gave me when installing this order was of the highest credit to them. I'm more than satisfied."

-fill the Christmas Sock with orange profits this year

Sunkist California Navels
Will Help You Fill the Sock —Now and Later

THE fruit is of exceptional quality,—firm, sound, sweet and juicy. And, like all good California oranges, easiest to peel, slice or segment. Early indications promise ample supply of large and medium sizes — 126's, 150's, and 176's.

These are ideal sizes for early season and Christmas demand. Customers prefer large-sized fruit for Holiday use.

Crop and market conditions are such that we confidently predict an excellent Holiday orange business for the trade this year.

The amount of orange business you do at Christmas depends very much on how you handle oranges now. Nothing is quite so colorful and attractive in a window as a display of bright California oranges. For Christmas week nothing is more appropriate.

And the store that attracts new orange buyers is drawing trade on other lines.

Try this plan this year. See for yourself. Get a stock of bright, cheery California oranges right out in front now where they tempt buyers. And watch your orange profits mount.

Get These Window Displays

We have some splendid window display material just waiting to go to work for you. Lithographed in several strong colors it makes a fine background for the oranges themselves. Just fill out the coupon and send it at once so you will be ready for business-getting Christmas displays.

Why Does He Feature Imported Vegetables?

Montreal Retailer Brings Up Point That Requires Careful Study —Says That His Customers Are Quite Willing to Pay Extra for Quality—Opinions on the Attitude of the Wholesale Buyer, Manufacturer and Retailer

MONTREAL (Special.)—A local grocer who had a large and striking display of an imported corn in his window, was asked by a Canadian Grocer representative why he saw fit to make such a feature of these goods while the Canadian pack was given little or no attention. This was his reply: "I have a demand for a higher grade of canned corn than our Canadian packers put up. I found that grade in the United States. I bought a small order and found that it pleased my customers. Many of them now order that brand by name and will take no other. They are quite willing to pay a little more for it, and so it is my duty to meet their needs. This year I bought a large order of it and I am featuring it, knowing that by so doing I will build up my sales. If I could get that same uniform grade in Canada I would not think of going to the United States for it.

"I have tried hard to get that grade in Canada. I have offered to place a large order one year ahead with a Canadian firm if they will pack corn for me equal in quality to the imported, but I cannot get it. What I want is a good pack of sweet corn which is uniform in grade throughout; one in which I can put my confidence, selling it to my most particular customers without a doubt that it might not be up to standard. I want to be able to push its sale and stake my reputation on its quality. Frankly, I do not think there is a grade of Canadian canned corn on which I would care to risk so much. But I feel justified in putting all my confidence into this brand and making it a feature.

Believes In the Better Quality

"I am well aware that Canadian packers cannot afford to pack a line for which there is only a limited demand and that, with the much greater population to serve in the United States, the packers there can find a big demand for a high class line. I do feel, however, that if our canners examined their market carefully they would find a bigger demand than they now know of and they would also find the retail grocery trade willing to co-operate with them not only in featuring the Canadian goods but in placing their orders far enough ahead to insure that the whole pack would be taken up. In the meantime, I for one, find it necessary to go elsewhere to get the brand of canned corn for which I have found a particular demand among my customers."

The Problems that Arise

Editor's Note:—The opinions of this Montreal merchant have come up at a time when the subject of price, quality and service are uppermost in the minds of hundreds of dealers in Canada to-day. It brings up the point as to whether the insistence on a low price on the part of some wholesalers and retailers, has any bearing on the quality of goods manufactured by any of the Canadian firms.

Discussing the entire matter with a number of retailers and grocery brokers, it looks as if many merchants believe they must get goods at a price from the wholesaler that will permit them to sell on a competitive basis with the chain and self-serve stores.

Is Wholesaler to Blame?

For instance the opinion is advanced by one prominent broker that the wholesale dealer is endeavoring to buy on a price basis for his trade under the belief that the trade requires low priced goods in order to compete with the chain stores, self serve stores, etc. This, of course, does not mean that the chain and other stores are not purchasing quality goods. Naturally they buy in the best markets and to suit their particular clients.

This man affirms there are some wholesalers quite ready to purchase a pack of canned goods at the lower price no matter who the canner may be, or what the quality of the goods is, or considering the length of time the product has been packed. The canner, not caring to lose the business, would naturally try to meet a price which the wholesale grocer thinks he should be able to quote. So basing his reasoning upon these suppositions, the broker suggests that quality in such a case is not of first consideration.

Jam Quality Recalled

It is common knowledge that the condition of the Canadian jam industry during the past couple of years has not been of the best, resulting in manufacturers strongly competing with one another on a price basis. If what the above mentioned broker thinks is correct, then it may have been the attitude of the wholesale grocery buyer that caused this competition in the jam industry and tended, on the part of some producers at least, to turn out a lower quality product than they otherwise would have done.

One prominent dealer tells Canadian Grocer that undoubtedly the demand for price from the merchant who is straining every business policy to meet the chain store and self-serve store prices, has in some degree been reflected in the quality of goods that are sold. He believes strongly in the ability of the Canadian manufacturer to turn out quality goods and cited case after case where such is being done. Some of these manufacturers, he claims, did not endeavor to meet the prices of competitors and have maintained quality throughout the period of the past two or three years. On the other hand, he declares, there are certain goods of a standard that he does not think can be purchased from Canadian firms.

A retailer claims, as does the Montreal dealer, that there are a great many of his customers who will readily pay extra for the higher quality product. He cited a case of one of his best customers who some time ago rather objected to the price he was charging for a certain brand of Canadian made strawberry jam. He had been featuring this brand almost exclusively but decided to get in a line that he could sell cheaper. This particular customer took a jar of it home and brought it back next day. She showed him a hard, colored substance she had found in it which looked much like some kind of dye. This gave him his opportunity to point out the difference between the two lines and naturally this customer is again purchasing the better quality. Not only this, but he uses this instance at every opportunity to sell his other customers on the better quality brand.

This merchant does not see any advantage in a dealer urging the sale of brands of goods at a loss, or with little or no profit for the privilege of being able to sell at the same price as any competitor.

He believes he must offer to his customers something more than price, and feels that his method of competing with the chain store and other stores is to offer his trade different goods or different brands of goods, of high quality that he can personally stand behind. He is more than willing to purchase his goods from the Canadian packer or manufacturer and pay a fair price for them providing he can get the quality that is necessary to maintain the good-will and confidence of his customers in his particular store. The jam he is pushing, together with the majority of his other products, are Canadian-made and he gets behind them because he believes in their quality.

Some Selling Direct to Dealer

The views expressed by the broker above referred to, to the effect that the wholesale grocery buyer is after price and that this has a great deal to do with the quality of goods the manufacturer turns out, is worthy of very careful thought. This man advanced the opinion further that it was this attitude on the part of many wholesale buyers that was compelling a good many manufacturers of high quality goods, to go direct to the dealer.

An opinion has also been stated that it is poor policy on the part of a retailer to try to compete on a price basis with the chain and self-serve stores which are in the majority of cases in a position to buy on more favorable terms; and that the progressive dealer who is successfully meeting this competition is not doing so by imitation. On certain goods it is not possible for him to compete with the chain store at a profit on a price basis, so he concludes the only method on which he can retain his trade is to have some appeal other than price. This is often different goods, personal service, delivery service, and a more direct contact with his individual customers.

Canadian Grocer has an open mind on the entire problem and would like to secure opinions from subscribers in any branch of the trade with their analysis. We should all work along the lines that have the best interests of the trade in view.

Higher Sales Tax Collected at Source

Conference of Representatives of Canadian Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Retailers Discusses All Forms of Taxation—Trend of Opinion Favors a 5% Tax to Do Away With Proposed Receipt Tax and That Tax be Collected at Source

TORONTO, Dec. 6. (Special).—Committees representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, wholesalers' associations, and the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada met in joint conference here yesterday and to-day for the purpose of discussing problems arising out of taxation legislation now in force in this country.

Higher Tax at Source

All forms of taxation came up for discussion at this conference. The trend of opinion was in favor of an extension of the present sales tax from 4½% to five per cent., to provide for the proposed receipt tax revenue which is due to come into force on the first of January, also that the sales tax be collected at the source. As pointed out at this meeting, investigation had shown that the receipt tax would not be sufficiently productive of revenue to offset the heavy costs of its collection. Revenue from sales tax this year it is estimated will be fifty-seven millions. With an increase of half of one per cent. revenue expected from the receipt tax can be raised.

Another suggestion brought forth at the conference is one relating to the stamp tax. It was argued that a much more workable plan would be to charge two cents on all amounts up to $100 and on amounts over that figure make the tax four cents.

This conference constituted a Drafting Committee from the three branches of trade to arrive at a common policy of taxation acceptable to all. This policy will be reported back to the individual organizations, and when approved, a joint delegation will proceed to Ottawa where the suggestions agreed upon will be laid before the government.

J. R. Shaw, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, was in the chair.

The Retailers' Position

The Retail Merchants' Association have for some time past advocated a sales tax at the source.

The contention was made by officials of the Association at the gathering that the sales tax should be collected at the source of supply, viz., from the manufacturer and the importer, and from as few channels as possible, so as to save annoyance and expense in the collection of the same. When the sales tax was placed on the Statute Books by the late government in 1921, it was surrounded with a great many annoying difficulties, as far as the retail trade was concerned. The Act itself was poorly drafted and full of confusion and contradictions. In order to ascertain the retailers' position, it was necessary to undertake a number of lawsuits, as will be remembered by a large number of retail merchants, in order to have the courts determine the meaning of the Act. It never was the intention to endeavor to escape the payment of a fair share of taxation. The endeavor was to keep the payment of the sales tax down to the source of supply, as always advocated, so as to save the expense of the employment of a host of tax collectors.

"We have always frankly admitted that although manufacturers and importers were asked to collect the tax, in reality all the taxes they pay they pass on to the retail merchants and they in turn have to do the best they can to collect them from their customers," another official stated.

A Distinct Sales Tax

"What we have always contended for was a clear, distinct Sales Tax Act, one that could be easily understood and easily followed, and one that would not be applied to every small retail merchant in the country who sells soft drinks or makes a few home-made candies or currant bread or pastry, or other like small articles for sale, and which forced them to take out a manufacturers' license and be called manufacturers, but who were not to be allowed to be taxed in the same manner as manufacturers. Our contention is that when legislators make laws, they should be consistent and clear, and, as far as our Association is concerned, we intend to see that all legislation that is passed which affects the retail trade is made as intelligible as possible, and if it is not we intend to call the attention of our members and the public to it, and hold it up to the public view."

4½ Per Cent. From Wholesaler

Representations made by some manufacturers present and from some wholesalers suggest that the Sales Tax may not be absorbed by any section of the trade, that the Sales Tax from the manufacturer to wholesaler on goods bought for resale be eliminated, that the Sales Tax from wholesaler to retailer be 4½%, and that the Sales Tax from manufacturer to retailer be 4½%.

Wholesale Grocers Oppose

The position of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association on this question of sales tax collection was outlined by representatives present. This association is not dissatisfied with the present operation of the tax, but should any change be made, would favor it being collected entirely at the source. The wholesale grocers are opposed to a sales tax of 4½ per cent. from the wholesaler to the retailer.

LOCKED IN REFRIGERATOR FOR SEVERAL HOURS

Guelph, Dec. 5.—Kenneth Walker, a Guelph young man, son of G. W. Walker, had a thrilling experience one Sunday night recently, when he was locked in a refrigerator at the Hugh Walker & Sons plant here. The young man visited the warehouse of the company early Sunday evening to inspect the flow of ammonia to the refrigerator. It was necessary to turn off the flow, and Mr. Walker went inside the refrigerator to see that everything was alright. As he entered, the door snapped closed behind him and he was locked in where the temperature was ten above zero. With a board he found in the refrigerator Mr. Walker managed, after several hours' labor, to break off a piece of the door lock, and at three o'clock on Sunday morning he liberated himself, but he was half frozen when he staggered out.

CEYLON'S COCOANUT CROP IS SHORT

There has been a very serious shortage of rainfall in the cocoanut-growing districts of Ceylon for the past two months, says Consul Marshall M. Vance, Columbo, in a report to the U. S. Department of Commerce. It is predicted that due to the drought there will be a 15 to 20 per cent. decrease in outturn of cocoanuts during the balance of 1922 and the first six months of 1923. Nuts are now dropping before they are fully matured.

"Receipt Tax Will Handicap Trade"

Says Secretary Dominion Board R.M.A.—Penalty for Person Who Divides Amount Paid With Intent to Evade Tax—What Constitutes a Receipt—Exemptions—Will Hamper Trade

"THIS ACT will give the retail trade of Canada, as well as other interests, a staggering blow when it comes into operation. It will disrupt every cash and credit sales slip and cash register system that is now in existence throughout Canada, and it will add more expense in a great many cases, to the office staff of retail merchants than the amount that will be paid to the government by them in stamps."

The foregoing observations, together with others of like nature, are made in a memorandum on the question of the operation of the tax on receipts which comes into effect the first of January, 1923, which has just been issued by E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

Special mention is made of the fact that a penalty is provided for the person who separates or divides the amount paid, with intent to evade the tax.

Retailers Should be United

Every retail merchant in Canada is urged to take a deep personal interest in this matter. The Dominion Board feels that the measure should be defeated if possible, and therefore calls upon all merchants to work together and act together under one common direction.

The memorandum follows:

What the Act Requires

According to the Special War Revenue Act which was passed at the last session of the Dominion Parliament, and which will come into operation on January 1st, 1923, upon all receipts of ten dollars ($10.00) and upwards there must be affixed thereto an adhesive stamp of two cents (2c), or, unless there is impressed thereon by means of a die, a stamp of the value of two cents (2c), which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the receipt is given before he delivers it out of his hands. Cancellation shall be effected by the person who cancels the stamp, writing or impressing his name or initials on or across the stamp, together with the true date of such writing or impressing.

What a Receipt Means

A receipt means any note, memorandum or writing whereby any money amounting to ten dollars or upwards, or any bill of exchange or promissory note for money amounting to ten dollars or upwards, is acknowledged or expressed to have been received or repaid, or whereby any debt or demand, or any part of a debt or demand, of the amount of ten dollars or upwards is acknowledged to have been settled, satisfied or discharged, or which signifies or imports any such acknowledgment, and whether the same is, or is not, signed with the name of any person.

Exemptions

The receipts which are exempted under the Act are as follows:

(a) A receipt for any money deposited in any bank to be accounted for to the person to whose credit the money is deposited.

(b) A receipt or document in the nature of a receipt which is taxable under any other section of this Act.

(c) An acknowledgment by a bank of the receipt of a bill of exchange or promissory note for the purpose of being presented for acceptance or payment.

(d) A receipt for or upon the payment of money paid for any purpose to or by His Majesty for or out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada or for or out of the Consolidated or General Revenue Fund of any Province of Canada.

(e) A receipt endorsed or otherwise written upon or contained in any instrument liable to stamp duty, and duly stamped, acknowledging the receipt of the consideration money therein expressed.

All Legislation Should be Made Clear

"Sub-section (b) of the exemption clauses is not clear," says Mr. Trowern. "We took it up with the Department but found that no rulings have been made yet. We suppose they mean that when a cheque is received in payment for an article or in payment of an account, that when stamps have been put on the cheque it is not necessary to put them on the receipt. This is another evidence of poor legislative drafting, and we contend that all legislation should be drafted in plain, simple language."

Penalty for Violation

Any person who violates any of the provisions of the above sections of the Act, or who refuses to give a receipt, duly stamped, or who, upon the receipt of a payment to the amount of ten dollars or upward, gives a receipt for a sum not amounting to ten dollars (when the actual amount received is over ten dollars) or who separates or divides the amount paid with intent to evade the tax, shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding one hundred dollars.

It Will Disrupt Every Cash and Credit Sales Slip

"This Act was passed by the Government on June 27th, 1922, and it will come into operation on January 1st, 1923, if the Government, in the meantime, does not see fit to have its operations suspended, which we hope they will," says Mr. Trowern.

"This Act will give the retail trade of Canada, as well as other interests, a staggering blow when it goes into operation. Only those engaged in the retail trade have any idea of what it means to carry out the provisions of this Act. It will disrupt every cash and credit sales slip, and cash register system that is now in existence throughout Canada, and it will add more expense, in a great many cases, to the office staff of retail merchants than the amount that will be paid to the Government by them in stamps.

"Its operations will cut both ways. In the case of fruit and produce dealers, when retail merchants purchase fruit, vegetables, produce, poultry or eggs, etc., from farmers and market gardeners, it will be necessary for the farmers and market gardeners to carry at all times postage or revenue stamps with them, so that they can place them on the receipts they give to the retail merchants for the goods they sell to retail merchants when they want a receipt for the same. If the farmers and market gardeners refuse to place stamps on their receipts and to cancel the same they will be subject to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. Or take the case of a retail merchant who takes a receipt from his employees for salaries received, the employees must also carry a supply of stamps so as to place stamps on the receipts they give for their salaries, and cancel the same, or they will be subject to a fine.

Trade Must Not be Hampered by Governments

"There are a large number of other illustrations that could be given but the above are sufficient to show that this is another piece of annoying and badly considered legislation, that will not only annoy retail merchants but will add to the cost of doing business without giving the Government the amount they could secure by a less expensive system, as far as retail merchants are concerned. No effort, as far as we know, was made by the Government to ascertain what effect this complicated system would have on the retail trade; it has evidently been merely recommended by someone unfamiliar with retail trade conditions, and it was then thrust upon us when the budget was brought down,

Sells 250 lbs. of Chocolates in Two Days

Scandrett Bros., London, Ont., Recently Displayed Five Pound Boxes of Chocolates in the Window With the Above Results—Devotes Entire Side of Store to Display and Says it is Worth Two Counters

Written Especially for Canadian Grocer by Amy Campbell

LONDON, Dec 5.—Perhaps one of the best locations in London, Ont., to test the results of window-displays is that of Scandrett Brothers, some half dozen shops from the busiest section of the city. The store itself is built on the very long and very narrow plan which may veritably be said nevertheless to "be equal to anything," in the splendid arrangement of goods along the entire length of one side. It is a real demonstration of what can be done in variety and interest with limited space and given lines to deal with.

The open display of goods begins at one side of the centre door, where very narrow shelves hold seasonable things that delight in the cool breath of out-of-doors, such as green baskets of brilliant tomatoes or glowing cranberries, and cases of golden "ciscoes" or haddies. Somehow there is a "walk-right-in" air about the very door, as the tables and shelves of goods along the left-side entrance invite with their glimpsed open displays.

The walls at the front are packed with square tins of various fancy biscuits and cakes and immediately below them is a narrow table very low to just meet the tilted boxes of vegetables. The table and boxes are painted a harmonizing green to foil the colors of the carrots, cabbages, spinach, celery, parsnips and lettuce and the result is most pleasing. The table supports red-lined baskets of rose and cream California grapes, brown nuts and figs and baskets of cranberries.

Displays on the Shelves

None the less interesting to patrons is the continued display of shelved walls holding all manner of canned and bottled goods along the inner walls of the store. Just below the shelves is a table of uninterrupted length well laden with varying lines of pineapple jars, full of luscious fruit, blending deliciously with the golden glasses of honey and rich fruit tones of marmalade, with pyramids of canned goods towering above the fruits in the more obscure parts of the table. But the space from the table to the floor remained to be utilized and this was quite originally filled with green stands holding bushel baskets of different grades and prices of grapefruit, oranges and lemons. This display gives a rich glow of color to the interior of the store and is a centre of interest for all eyes. All goods in the entire display are price-ticketed.

"This is a poem," one says to J. B. Scandrett in the early morning of a shopping visit on market day, "but won't it be all pulled to pieces by to-night?"

"Of course it will," he admits pleasantly and generously, "and that's the way we'll want it to be."

"The prosperous signs of a busy day," one gathers and continues the objectional possibilities by asking, "Don't you find that people often spoil the goods by looking them over with their hands as well as their eyes?"

"Very, very seldom," Mr. Scandrett answers. "Customers delight in choosing their own goods and it is not very often they forget that others in turn come after them and make a choice. Indeed we have had almost no trouble in that respect."

"But does it pay to devote the entire

"New Clauses Equally Objectionable"

Secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association Says Amended Bill in Anti-Combine Legislation Turns the Attorney-General's Department Into a Detective Bureau Giving the Attorney-General the Double Function of Detective and Judge

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—As referred to in last week's issue of Canadian Grocer, the anti-combine legislation of the Ontario government, introduced in a bill at the close of the last session, has been subject to considerable change, the chief change of importance being that of providing the attorney-general with power to take civil as well as criminal action for an injunction to restrain the carrying out of agreements which may not be in the public interest. Justice Orde, in his findings a few months ago, in the case against the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, declared that the attorney-general had no such powers. The new bill will provide them. The opposition of manufacturers and wholesalers against the suggested anti-combine legislation affecting the question of fixed price agreements was so strong that the bill in its original form was withdrawn and an amended bill drafted.

How Attorney-General Can Proceed

A. W. Roebuck, K.C., who acted as committee counsel throughout the sittings, described procedure under the new bill as follows:—

"The attorney-general, on receipt of an affidavit that an agreement being not in the public interest is known to exist, will cause the parties concerned to be examined for discovery prior to any action being taken. He will have the right to file application with the High Court ex parte to examine any parties to the agreement or any person who has knowledge of the agreement and to have documents, memoranda, books, etc., produced before any civil action is taken."

In this way, according to Mr. Roebuck, the defendant will have an opportunity of giving all details of the case and if there are sufficient grounds, the offender will be warned of action to be taken unless the practice is stopped. Thus little if any publicity will be given the case because the examination for discovery is held privately with legal representatives the only ones in attendance other than the defendant.

Proves Value Of Agreements

The new bill is to be reported at the next session of the Legislature, and it is expected to provide the necessary machinery to assist the department in the measure of regulation and supervision of industrial agreements such as the attorney-general is desirous of having. The final meeting of the committee this week saw a unanimous vote to make a substitution for the original bill.

Asked concerning the reasons for the action taken, Mr. Roebuck stated that, while only those trade representatives who favored the establishment of price agreements gave evidence, the weight of their arguments was such as to prove very convincing of the value of such agreements under certain circumstances. There was a noticeable lack of any co-operative action in favor of the more drastic legislation, there being not a single resolution or favorable expression of opinion in support of anti-combine legislation made to the committee since early in the year when the body took up its duties.

Mr. Roebuck stated that there was a good deal to be said on both sides of this question. There had been much misunderstanding concerning the proposed bill and its effect. The bill, as it now stands under revision, does not meddle with existing laws, he stated. It simply gives more machinery for the enforcement of the law in the province. He holds that proof that such machinery is needed can be seen in the fact that there has only been a single criminal action along this line for the past twelve years, while there have been three civil actions which resulted in convictions.

Mr. Roebuck stated that, as a general rule, the English favor freedom of contract, but they have free trade whereas in Canada and the United States there are more restrictions and hence there is less freedom of contract throughout.

Mr. Roebuck's personal opinion is that price-fixing agreements are in restraint of trade and as such are absolutely illegal. Some other authorities differ with him on this subject. He advises

Christmas Cake:—Wash and dry thoroughly one-half pound currants, cut into small pieces two and one-half pounds seeded raisins, slice very thin and cut into strips one-half pound of citron and one-half pound candied peel, chop finely one pound of figs and one pound almonds. Add to the prepared fruit two tablespoons lemon juice and one-third cup grape juice. Cream two cups butter, add two cups sugar gradually and beat thoroughly. Separate the yolks and whites of twelve eggs. Beat the yolks until thick and lemon colored and the whites until stiff and dry, add the yolks to the butter and sugar mixture. Mix and sift four cups flour, two teaspoons cinnamon, three-quarters teaspoon each, nutmeg, allspice and mace. Reserve one-third cup with which to dredge the fruit and add the rest to the sugar and butter mixture. Add the floured fruit and mix well, then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into deep buttered pans, cover the top with oiled paper and steam three hours, then bake one and one-half hours in a slow oven.

in the most autocratic manner, to take effect on January 1st, 1923. In our opinion, it should be suspended, and as we are an active part of the electorate of the Dominion, every retail merchant should do all within his power to let the legislators of our Dominion Parliament understand that, as loyal citizens, we want to help to pay every cent of our war debt, but we must not be hampered and annoyed in our daily business transactions, and be subjected to paying heavy fines. In other words, Governments must be told to keep their hands off business, and allow it to flow as freely and as rapidly as possible through the natural channels of trade.

All Unnecessary Expenses Should be Avoided

"Before we are asked to pay we should be consulted as to what effect any proposed system would have on our business, as the more unnecessary expenses that are put upon us the more the public will be called upon to pay in the end. Every retail merchant knows that when postage stamps are placed on receipts or cheques, or any other documents, for the purpose of paying our war debts, that it is an unbusinesslike system, as we have been led to believe that postage stamps and Inland Revenue war stamps are for entirely different purposes, and if they cannot be kept separate—and it appears that they cannot—this fact alone should be sufficient to condemn that method of the collection of revenue. The present system of placing stamps on cheques, drafts, notes and bills of exchange is bad enough, and, in our opinion, should be abolished without adding the further annoyance by adopting the same system on receipts.

"This legislation, if it goes into effect on January 1st next, will affect all classes alike—farmers, manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, bankers, the laboring classes and all municipalities and corporations. We are well aware that the Government wants money to pay our war debts but we want it raised in the least annoying manner, and we consider that when we are made partners with the Government in order to collect it, we should be consulted as to how we think the money should be raised, without disturbing our commercial operations."

Canadian Grocer that the question will come in for some future consideration in the very near future and a definite stand taken on it.

According to A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, the wholesale grocers find the clauses that have been substituted for the ones declaring all re-sale price arrangements illegal, equally objectionable. "The Supreme Court," Mr. Pyke stated, "either before or after action brought as hereinafter provided may make an order on the ex parte application of the attorney-general, entitling him to examine under oath the persons so named and to have production of all books, documents, records, memoranda, letters or other writings relating thereto in accordance with the consolidated rules of practice of the Supreme Court of Ontario governing discovery.

"This looks as if the proposed bill will turn the attorney-general's department into a detective bureau and also endow it with the power of a court proceedings, giving the attorney-general the double function of detective and judge with the right within himself to decide and then formally ask the Supreme Court to give its approval."

POTATOES SELL AT LOW FIGURE

The price of potatoes fell to 18c a bushel at producing centres throughout northern Michigan, says the Journal of Commerce, New York, this being the lowest figure paid by buyers in years, owing to overproduction in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota and to the inability to obtain freight cars. Warehouses at Gaylord, Mich., are filled to overflowing with potatoes and many buyers are not in a position to accept more stock.

The New Anti-Combines Bill

BILL No. 207, An Act for the Better Prevention of Certain Commercial Agreements, which was given its first reading in the Ontario Legislature on April 6 last and which was to have come into force on the first day of July, 1922, has been completely altered. As a matter of fact, according to information received, nine of its eleven sections have fallen by the wayside, all that remains of the original bill being:

"No. 207 1922

BILL

"An Act for The Better Prevention of Certain Commercial Agreements.

"1. This Act may be cited as The Commercial Agreements Act, 1922.

"2. In this Act:

" 'Agreement' shall include contract, arrangement, understanding, combination and conspiracy whether written, verbal or tacit."

Now, the alternative sections making up the balance of the new bill are as follows:

"3. Upon the Attorney General filing an affidavit of any person setting forth,

(a) that an agreement such as is described in section 4 is in existence;

(b) that the deponent verily believes that such agreement is unlawful;

(c) that certain persons, naming them, are parties to, or have knowledge of such agreement or circumstances connected therewith.

"The Supreme Court either before or after action brought as hereinafter provided may make order on the ex parte application of the Attorney General, entitling him to examine under oath the persons so named and to have production of all books, documents, records, memoranda, letters or other writings relating thereto in accordance with the consolidated Rules of Practice of the Supreme Court governing discovery.

"4. An action may be brought by the Attorney General of Ontario in the Supreme Court for a declaration that an agreement.—

(a) constitutes a conspiracy in restraint of trade as being an agreement between two or more persons to do or procure to be done an unlawful act in restraint of trade; or

(b) is an agreement to unduly limit the facilities for transporting, producing, manufacturing, supplying, storing or dealing in any article or commodity which may be a subject of trade or commerce; or

(c) is an agreement to restrain or injure trade or commerce in relation to any such article or commodity; or

(d) is an agreement to unduly limit or restrain the manufacture or production of any such article or commodity or to unreasonably enhance the price thereof; or

(e) is an agreement to unduly prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, barter, sale, transportation or supply of any article or commodity, and that such agreement is unlawful and void and for an injunction, mandatory order or other relief.

"5. If the Court finds that such agreement comes within any of the clauses from (a) to (e) of section 4 it shall declare such agreement illegal and void to all intents and purposes and the Court may make such order with respect to past and future dealings, rights or obligations of the parties to such agreement as may be deemed just and expedient having in view the course of business between the parties, the degree of good faith manifested by them in entering into, acting under, or carrying out such agreement and the protection of the public interest, and may make such further order as the circumstances require to prevent the carrying out of such agreement or any similar agreement.

6. This act shall come into force and take effect on the first day of June, 1923.

Buying a Store and What Should be Paid

Subscriber is Contemplating Purchasing a New Store in a Better Location, But Thinks the Overhead is Too High for the Sales—Lack of Information Makes for Incomplete Analysis

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

THIS correspondence explains itself:

Dear Sir:—I am an interested reader of your articles in Canadian Grocer. Having sold my store here lately, I am in the market for another. There being a strike here and I was not satisfied with my location, I sold. Now I have in view another store in which I think the overhead is too high for the sales. The location is a corner. There are six or seven other stores in town and this one carries meat and groceries. Would you care to advise me? Overhead charges are as follows:

Rent, monthly, $50.00.

Clerk hire, weekly, $18 and 10 per cent. discount on goods.

Trucks, $12 weekly.

Heat, $350 yearly.

Light, $4 monthly.

Insurance, $60 yearly.

Interest on fixture investment, $70 yearly.

Price of store, stock and fixtures, $3,500. Fixtures estimated at $1,700, rest stock and good will. I offered to buy at fixture estimate and pay market value for stock but was refused.

My answer:

The best I can give you is an incomplete analysis and tentative suggestions because of want of full information. The suggestions are given only to save time in further correspondence and as a basis for your calculations.

The value of any going business depends not so much on the capital invested as on its earning capacity. In the case of a grocery and meat business, that can only be judged in a general way on the basis of sales made; and you do not tell me how much business is being done in the store you have under consideration.

I have analyzed the figures you have given. The yearly total is $2,748. This takes no account of the extremely uncertain quantity of the 10 per cent. discount allowed to clerks. Incidentally let me say that is something I never would allow anybody. First, it is always too uncertain and indefinite; second, ten per cent. on such staples as groceries and meats is a ruinous percentage. It is always best to pay your help in money and have them pay you in money. More than that: It is perfectly proper to stipulate clearly when you engage help that they must buy their supplies from you. He must be an indifferent helper at best who will work for a man and not buy his supplies from his employer.

Do Not Sidestep Expense Items!

To get back to the $2,748. To that must be added interest at 7 per cent. to cover the extra $700 in fixtures. This because you have $1,700 listed for fixtures and the interest already provided for, $70, will cover $1,000 investment only. This is $50 more. Next, assume that it will take $5,000 to run that business, including everything, you must allow 7 per cent. on the total of $5,000. That is $350 a year. Take out the $120 already allowed for and you will have $230 additional to charge up for interest. Next, there is depreciation on fixtures of 10 per cent. on internal equipment and 20 per cent. on external, such as trucks, etc. That charge, therefore, will not be less than $200 a year. You will have to live, so you must have a salary, and I assume you will feel that you are worth at least $125 a month, or $1,500 a year. Now, our total is $4,728. We must still make provision for paper, twine and other packaging and for the upkeep and repair of truck, so let us put in $272 more. This is not that I consider the figure adequate, because I think the figure will run over that amount in actual practice, but because thus we make up the round, even figure of $5,000 total expenses.

Where, then, do we land? Figuring that expenses can run 16-2/3% in your locality on that kind of business, you would have to sell at least $30,000 worth of goods to make your investment promising. I think that such expense ratio is ample to allow in your locality for that kind of business. Groceries alone should not carry more than 14 or 14¼ per cent. in your neighborhood, but meats will run higher. So an average of 16-2/3 per cent. may be considered safely conservative.

You will see, therefore, that the business must do at least $30,000 and it would be better to do $35,000 to make the investment attractive.

After you have read this, you might write me further. Tell me anything you like not already covered. Have you run a credit or cash business and which do you expect to run hereafter—and why? How much does delivery amount to? More of that same kind of stuff. Then I can be of more detailed help to you.

But He Is Still Silent

But my friend has written no more, so again I am up in the air. Maybe he felt my stuff was bunk. Maybe I kept him out of a bad deal. Perhaps he bought in the light of my suggestions and has been busy making my figures fit ever since—who knows: or, as the Mexican sayeth: "Quien Sabe?"

And another comes along rather likewise, sends me his trial balance for May and asks a lot of questions. Moreover, he promises; "Sometime, if you wish it, I'll give you a short sketch of our business; our 'ups and downs' have been many." He sends figures which seem to me to need most careful checking, so I write him:

I must have further details before I can answer intelligently. A hasty analysis of your statement seems to show expenses of 20½ per cent. This is based on sales of nearly $22,000 and total expenses of $4584.30. In making this analysis, I have omitted your figure of $1,120 for storage, also for freight and drayage. Won't you tell me some more about your business? How did you start? With how much money? When? What have been your sales each year? What are detailed expenses as they stand now? Explain the item of storage.

Well, there is no more from him.

But light shines in dark places, just the same! For here comes a man with no "shrinking violet stuff" about making sure that his name is omitted, and writes some mighty illuminating observations. For instance:

Your book on margins and "How to Retail Fruit Efficiently," is very helpful. I, however, would like to make a qualification embracing what I call the law of speed and bulk. It is this: If I can move two tons of oranges as rapidly as one ton of cheaper merchandise and the space rental and money invested are the same, I do not think it is quite fair to oranges to place the profits on the same percentage basis. The actual cost of moving a given quantity of matter should be considered.

Right you are. Absolutely right! That is why such carefully detailed analysis of average conditions which surround the retailing of citrus fruits is made in the book referred to. It does not cost the same percentage to handle every commodity. No question that $40. worth of sugar can be moved through any store for less cost than $4 worth of pineapple middles in glass. No doubt $50 worth of prunes can be handled at much less percentage than $5 worth of caviar.

The booklet, "Profits in Prunes," will give you other angles of this analytical study of the variations that properly creep into merchandising. And there can be no question of "fairness" about it. The law governing these things is that of economics—a natural law which, like gravitation, works into everything with the strictest impartiality. That law cannot be sidestepped. No man may avoid it. There is no question of fairness, nor of "believing" or failing to concede "belief" in it. It simply is there: and it works inexorably.

"We Believe" Does Not Belong in Economics

Yet here is something I find in a recent grocery paper, and, as it happens to be aimed at something I have worked out in detail—and as my conclusions have shown figures—it interests me:

THE TURNOVER FALLACY:—We have listened time and again to this magic word, "turnover," and we have been told that it costs 7 per cent. to sell sugar and that any percentage above this mark will give a profit, because sugar occupies an inexpensive place in floor space and because its turnover is very rapid. We have tried to convert ourselves to this theory because of the reliability of the men who champion it, but our experience does not lead us to their conclusion. They claim that as it costs only 7 per cent. to merchandise sugar, 10 per cent on the selling cost should show a profit and not a loss, but we believe that the retailer loses money on every dollar's worth of sugar sold at a less per cent. of profit than his average cost of doing business.

Now, my analysis of sugar was based on what actually took place in a well regulated store. It pictured conditions attainable in any store by a wakeful manager. It covered not merely rent and turnover. It covered those factors fully, but it also provided for light and heat, packaging, time, taxes, sales, credit, delivery, depreciation and interest; and it covered those items exactly, not by guess or estimate.

The same kind of analysis goes into my studies on oranges, prunes, apples and every other thing I am called upon to dissect. We are not done yet—not by any means. The circle is a wide one. But we are working constantly and I hope before so very long to have something on which the average grocer can put his finger and feel that he has the facts beneath his cuticle.

One thing, however, has been demonstrated far beyond the realm of anybody's "belief." That is, that no average of expense be taken as touch specific items. Two thousand men may average 5 ft. 8 in. tall and 159 pounds in weight, but when you come to deal with individuals, you find one who is 4 ft. 9 in. tall and weighs 98 pounds, and another who is 6 ft. 3 in. tall and weighs 264 pounds. Would you expect to fit each with the same size of clothing? No: yet the average would not be impaired by the variations.

We shall have advanced much when we have reached the point where this modification of the universality of the application of an average expense is clearly understood. We shall also be far ahead of our present status when we use "turnover" correctly, when we avoid such confusing terms as "selling cost"—what does that mean, anyway?—and cease to confound margin with profit.

But so long as men are thinking, we are getting somewhere, and any who question the reliability of any figures promulgated should take the course open to all of us. Analyse a bit themselves. I do not mean that they should accept the loose statement of the average storekeeper that it costs "about" so much, that a bag of sugar weighs out "just about" so many pounds and other similar things. Nobody has a patent on investigations of facts, and facts are everywhere. But we will make little progress so long as belief and facts are mixed indiscriminately and prejudice is accepted where only logical conclusions, based on facts, belong.

SELLS 250 LBS. OF CHOCOLATES side of the store to the display and shelving of goods when you might be using a very busy counter in the same spot?" is asked.

"Why, that side of the store beats two counters," Mr. Scandrett declares in a most satisfied way. "We wouldn't be without it for anything. The goods there just sell themselves and the people are delighted with it because they are doing their own purchasing and choosing and we find that they don't abuse the privilege."

The arrangement of the goods and the window preparations are in the capable hands of Spence Wilson, who brings a real love of his work to the task. Recently Mr. Wilson staged a successful window of chocolate bonbons of a well-known brand. The ground was of bright red and the five-pound boxes, some of which were opened, were pyramided in neat and artistic style, with a gay touch of roses and ferns, since bonbons and flowers have been associated together in so many important ways since ever love began.

250 lbs. of Chocolates in Two Days

These bonbons were specially priced and to prove that one does not always enter the grocery store with grim needs in mind, the public "took right to" this chocolate offer and the sales were two hundred and fifty pounds in two days.

"Our customers were delighted with the bonbons," Mr. Wilson says, "and we have had many coming back for a second order."

From this we gather that the whole world is not counting calories.

The Yuletide Season Approaches Apace

About the last minute of the last day before the great festival of the year breaks, you will be suddenly reminded that "Friend so and so" has been forgotten in the mad rush to complete that eleventh hour "shopping spree" — that next year you really must start earlier.

Let us prevent this. Avoid such a situation by a visit to our store. There are just a few days left. Come in to-morrow and see the fine array of specialties that we have—just the things that make the gifts that please. Here are a few suggestions:

Sales Tax at the Source

AS REPORTED on another page of this issue a conference of committees representing manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, met in Toronto this week for the purpose of discussing problems of taxation, with a view to arriving at some definite policy that would be acceptable to all. It would appear from the discussions that took place that a sales tax collected at the source is generally favored. An increase of half of one per cent. is suggested as a substitute for the receipt tax that it is proposed to bring into effect on the first of January next. It is argued that the said receipt tax will involve a heavy expenditure by way of collection, and the desired revenue can be better obtained by increasing the present sales tax from 4½ per cent. to 5 per cent. Another suggestion brought forth at this conference bears on the stamp tax as applying to cheques. Making the tax two cents on all amounts up to one hundred dollars, and four cents on amounts over that figure are suggested amendments.

From the standpoint of the retail merchant, he would welcome any change in the sales tax law, whereby the tax will be collected at the source. He has advocated this method for some time past. Placing the tax on the wholesalers' invoices has put the onus of collection on the retailer, and he maintains in a number of instances that he has not been able to charge it to his customers, and has had to pay it out of his own pocket. The elimination of the receipt tax would also meet with the approval of the retailer, as the collection of the same is bound to be cumbersome, adding another unnecessary duty on the already overburdened merchant.

Importance of Rapid Turnover

THERE is a subtle news interest in the report recently made by the Harvard University Bureau of Business Research that department store profits are too small. That the average net profit realized in the department store trade in 1921 was small, and that a readjustment of operating expenses is necessary to restore net profit to normal, according to a survey of the cost of doing business in department stores, is the summary of the report. A rapid rate of stock-turn is fully as important in department stores as in other types of business, it was found.

The bureau's summaries are based on reports from 301 firms in all parts of the country, with an aggregate volume of sales of nearly half a million dollars. The common figure for net profit among these firms during 1921, a year of business depression, was nine-tenths of 1 per cent.

The importance of a rapid rate of stock-turn was said to have been shown by the fact that those stores which in 1921 turned their stock less than 2.5 times had a common total expense figure of 28.5 per cent. of net sales, and an average net loss of 0.8 per cent., while those that turned their stock 3.5 times and over had a total expense of 27.1 per cent. and a net profit of 2.3 per cent. It is interesting to look over these figures in view of the fact that there is so much heard about department store methods and competition.

Undermining Business Progress

FIGURES which Canadian Grocer has secured in connection with governmental revenue for the seven months of the fiscal year compared with figures for the fiscal year ending March of this year reveal some very interesting facts. On the basis of revenue for the seven months, the total revenue for this year is estimated at four hundred million dollars, being an increase of eighteen million dollars over last fiscal year.

Of that total sixty-eight millions are from customs, fourteen million from post office, fifty-seven million from sales and stamp tax (an increase of sixteen million), eight and three-quarter million from business profits (a decrease of two million); fifty-one million from income tax (a decrease of thirteen million) and a decrease of five million in other sources of revenue.

It is quite evident from the foregoing that profits from business enterprise have been smaller in volume than last year. This is confirmation of the common opinion as to the trend of business at that time. It is also borne out to some extent by the decrease of thirteen million dollars revenue from income tax.

It must be kept in mind that the sales and stamp taxes, which show big increase, have only been operative since the budget was delivered in May. Most recent monthly returns show that these taxes are showing even greater proportional returns and bid fair to be productive of a very much larger revenue in future.

When the sales tax and stamp tax as now operative are showing such splendid returns and will continue to increase in volume as business expands, would it not be much better to let them carry the load, even if some small increase is necessary, than to apply an entirely new form of taxation which will involve much misunderstanding, handicap to business at a most vital point, and probably require a great deal of expensive administration in the form of checking and inspection?

Editorials in Brief

The frequent use of printers' ink will go a long way towards putting a final touch to that increased turnover so much desired, and especially during the next three weeks.

It is true that many people desire to buy goods at as low a price as possible. But after all, behind the desire to buy, lies the fact that it is the quality of the goods which clinches the sale.

The majority of merchants pride themselves on selling quality merchandise. That being the case, then why not tell the buyers about it, instead of saying so much about specials, low prices and cheapness?

Selling quality merchandise generally means more profit and a larger amount of money which the merchant can put into his "jeans" at the end of the year. On the other hand, selling cheap, low-price goods may mean the store jammed with people, but at the same time the merchant is taking a big chance of ruining himself.

Credit Rating Bureau of Erie, Pa.

Just as Manufacturers and Wholesalers Use Their Duns and Bradstreets, so the Merchants of Erie Obtain a Rating on Every Purchaser in Their Town—Newcomers Must First Have Credentials—Losses Are Nil to the Merchants

By E. DE WITT HUTT

MR. MERCHANT, if you want to buy a hundred dollars' worth of merchandise from any reputable wholesaler in this country, the first thing he does is to look up Duns or Bradstreets. He wants your rating; he wants to find out your financial standing to see if it is a safe proposition to sell merchandise to you, knowing he will get his pay for it.

Yet, when customers come to you to buy on credit what do you know of their rating, of their ability to pay? Do you know anything, or do you take any definite steps to find out about them?

Credit Rating Bureau

Erie, Pa., is a town of about 100,000 of a population. The merchants of Erie think it is good business to find out the ratings of the buying population of their town. They all do a large credit business and because they do this kind of a business they have organized a bureau. It is called the Retail Merchants' Credit Rating Bureau and, at present, there are about 100,000 ratings listed with the managers of the bureau. There are no customers in Erie who have not a rating of some kind with the manager of the bureau, and these ratings are changed from time to time as the circumstances of the customer may change. There are "C. O. D." customers, "slow rating" customers and there are "good" customers. Everybody is classified as soon as he or she becomes a potential customer in Erie.

First Steps

As soon as a newcomer enters a store in Erie and seeks credit, the machinery of the bureau is set in motion. The dealer into whose store the newcomer comes telephones the manager of the bureau and asks the rating of Mr. A. The cards are all conveniently arranged and may be looked up in a minute. The manager discovers that Mr. A. has not been entered in the files of the bureau at all. For the time being, therefore, Mr. A. must be rated as a C. O. D. customer and no merchandise is sold to him except he pays cash for it. But being a new man, the manager immediately begins to collect data with regard to Mr. A. which will enable them to give him a rating with all the merchants of Erie. He finds out where the newcomer is employed. He gets in touch with his employer and finds out from him what he can with regard to general character, where he was formerly employed and whether he regards the new man as a reliable citizen. The manager then writes away to his former place of employment and gets a line on any information available with regard to his standing in the community so far as the payment of his bills is concerned. With this information in his possession, he then gives the man a rating and this rating is for the information of all the merchants in Erie. Knowing that the system is in operation in Erie many of the newcomers bring credentials with them so that their credit may be immediately established.

Slow Rating

The slow rating customers are the ones that are watched carefully by the bureau and the merchants. There are circumstances which may change a man from a good account to that of slow rating. The files of the bureau may show Mr. B. as a good account. Mr. B. decides to build a house, or to buy an automobile or a piano or some other commodity which runs into a good deal of money. Merchants who have Mr. B. on their books begin to notice that he is not meeting his payments as per agreement, that is, he is either slow in meeting the amounts or he is cutting down on the amount which he agreed to pay. The matter is looked into and the cause of the change is discovered. From that moment, this man is rated as "slow rating" and the same freedom in granting him unlimited credit is partially withdrawn. It is more than likely that the merchant will say to Mr. B., after taking all the circumstances into account, "If you will agree to pay me a certain amount the first of each month, you can have further credit; if not you will have to pay cash for anything more that you buy."

In conversation with F. S. Bond, one of the leading merchants in Erie, he stated that the bureau was a splendid thing for the merchants. "It is the best credit bureau in the United States," said Mr. Bond to the writer. "Our losses in credit charges are absolutely nil. The idea back of this bureau is that if a customer is good to pay and it is profitable for us to open an account for him we certainly want to do it. If we adhered strictly to the rules and regulations governing the bureau we would never lose a cent and any losses that are sustained by merchants are due to the elasticity granted by the individual merchants rather than to any faultiness in the system. 'Dead beats,' for instance, we have no loss whatever from these. We are listed with every merchant and we place the collection of many of the accounts in the hands of the manager of the bureau and he makes more than his salary on the percentage we give him for such collections."

The merchants of Erie work together for mutual benefit in a very cordial manner. One thing they did recently indicates this, a thing that would usually be done by a Board of Trade or Commerce. A very large building in Erie, capable of employing 8,000 men, has been closed and held by the government since the end of the war. During the war it was used for government purposes and with the signing of the armistice, there was no further use for it. Offers have been made to the government for it but no action was taken. In the meantime a valuable property capable of employing many men was idle. The merchants organized a deputation, went to the government about it and secured the release of the building. It will mean employment to a number of idle men in Erie.

More Figs Are Now Coming to Canada

Montreal, Dec. 5. (Special).—Contrary to expectations, more figs are coming from Smyrna. At first it was reported that only fifteen per cent. of the crop could be saved but a few weeks ago Canadian Grocer published a statement that about thirty-five per cent. of the crop would be salvaged. Even local importers were surprised when they learned that a bigger supply of figs was available. When the disaster took place fig prices immediately went up on account of the shortage but since then an easier feeling has been noted.

Last week 17,000 lbs. of figs arrived in New York and are now being distributed. This shipment consists of both layer and pulled figs and the quality is reported to be good. After the settlement of affairs in the East the packers quickly went to work to salvage as much of the crop as possible. Some of it was over ripe but altogether thirty-five or forty per cent. of the total crop has been made ready for the market. For some time shipments were delayed on account of the financial condition of the country but the banks have now taken over the crop and they are supervising the marketing. Lower prices on figs may be expected as a result.

W. Humphrey Co. Ltd.; J. H. Lumbers, Jas. Lumbers Co. Ltd., (Toronto); H. C. Beatty, secretary Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and A. C. Pyke, secretary Wholesale Grocers' Association of Ontario, Toronto.

The refiners were represented by H. R. Drummond, president, and H. Thompson, secretary, of the Canadian Refineries; C. H. McLean, of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries; E. R. Turnbull and H. W. Fairlamb, of the Acadia Refineries, and L. J. Seidensticker, of the Atlantic Refineries.

The wholesale grocers are desirous that all sugars should be sold on the equalized rate basis, that is, at the Montreal price plus the freight to points outside of Montreal. This would permit quotations on the same basis everywhere.

The outcome of the conference was a promise on the part of the refiners to meet later and consider the proposal made by the wholesalers.

W. L. Wanamaker, Cordova Mines, has purchased a general store at Oshawa, and recently commenced business there.

Letters to the Editor

The Weight of Cheese

Editor Canadian Grocer:

The jobbers are insisting on selling cheese at factory-stamped weights. They take the advance in price when market advances, hold cheese for several months and ask the retailer to assume the shrinkage. The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa says they must give 16 ounces to the pound or plainly the retailer is entitled to get full weight. I do not think jobbers buy cheese at box-marked weight. There is as much as two to five pounds shrinkage in a 90-pound box. What I want to know is why the retailer should be loaded with this, or can it be legally done, any more than you can sell 1,800 pounds to a ton of coal?

—J. R. Kelly, Moose Jaw, Sask.

Editor's Note:—In buying cheese in quantities, the most satisfactory method is to buy it with the official weigher's certificate attached. This official weigher is appointed by the federal government upon recommendation of the board of trade in the city in which he resides. We understand, however, there are only two such officials in the Dominion, one in Montreal and one in Toronto. In Montreal it is the custom to weigh every box of cheese entering that city. But in Toronto this is not the custom and cheese is only weighed by the official at the request of the buyer or seller.

Cheese will shrink in transit and the longer it is kept naturally the greater the shrinkage. And it would therefore appear that the only way to buy cheese is to insist that it be reweighed. Of course, a claim could be made for shortage, but such disputes rarely terminate satisfactorily.

Making some enquiry among the wholesale trade in Toronto, the writer was informed in every instance that cheese was reweighed before being shipped to customers.

The reweighing of cheese has been the subject of much controversy for several years. The dealer does not wish to assume any loss through shrinkage if he can possibly avoid it, but the retailer is certainly justified in expecting at least the weight which he pays for. The retailer has the remedy in his own hands by insisting the cheese be reweighed when making the purchase and in the event of this not being done, to refuse payment.

Mailing Weekly Circular

Editor Canadian Grocer:

I think a small circular mailed weekly to a selected list of about 100, giving brief store news, perhaps on a post card, would be effective advertising. My range is too narrow for the daily press and hand bills left at the doors do not get enough attention. What do you think? Can you inform me where a small printing outfit suitable for such a purpose can be obtained? If the price is too high perhaps it would be better economy to deal with a printer.

—Old Subscriber.

Editor's Note.—In replying to your letter of the 12th. There is no doubt a weekly circular mailed to customers and prospective customers is a good idea, especially in a location where there is no local newspaper.

Post cards are alright but would hardly bring the result of a good letter. In writing such a letter it is a good plan to start it by mentioning something interesting about a new article or a seasonable line. Then follow up with some of the specials you are offering.

A small printing outfit is hardly advisable; it is rather expensive and you would also need to know something about printing. A duplicator might answer the purpose; it would cost about $50. But the better way would be to make arrangements with a local printer. By using a stated number each week you might get a special price.

Marketing of Lemons

Editor Canadian Grocer:

The United States Tariff Commission wishes to secure information regarding the marketing of California and Italian lemons in Toronto and in other Canadian cities. We shall esteem it a great favor if you will be kind enough to co-operate with us in this matter by furnishing answers to the following inquiries:

(1) Are California lemons regularly or only occasionally sold in Toronto? In other Canadian cities?

(2) In what months do California lemons appear in largest quantities? Italian lemons?

(3) Do receipts of California lemons fluctuate with seasonal changes or do they merely appear when Italian fruit is temporarily absent from the Canadian market?

(4) What comparison can you make between the selling price of California lemons and Italian lemons? (a) Messinas? (b) Verdellis? How do you explain these differences?

(5) Are either the California or the Italian lemons sold at auction?

(6) Are Italian lemons ever brought to Toronto or other Canadian cities via New York?

(7) In your price quotations on lemons, which we have examined for a number of years, we note Verdellis are quoted in the summer and fall and Messinas in the winter and spring. Will you kindly explain this change?

(8) Are the prices which you have quoted brokers' wholesale prices or auction prices?

(9) What size or weight of box is used as a basis for your quotations on Italian lemons?

The Tariff Commission will greatly appreciate your aid in this matter and we hope that such of these inquiries as you are unable to answer you will submit to members of the trade and will transmit their answers to us. An addressed envelope requiring no postage is inclosed for your convenience in answering.

Answer:—

1. California lemons are sold in Toronto and other Canadian cities the year round.

2. June, July and August are the months when lemons are the most plentiful. This applies to both California and Italian.

3. The season of the year naturally has something to do with the receipts of California lemons. For instance, in the summer months the consumption is greater, consequently receipts are larger than during other months of the year. The size of the crop is also considered a factor. When the crop is large, California lemons are more plentiful on this market, but a light crop generally means a scarcity.

4. California lemons usually sell at a higher price than either Messinas or Verdellis. The difference in price is from 50c to $1 a case depending somewhat upon the keenness of competition. One of the reasons why California lemons command a higher price is due to the attractiveness of the fruit. We understand there are times when the price to the jobber on both California and Italian lemons is the same, and the jobber will ask the retailer a higher price for the California product simply because he can get a higher price on account of the California lemon having a better appearance.

5. There are no auctions in Canada. A few years ago a regular weekly auction was held in Montreal, but for some reason it has been discontinued.

6. Seventy-five per cent. of the Italian lemons consumed in Canada come through the Port of New York.

7. Verdillis lemons are summer-cut lemons and only appear during the summer months. And while all Italian lemons are Messinas, the trade usually classify them in this manner.

8. The prices we quote are wholesale prices to the retail trade.

9. Quotations on Italian lemons are always based on a box weighing approximately 70 pounds.

The grocery store of Sam Stacey, Government avenue, East Kildonan, Winnipeg, was entered early one morning recently, and merchandise to the value of $56 was stolen.

Donald H. Bain Company, wholesale commission merchants and brokers, Winnipeg, have opened a permanent office at 19 Murray Block, Fort William, under the management of W. J. Hogan.

YOUTHS WHO ROB GROCERY STORE GET TEN YEARS

Fort William, Ont., Dec. 5.— Stewart McCurley and Geo. Adams, involved in the Sutherland grocery store robbery, were sentenced to ten-year terms with hard labor in the Manitoba penitentiary.

McCurley stated they found the revolver used in the hold-up a month ago in Winnipeg. Since that time they had read of bank robberies, and had talked of trying to get some money that way. The robbery of the grocery store was to be a preliminary test of nerve. They had intended to do the robbery on the occasion that they visited the store and purchased the candy.

Burglars Make Big Haul From General Store at Aylesbury

Saskatoon, Dec. 4.—Six hundred dollars in cash and checks, with a quantity of shoes, coats and other merchandise, the value of which was not learned, were stolen from the store of Ingwald Arme, general merchant, of Aylesbury, Sask., recently. Previous to the burglary, the office of the Canadian Elevator there was entered and tools stolen with which the inner door of the safe was forced open. The outer door of the safe, in which the money was kept, was apparently opened on the combination.

The loss was discovered when the store was opened for business on the following morning, and the Craik detachment of provincial police was at once called. Fingerprint experts from Regina were sent to Aylesbury and an exhaustive investigation is being made by the police.

Business Changes

A. McClellan has commenced business with a new store and stock at 651 St. Clair Avenue, Toronto.

N. W. Pike has started in business at 311 Roncesvalles Avenue, Toronto.

I. Jackson has opened for business at 1784 Queen St. W., Toronto.

WHAT MERCHANTS ARE SAYING

PURE STRAWBERRY AND RASPBERRY JAM.—New season's jam—the popular varieties in four-pound tins. A splendid spread for the children's bread. —Bradley & Sons, Niagara Falls, Ont.

THE DELICIOUS AROMA of our coffee serves as a true indication of its goodness. Its flavor and body are unsurpassed because of the scientific manner in which the beans are blended and roasted.—John's, Peterboro', Ont.

TEA-MAKING EASY.—A few hints for the proper making of a good cup of tea. Never use water that has been boiled before, the softer the water the better. Have your tea in a well-warmed pot or steeper and when your tea kettle comes to a boil pour on your tea, first pouring out a small quantity from your kettle spout. For a green tea use the weight of a five-cent piece for each cup of tea required; for black tea, use the weight of a ten-cent piece for each cup required. After your tea has drawn for five minutes in this way, pour off your liquor in another warm teapot. This will keep the tannin out of the tea you drink, or in other words the poison. Never put your tea when brewing on a hot stove, but on the table.—E. B. Smith, Smithville, Ont.

CURRANTS are very scarce on account of the disturbance in the East, but we were successful in getting some of our order. A. Many, Welland, Ont.

TEAS ARE ADVANCING. — Last week we gave you instructions how to make tea scientifically. This week we wish to give some advice about buying. By the first of 1923 teas will be at least ten cents a pound higher than they are today. Those who are in a position should lay in a few pounds at present prices. A word to the wise is sufficient. —E. B. Smith, Smithville, Ont.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

RECORDING OF EXTRACTS

Editor Canadian Grocer:

In a recent article on the recording of extracts, it stated that all flavoring extracts must be recorded. We understand that, according to the Act, extracts containing less than 2½ per cent. of alcohol are not required to be recorded as there are any number of artificial extracts containing less than that amount.

—Subscriber.

Editor's Note:—There is nothing in the Act which provides that extracts containing less than 2½ per cent. alcohol be recorded. But, on the other hand, it would appear that the merchant, to protect himself, should record every sale of extract unless the label on the bottle plainly states that the contents contain less than 2½ per cent. alcohol.

Did You Ever Stop to Think---

THAT many manufacturers, jobbers, retailers and other shippers should pay more attention to the marking of package freight.
THAT in many instances second-hand containers are purchased and used.
THAT many shippers fail to remove consignment marks on the containers they receive and re-use them.
THAT it is just as much to the shippers' interest as it is to the railroads to have shipments properly marked.
THAT double marking causes much confusion.
THAT it often causes packages to be held over for re-marking.
THAT often packages must be returned.
THAT the failure to obliterate old marks often results in the loss of an entire package.
THAT it delays effective delivery at destination.
THAT these delays often cause the loss of a customer.
THAT service as well as the goods is what is wanted.
THAT it is a good idea to scratch or paint out all original shipping marks on a container when received, so when the container is used again, all that is necessary is a new tag or stencil mark.
THAT service, price and quality is what sells merchandise.
THAT service is too often forgotten in connection with the selling of merchandise.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE sugar market holds very firm with stocks in Cuba reduced to 80,000 tons, a reduction of 28,661 tons from the previous week and as compared with 997,459 tons at the same time last year. The total meltings of raws in the United States by refiners from January 1 up to December 1, was 3,479,000 tons, an increase of 1,095,000 tons over the same period last year. Out of the former amount 808,000 tons were exported as against 373,000 tons for the same period in 1921. From this it would appear that the position in sugar is fundamentally very strong. Stocks in all Atlantic ports being only 165,000 tons, barely a week's supply at present basis of meltings. Recent sales for prompt shipment of Cubas were made on a basis of 4c c. & f. New York, which figures 5.78c duty paid and is the highest point reached this year. The grinding of the new crop Cubas has commenced and sales have been made for January shipment at 3¾c and for February at 3⅝c. c. & f. There has been a general advance in quotations on U.S. refined to $7.25 with the exception of Arbuckle, who are quoting $7.10 and the Federal who quote $7.15.

In Canadian refined sugar there is no change of note. Quotations remain on the basis of $8 Montreal, for standard granulated but it is understood that there is very little passing from first hands.

Teas continue to indicate an upward movement in both primary markets and on spot. Supplies in producing centers are rapidly cleaning up and stocks are strongly held. Coffees are also firm at primary points but the spot situation shows little indication for an immediate change. Canned vegetables and fruits hold steady with good supplies and a fairly active movement, while Norwegian Bristling sardines are in scant supply due to the poor catch this year. Shelled walnuts show some weakness for futures, but spot stocks are generally held steady. Spot currants have been pretty well cleaned up and prices are firm, but on January shipments an easier tone is evident. Bulk cereals are steady to firm while there is a possibility for some advances in case goods. Rices are quiet but tapioca and sago are in a firm position.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 6.—There is very little actual change in the grocery market. The demand for staple lines has fallen off since the retail trade is turning its attention to specialty lines for Christmas in which a good business is being done. The grocery business in general is in an improved condition, having established a firmer basis of trading on most lines. Sugar is firm and will likely remain so until after the new year. Buying of sugar is limited to actual requirements and the trade is looking for an easier market when the new raws reach the refineries. There is a good demand for molasses and corn syrups and prices are firm. Strength is still the feature in teas, and a number of package teas have been sharply advanced. There is no change in coffee. The walnut market is easier for futures but for delivery for the Christmas trade prices are firm. Lower prices are expected on figs, currants and evaporated apples. A big and unexpected supply of figs has arrived in New York from Smyrna. The cereal market is firm and a little quiet until after the new year. Package lines are unchanged. Vegetables are in good demand with a firmer market on account of the more severe weather. Oranges will be easy in price for Christmas with a good supply of the different varieties.

CANNED GOODS STEADY

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is no feature of note in canned goods. The demand is steady and prices are firm. The condition of the whole market is more healthy than it was last year and stocks are moving freely. With the lower prices on canned fruits the retailers are taking more interest in the line and featuring it. Supplies of lobster are getting cleaned up and a strong market may be expected until April when the new pack will be ready.

CEREAL MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There are no new developments in the cereal market. Rolled oats are steady with the probability of more strength as soon as navigation closes, which is expected within the next week or ten days. BETTER SUPPLIES OF FIGS

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the dried fruit market is the easier feeling in currants, figs and evaporated apples. A good portion of the fig crop from the district around Smyrna has been salvaged and is now being marketed. This will ease up prices in this line early in the new year. The primary markets on currants show a reduction but local dealers do not expect that a change will be made until January.

WALNUT FUTURE EASIER

NUTS.—Local nut dealers report an easier future for walnuts. This, however, will not affect the price for the Christmas supplies and a strong market is noted, particularly for Grenoble walnuts. The quality of the bulk of walnuts now on the market is not extra and some importers have been disappointed in the shipments. The demand for nuts is now at its height and a good business is reported.

PACKAGE TEAS ADVANCED

Montreal.

TEAS.—There have been several advances in package teas. Blue Bird, King Cole and Red Rose. The advance on King Cole is 10c. and 9c. a lb. on Blue Bird. This comes as a result of the steady advance in tea values during the past months. Values are still high and strong and even with the new crop Indian teas on the market this month there is no indication of an easing off. The tea crop is short and a strong market is assured. Other tea packers will not make any statement about the future of their prices but they do claim that package tea prices are not in line with the real level of the tea market.

ORANGES EASY FOR CHRISTMAS

Montreal.

FRUIT.—Despite the increased demand for oranges at Christmas time the prices quoted are unchanged and local importers state that the supply of Mexican and Porto Rico oranges available is responsible for keeping down the price of the California fruit. There is a good demand for all lines of fresh fruit and retail dealers are now stocking for the holiday demand. Lemons are slightly easier in price with a good supply on the market.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—Reflecting the strong situation in primary markets, the spot tea market continues in a strong condition with higher quotations on some grades to the retail trade. It is said that present wholesale prices on teas are still out of line with replacement costs and that further advances are likely. Bulk cereals continue firm and it has been intimated that a higher price will shortly be quoted on package rolled oats. Canned vegetables and fruits are moving in good volume with no particular feature in the market situation. Norwegian Bristling sardines are scarce while one brand of pork and beans is quoted at a lower price. Spot supplies of currants are rapidly cleaning up and quotations are firmly held although the turn of the year will likely bring easier prices. Shelled walnuts and almonds are quoted a shade lower while peanuts continue firm at the higher quotation. Honey is offered at a slightly lower price. Tapioca and sago are firm but rice is quiet. Sugar is unchanged but firm. Vegetables and fruits are plentiful. Holly has arrived on this market.

FIRM BEAN MARKET

Toronto.

BEANS.—Although quotations show no change this week as compared with last, the market still maintains a firm tone. The demand, too, is fairly active and consumption is heavier than it has been for some time. Wholesalers are quoting hand-picked Ontario beans at $3.65 per bushel and one pound pickers at $3.40 per bushel. California limas are quoted at 12½c. and Madagascar at 6¾c to 7½c. per lb.

NO CHANGE IN CEREALS

Toronto.

CEREALS.—While there are no changes reported in quotations on cereals this week, the situation continues one of firmness. Rolled oats are still in short supply and some millers have withdrawn from the market, having none to offer. The reason for this is on account of the difficulties in transportation.

NORWEGIAN BRISTLING SARDINES SCARCE

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—There is a decided shortage on this market of Norwegian Bristling sardines. In the better known brands, some wholesalers have none to offer, while those who have any stock are limiting sales to small lots. The movement in canned vegetables continues good while sales of fruits indicate an improvement. Hawaiian sliced pineapple is in a strong position with indications for advances in the future, according to reports from the coast. French canned mushrooms are offered at $33 per case for Hotel and $42 for Choice. California sliced peaches, 2½s are quoted at $4.45 to $4.60 per doz., and 1s, at $2.75. California apricots, 2½s are quoted at $4.75, 2s at $3.35 and 1s at $2.85 per doz. Libby's Sauer Kraut, 2½s, is quoted at $1.75 per doz. and Campbell's pork and beans is offered at a lower price of $1.55 per doz. for 2s.

SPOT CURRANTS CLEANING UP

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Peels are slightly firmer with some wholesalers quoting a shade higher on lemon and orange. Currants are rapidly cleaning up and in some quarters purchases of small lots have been made in New York as direct shipments are not expected to arrive here until after the first of the new year. At the present time the spot situation in currants is firm but futures are easier and when shipments arrive in January, lower prices are likely to prevail. Raisins and prunes are steady but dates are easy.

TEA PRICES ADVANCED

Toronto.

TEAS.—Wholesalers have further advanced quotations on teas this week. The advance, amounting to one to three cents per pound, was not unexpected by the trade and was due to the steadily advancing markets at primary centres and which has been commented upon quite freely under this heading during the past few months. That the upward movement in primary markets for the balance of this year's crop seems a certainty is the opinion of importers in close touch with the situation, and from a statistical standpoint this opinion is well based when it is considered that the entire production of teas for this year is many million pounds short of actual consumption and a serious shortage will likely be faced on some grades before the new crop is ready for distribution. In the spot market prices have not been keeping pace with those in primary markets and the explanation is that importers throughout this season have been endeavoring to keep a couple of months' supply on hand, and resulted in spot prices usually being several cents per pound below actual replacement costs. Recent cables from Colombo state that prices there have again advanced 1½d per lb. and taking the situation as it now stands it would appear that further advances to the retail trade are inevitable.

SOAP PRICES STEADY

Toronto.

SOAPS.—The situation in soaps is ruling steady with no new features developing during the week. Quotations for both laundry and toilet soaps are unchanged with the former at $6.90 per single case for the better known brands.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 6.—Trading in grocery circles in preparation for the Christmas trade is showing an improvement but collections are reported not as good as expected. Strength continues in most commodities but price changes are not numerous. The coffee market is ruling steady and teas continue in a strong position with indications for further advances. Canned vegetables are moving in good volume at fairly steady quotations while salmon packers, in order to clean up, are offering concession on cohoes and pinks. Cereals maintain a firm tone especially on oats, barley and beans with indications for higher prices on package oats. The demand for Christmas lines of dried fruits is showing an improvement and many lines are becoming rapidly depleted. There is a strong tone to the flour market. Sugar maintains a firm tone with indications for higher prices. Fruit and vegetable dealers report business quiet. California navel oranges are quoted at $8 per case. Cucumbers are scarce and high.

APRICOTS ADVANCE

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—A steady volume of business is reported in dried fruits and some of the varieties are getting into small compass. Table raisins are becoming rapidly cleaned up and indications point to a shortage between now and Christmas. Sultanas, seeded and seedless are in good demand. Apricots have advanced 1c per lb. on the local market. New Hallowi dates have arrived and quotations are slightly lower at 10½c per lb. Royal Excelsior in cases of 3 doz. are quoted at $4 with Dromedary at $7 per case. Bulk fard dates in 12 lb. boxes are offered at $2.80. The market is bare of Turkish figs but some Portuguese of good quality are available in mats at 8c a lb. Currants are reported scarce locally, but with arrivals expected around the middle of January lower quotations will be in order. Prunes are scarce in some sizes and primary market prices as well as local are well maintained.

FROM CALGARY, BY WIRE

Calgary, Alta., Dec. 5.—Sugar advanced 5c making standard granulated $9.39 per cwt. Jordan almonds are offered at 60c per lb. Blueberries, 2s, are quoted at $4 to $4.75 per case. Libby's sauerkraut which has been unobtainable for some time, is expected to arrive about the middle of this month. Greek figs are on this market and are offered at 15c per lb. Sliced canned pineapple, 2½s, are likely to advance in price as the pack of this size was greatly curtailed and the 1922 crop of Hawaiian pineapple ran largely to small fruit. Canned milk very firm with higher prices anticipated.

The Term Ptomaine Poisoning Has Become a Cloak for Ignorance

What a Bacteriological Examination of About Two Thousand Cans of Merchantable Canned Goods Revealed—What Are Ptomaines?

A BACTERIOLOGICAL examination has been made of about two thousand cans of merchantable canned goods, says the Department of Preventive Medicine and Hygiene Medical School, Harvard University. Professor John Weinzirl, who examined the first lot of about one thousand cans, found that some of them contained spores of bacteria and occasionally the spores of molds. These studies have been continued by Dr. E. W. Cheyney, who has found substantially the same results except for a smaller percentage of cans containing visible micro-organisms. It is well known to students of bacteriology that some of these spores are exceedingly resistant to heat and very difficult to kill. Most of these spores belong to the common varieties of bacteria that need the oxygen of the air to germinate: hence the importance of a tight can and partial vacuum. It has been found that living micro-organisms most frequently occur in meat, sausage, crab and other food packed in a dry state, and less often in fruits and certain vegetables. Professor Weinzirl's results were published in the Journal of Medical Research, January, 1919.

A Cloak For Guidance

The term "ptomain" poisoning has become a cloak for ignorance. Jordan says that "ptomain" poisoning is a convenient refuge from etymological uncertainty. In fact, any acute gastro-intestinal attack resulting from a great variety of causes is apt to be called "ptomain" poisoning. Selmi, in 1873, first commenced to use the word ptomain to include the poisonous product of putrefaction which gave the reaction then looked on as characteristic of vegetable alkaloids. From the time of Selmi, when ptomains were regarded as animal alkaloids, our conception of these substances has changed markedly. The last attempt to give precision to the term was by Vaughan, who defined ptomains as intermediate cleavage products of protein decomposition. Roseau and his associates at Harvard have been searching in vain for the past year for ptomains that might cause gastro-intestinal or other symptoms. Split products of protein putrefaction are readily isolated. Some of these products have physiological activity but none of them thus far have been demonstrated to be poisonous when taken by the mouth. The so-called ptomains isolated and described by Selmi, Breiger, Schmiedeberg Faust and Vaughan were usually obtained from putrid organic matter that had decomposed past the point at which it would be used as food.

An editorial which appeared in a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association, entitled, "What are Ptomains?" discussed this question as follows:—

"Last winter our chemists extracted 'ptomains' from a turkey and also from some sausage which had been accused. A control experiment was made upon a fresh turkey and fresh sausage, both of which were eaten without harmful results; precisely the same 'ptomains' were isolated from the fresh turkey and the fresh sausage, proving, therefore, that the 'ptomains' are simply formed by chemical manipulations.

"We have now studied over 51 outbreaks of so-called 'ptomain' poisoning involving 1,500 persons and causing three deaths. This work has been done by Dr. W. E. Brown, Dr. R. N. Atwater, Dr. D. L. Sisco and several helpers. We have industriously looked for cases and have made a special attempt to discover the cause of all illness attributed to food. This part of our work has brought out many curious instances. One outbreak of 'ptomain' poisoning was, in fact, dysentery; another was sunstroke; another was due to saltpetre put in sugar in one of the military training camps; and a fourth was oxalic acid poisoning. Of the three deaths, two of them were due to dysentery and the third was caused by oxalic acid poisoning.

"It is very clear to us that injury, due to food, is much less frequent than is commonly supposed, and surely, less prevalent in this country than abroad. This, I think, is due to the fact that we are nearer the source of our food supply, which is more abundant, fresher and cleaner than in Europe. Furthermore, we use much more canned goods here than do the people in Europe, for it is becoming increasingly evident that canned goods are the safest foods that come to our table.

A Diagnosis Seldom Made

"In this connection it is interesting to note that in Europe the diagnosis 'ptomain' is seldom made, and the use of the word 'ptomain' in any connection is very rare and quite guarded. On the other hand, in this country the term has gained a most popular and unwarranted usage.

Finds a Cheese Cutter Has Meant a Greater Turnover of Cheese in His Store

Installation of This Particular Piece of Equipment Has Been Profitable for J. S. Boyd, Grocer at Peterborough, Ont.—Cheese, He Says, Shows a Good Profit

"THAT cheese cutter has paid for itself a dozen times," remarked J. S. Boyd, grocer, on George Street, Peterborough, Ont., the other day to a representative of Canadian Grocer.

"Do you mean that you have increased your sales of cheese since installing the cutter?" Canadian Grocer inquired.

"That is it exactly," he replied. "We are selling more cheese since we put that cutter in than we ever did before. It makes for accuracy in cutting, and this fact I think the customer appreciates. We would not be without it now. Cheese represents a line showing a good profit for the grocer, and it pays to give some attention to its turnover. A piece of equipment such as this one has certainly made for greater sales in my experience."

Good Equipment Essential

Mr. Boyd believes that if the produce department of the business is to show the best results, equipment of a kind to facilitate service is essential. With this idea in mind he has his meat slicer prominently situated in the store and within easy access from the counter, where the salespeople can quickly use it in serving customers. "We have had that slicer two years," Mr. Boyd added. "It has increased our sales of bacon and cooked ham in a very gratifying way. We have found that our customers like to have their bacon cut with a machine, much better than in the old way by hand. We sell chiefly one brand of bacon. It gives first-class satisfaction, and a reputation for carrying the best bacon that can be procured helps the sales of other lines."

Finds Sausages a Good Line

Mr. Boyd also sells a good grade of sausages and declares that the same constitute a profitable and worth-while line. Sales of sausages in this store average about 100 lbs. a week which, Mr. Boyd states, is a good amount in his district.

When the Christmas Turkey Only Cost the Consumer 75 Cents

GLANCING recently through an old copy of the St. Catharines Evening Journal dated December 21, 1869, we came across a list of market prices current at that date in St. Catharines Market. As they will probably prove of interest to our readers, we reproduce some of them below.

Those Canadians who, during the past year or two have expressed their indignation at the conduct of our neighbors across the border in presuming to charge a premium or rate of exchange on United States money, will probably be surprised to learn that, at that time, conditions were reversed, and that Canadians were then allowing only 82½ cents for the American dollar, a rate about equal to the highest charged in recent years on our own dollar. Even this was an improvement on the rate which had prevailed during the previous year, as we find on reference to an issue of the same paper for May 5, 1868, that American greenbacks were then worth only 71½ cents in Canadian money.

The most striking changes in the list given below are those for meats and poultry of various kinds. A special paragraph in another column of the paper tells us that the Christmas turkey for the year 1869 would cost consumer from 75c to $1.50—that is for each turkey, not per pound; and geese were quoted at 30c to 75c each.

Here, then, are the Christmas prices fifty-two years ago:

Mutton, per lb. per qr.	4 to 5
Coal oil, per gal. wholesale	30 to 40
Do., retail	40 to 50
Beef sirloin, per lb.	12½
Beef, rib roast	8 to 10
Beef, round	12½
Beef, chuck rib	4 to 5
Beef, wholesale	4 to 5
Beef suet	12 to 14
Hearts, each	15 to 20
Pork, pickled, per lb.	12 to 14
Do., live weight	8 to 8½
Mutton chop	8 to 10
Leg of mutton	6 to 8
Forequarter mutton	5 to 6
Haslet, each, (sheep)	5
Do., (calf)	5
Breakfast bacon, per lb.	12
Ham	15
Shoulders	12 to 14
Do., (wholesale)	12
Corned beef	6 to 8
Stewing beef	8 to 10
Tongues, smoked, each	30 to 40
Do., pickled	25 to 30
Sausage	12
Bologna	12½
Butter, best quality	22 to 25
Do., common	18 to 20
Chickens, per pair	30 to 40
Lard, per lb.	16
Eggs, hens, per doz.	25 to 30
Onions, per bushel	75 to $1
Apples, per bushel	50 to 75
Turnips, per bushel	25 to 30
Hay, per ton	$7 to 10
Wood, per cord	$4 to $6
Hides, per lb.	6 to 6½
Sheep pelts, each	40 to 70
Fall wheat, white	85 to 90
Do., red, per bushel	80 to 82
Spring wheat	80 to 82
Oats	20 to 28
Barley	No buyers
Flour	2.25 to 2.50
Carrots	25 to 37½
Cabbage, per head	1 to 5
Cauliflowers, each	2 to 3
Potatoes, per bushel	50 to 60
Beets, per bunch	3 to 5

Haslet is an old term which covered the liver, heart and kidneys of an animal. Many of these prices will show that the farmer, for much of his produce, was receiving practically as much then as now.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 6.—The produce and provision market shows improvement both in the basis of quotations and in the demand. The hog market, although unchanged in price, shows strength with an improved demand with the colder weather. There is no change in smoked meats and the demand is as good as can be expected at this season with prices firm. The demand for lard and shortening is good. Both butter and cheese show strength. The demand for Canadian butter in the United States has added strength in this market and retail merchants are buying in larger quantities. While the market for the later makes of cheese shows weakness, the demand for grass made cheese is good and prices are strong. Higher prices are quoted on fall fresh and strictly new laid eggs. The poultry market is strong with higher prices on turkeys. Supplies of poultry are not as plentiful as they were. No doubt producers are holding their offerings for the Christmas trade when higher prices are expected. The demand for turkeys in the United States is responsible to some extent for the advance in that line. Fish prices are a little easier in some lines and the colder weather has increased the demand.

STRONGER TONE TO BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Butter prices are unchanged but there is a stronger tone to the market on account of the falling off in receipts while the demand both for domestic and export trade shows improvement. In particular there is a demand for grass butter in the United States and this drain on the Canadian storage supplies has created a stronger market locally. Buying for the retail trade is now in larger quantities in prospect of a higher price.

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—There is no change in hog prices. The market shows a steady tone but the trade during the past week was slower on account of unseasonable weather. The colder weather has improved the buying this week and a firmer market is noted with the promise of a good movement for the next month.

HIGHER PRICE FOR TURKEYS

Montreal.

POULTRY.—In prospect of the Christmas trade prices on turkeys are advancing. The heavy demand for turkeys for shipment to the United States for Thanksgiving is partly responsible for the strength but dealers are holding back supplies until the Christmas demand in prospect of higher prices. Turkeys show an advance of 3c and 4c per lb. There is also a stronger market for chickens on account of an increased demand and smaller offerings.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—Although quotations throughout the produce markets show little change as compared with a week ago, they are, nevertheless, firm, and in some instances are showing higher tendencies. Butter and cheese quotations are unchanged but under some movement in an export way the tone of the markets is firm. Fairly heavy shipments of U.S. eggs are arriving daily on this market but the situation continues firm. Shortening is steady but one pound prints of lard are quoted a shade lower. Cooked and smoked meats are firm and quotations steady. Live hogs are stronger while cattle and other meats are also in a stronger position due to light receipts. Turkeys are higher and the tone of the poultry market generally is much firmer with indications for advance in prices.

BUTTER FIRM IN TONE

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market is steady but firm in tone, especially on the better grades as there appears to be some inquiry for that grade for exporting to the U. S. This business has not been of large volume but one car of the best grade was shipped to Buffalo during last week. Sales to the U. S. are also reported at Montreal and some movement to the United Kingdom. Although all told the volume of business in an export way is not considered large, it is sufficient to hold the market on the present basis of prices. Quotations to the retail trade shown no change this week.

U. S. EGGS ARRIVING

Toronto.

EGGS.—The feature in the egg market is perhaps the large quantity of U. S. eggs which are appearing on this market. Some days shipments run to four and five cars and the reason given for these heavy shipments is that Canadian storage eggs are not in sufficient quantity to meet requirements. Generally speaking, the quality of the U. S. eggs is reported good but in some quarters complaints are heard. The tone of the market continues firm, but in new laid eggs the situation is strong with quotations nominal as receipts are still very limited. There are no changes in dealers' quotations to the retail trade.

HOG MARKET STRONGER

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—In spite of the fact that the big packers were endeavoring to cut the price on live hogs, the market developed a stronger tone and prices advanced 25c making the fed and watered basis $11. In cattle and other meats a stronger tone was also in evidence. This is accounted for by the small shipments which arrived during the week and according to buyers was an indication that farmers were holding supplies for a higher market during the Christmas buying, and it is the opinion that the market will continue strong with higher prices ruling. In dressed meats there are practically no changes as compared with a week ago. Fresh loins of pork are quoted at 31c; fresh hams and Boston butts at 21c per lb.

STRONGER MARKET FOR TURKEYS

Toronto.

POULTRY.—Receipts of fowl increased considerably during the week with the result that dealers are now busy placing stocks into the coolers. Turkeys are none too plentiful on the market at present and as the demand is fairly large, dealers are quoting a higher price at country points and likewise quotations to the retail trade are higher. The market generally is firm and prices are likely to be higher as the Christmas season approaches.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6.—There is very little change in the produce and provision markets and dealers report business quiet. Butter and cheese continue to maintain a strong position. The egg market is firm with no change in quotations. Lard and shortening are ruling steady. Cooked meats are quiet while smoked ham and bacon is in fair demand at unchanged quotations. Few turkeys are arriving and prices have advanced. Fish is in fair demand. The hog market is showing a firmer tone and advances have been recorded.

NO CHANGE IN BUTTER

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—There is no change in quotations on butter. Dealers report that they are well supplied to meet immediate requirements as buying is confined to small quantities. Best quality of creamery butter is quoted at 40c to 42c per lb. with second grades offered at 34c to 38c.

CHEESE HOLDS FIRM

Winnipeg

CHEESE.—Although there are no actual changes in quotations the cheese market continues strong, and dealers state that a further advance can be expected. Large cheese is quoted at 26c per lb. with twins at 26½c and triplets at 27c.

FIRM EGG MARKET

Winnipeg

EGGS.—The market holds firm with quotations unchanged. Strictly new-laid eggs are practically unobtainable and orders are being filled from storage stocks. Select eggs in cartons are quoted from 37c to 42c with No. 1 candled at 32c.

LARD PRICES UNCHANGED

Winnipeg

LARD.—The tone of the lard market is steady with buying limited to small lots to meet immediate requirements. In sympathy with the lard market shortening continues steady under a fair demand.

70% of the Grocery Business

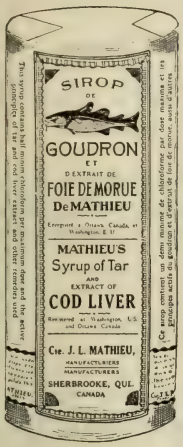
The fact is recognized that less than a third of the grocers in Canada do between 70 and 80 per cent. of the retail grocery business.

And when it is realized that the subscribers to Canadian Grocer represent more than 70% of the entire grocery trade in Canada—

It is time to recognize the fact that a circulation actually concentrated among the successful, reliable, financially-able merchants in the grocery business is worthy of first consideration.

We know the subscribers to CANADIAN GROCER. Our Editorial and Circulation men cover Canada every year and get in touch with them. They are business men who are keenly interested in the development of their own community and the building up of their own business.

They are selectors of goods for their customers. They know that their good-will in the community is either impaired or enhanced, according to how they select the goods they sell to their customers. Naturally they endeavor to select quality goods.



This is the type of merchant who wants full information about each manufacturer's product he puts on his shelves. The more he knows about it, the more will he display and sell it.

The continuous record of successful results obtained by advertisers in CANADIAN GROCER year after year for thirty-five years shows the extent to which subscribers value the advertising pages of each issue.

The Right Curb Pump Builds Bigger Business

Motorists will buy regularly where they can be sure of dry gasoline, which means most mileage and least carbon.

The Bowser centrifugal water separator extracts all moisture from gasoline as it is being delivered into the car.

Thus, motorists who patronize Bowser Chief Sentry pumps get better gasoline for their money, and come back to Bowser-equipped filling stations and garages over and over again.

Bowser Pumps are nationally advertised, too, so that the motoring public know that, if they patronize Bowser pumps, they will get most mileage for each gasoline dollar spent.

The new Bowser air-driven Chief Sentry is the best curb-side business builder that money can buy. For full details as to mechanical perfection, and its ability to earn the largest possible returns on pump investments, ask for Booklet C-11.

PACK OF CALIFORNIA OLIVES WILL BE LARGER

Olive conditions in Telare County, Cal., this year are, according to reports, much better than for several years past. This year's crop is estimated at 4,000 tons, as compared with 3,000 last year, and the pack will be double that of 1921, according to packing house men who specialize in processed olives. Because of the slump in the market last year only 25,000 cases were processed in the Porterville section, the remainder going for oil. This year packers there will put up some 50,000 cases, with much of the pack contracted for by eastern dealers before picking started. The plants at Lindsay are operating night and day to handle the crop.

Papers which pull real Business

Wonderful results accrue from intelligent use of the Trade and Technical Press.

Here is one example out of many :

A London manufacturer recently inserted in a trade paper a "want" advertisement for traveller to sell his product in a stated area. In addition to securing the man, he received more than thirty enquiries for his product from wholesale houses and builders' merchants. This manufacturer is now converted to the regular use of trade and technical papers.

Quaker Talks

First of all Things—

CLEANLINESS

Of all things we use food is the one in which we most insist on "cleanliness."

A product may leave a factory or mill perfectly pure, perfectly clean. But if it is not packed so as to keep out dust and dirt—if it has to be handled and weighed and parcelled—how can it be clean and pure when it reaches the consumer?

Quaker Mills Products

—are packed automatically in the mills. No human hand touches them. The cartons are air proof, thus preserving flavor, they are dust proof, thus keeping the product clean.

Quaker Mills Products satisfy the customers. They bring them back for more. They show the grocer a fair margin They sell quickly as they are popular.

Millions of dollars have been spent in improving the quality of Quaker Mills Products in the last thirty years, and other millions have been spent to move them from the grocer's shelves in constantly increasing quantities.

Are you making the most of your opportunities to increase your sales of Quaker Quality Products; to speed up your turnover of these ready sellers? It will pay you to keep Quaker Packages out in front—ALWAYS.

105th Annual Meeting of Bank of Montreal

Sir Vincent Meredith, President, Takes View That on the Whole Trade Conditions More Satisfactory Than a Year Ago.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, General Manager, Shows Necessity for Bringing Down Cost of Living in Canada—Reviews Features of Annual Statement.

At the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., the President, in his address, gave a comprehensive review of Canadian and foreign conditions, and said the outlook was for reasonably profitable operations in most lines of business.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the general manager, in dealing more particularly with domestic conditions, said that if Canada were to make the progress which they all hoped for it was imperative that taxation and the cost of living should be reduced to the level, at any rate, of that obtaining in the United States.

In referring to the Merchants Bank, Sir Vincent said:

"To the incidents connected with this transaction it is not necessary to refer, nor to the criticism it evoked, further than to say that, in my judgment, the prompt action of your directors, subsequently ratified by you, averted a situation that might otherwise have proved serious to the country at large, and secured the shareholders of that institution from losses greater than were suffered. It will interest you to know that the work of co-ordinating the staffs with a view to economies is proceeding with all possible celerity, and that the acquisition of the Merchants Bank is reasonably realizing the expectation of your Board. Under our own organization and with the economies that have been effected, the future gives promise of increased earnings."

FARMERS' BUSINESS

He expressed gratification at the fact that the government had embarked on an energetic immigration policy and continued:

"Statements have been made in the public press by uninformed people that debtors, especially in the West, are being subjected to undue pressure by the Banks, Loan Companies and other creditors. So far as this Bank is concerned, every consideration and great latitude have been given to debtors, who, through bad harvests or other mischance, have been unable to meet their obligations. This is and at all times has been the policy of the Bank, and never has that policy been more forcibly impressed upon our managers than during recent critical years.

"Banks are business, not benevolent, institutions. They are expected to pay their shareholders a reasonable return on their investment, which includes the Rest Account—the accumulation of many years—as well as the Capital of the Bank. The rate of dividend is not disproportionate to that investment and certainly has not proved so lavish as to encourage capital to seek the banking field. As a matter of fact, the distributions to shareholders in Canadian Banks is substantially less than that made by banking institutions in Great Britain or the United States."

SIR FREDERICK WILLIAMS-TAYLOR'S ADDRESS

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, in his annual address, dealt more especially with the affairs of the Bank and conditions at home in Canada. Sir Frederick emphasized particularly the need for a readjustment of living costs in the country, when he referred to the economic position of the Dominion. In this connection, Sir Frederick said:

"Canada's economic position is not satisfactory. How could it be satisfactory, with the whole financial world out of joint? As everyone is aware, our troubles have partly been the result of this universal condition; partly the result of the war. It is well, however, to bear in mind that our problems are largely of our own creation.

"Readjustment will come in time, for this is a country of virility and untold resources; yet one thing stands out signally, in my opinion, namely, that Canada cannot go ahead again as she should while taxation and the cost of living are higher in this country than they are in the United States of America.

"Canada is one of the best countries in the world to live in, to work in, to play in—in point of stability, security and comfort it is an earthly paradise as compared with Europe—but we must not stand still, and in order to progress the cost of living and taxation must be diminished; otherwise, we will fail to attract immigration; and improved conditions are largely dependent upon increased population.

"As to ways and means, they are obvious to all who reflect, and the necessity thereof is now being brought home to the heedless, by the pitiless but unerring teacher, necessity."

SOUND BANKING SYSTEM

In conclusion Sir Frederick stated that the manner in which Canadian banks generally had come through the agitating times since 1914 must be taken as evidence of the fundamental soundness of the Canadian banking system. There was reason to be thankful that no great commercial breakdown had occurred.

Senator Foster, in proposing a vote of thanks to the president, general manager and directors, said he was sure that shareholders would gladly join in a vote of thanks to the president, general manager, and directors of the bank. There were people, he said, who were under the impression that when they bought a share of bank stock in some mysterious way it found its way into the coffers of the bank, and proceeded without efforts on the part of anybody to earn as much, or more, than they could make the money earn themselves, but those who know anything of the business of the bank could appreciate that the statement that had been presented that day could only have been produced as a result of co-operation and splendid effort on the part of everybody in the institution.

"Quality is Just as Essential in Groceteria"

E. F. Mason, Peterborough, Ont., Conducting Both Service and Cash and Carry Stores, Thinks it is Just as Important to Stock High Quality Goods in One Class of Store as in the Other—Makes Some Interesting Comparisons of the Two Ideas

MANY phases of the cash and carry grocery store or groceteria, its growth and development, its future, and its effect on the regular service store, were recently discussed by a representative of Canadian Grocer with E. F. Mason of E. F. Mason & Co., grocers at Peterborough, Ont. Mr. Mason for many years has conducted a service grocery on George Street in Peterborough. A few years ago he entered the groceteria field, opening his first store, operated on this plan, on the same street, but near the market, an ideal location from the standpoint of attracting people from the country and from all parts of the city, who make the market a regular call on Saturdays, and sometimes at midweek. Farmers particularly, have taken advantage of this store. Since then, however, he has opened three other groceterias, one in the south end of the city, another in the north end, and a groceteria department in the main store.

Has to Buy Carefully

"The retail grocer," began Mr. Mason, "is a public servant. It is his duty to distribute food stuffs to the people. He must do this as cheaply as possible, but this cannot be done without careful buying, nor with a highly specialized service. One of the things that induced me to enter the groceteria field, was the advantage that I might enjoy in buying. By way of example, for a certain canned product I have to pay the wholesaler 59c. per doz. more than I do to a broker, from whom, by purchasing a greater quantity, I get the lower quotation. In this way, one of the profits in the process of distribution is eliminated, and the consumer gets the benefit.

Will Not Supersede Service Store

"The public have taken kindly to the groceteria idea, but it will never supersede the service store. Operating a groceteria has many advantages, and again there are points in the service store that recommend themselves above all others. The unreasonable demands for delivery constituted commendable cause for adopting the cash and carry idea in my business. There are some people who want service and are entitled to it. The other class is always looking for something for nothing, and these people are the bane of the life of the service grocer. The groceteria does away with a lot of bad accounts, and the people who are worth while holding, are retained at my service store."

"Does not the groceteria idea eliminate salesmanship, and the opportunity to increase sales on the part of clerks, as is possible in the service store?" the Canadian Grocer representative asked Mr. Mason.

Too Few Salesmen

"I am afraid there are too few salesmen in grocery stores to-day," he replied. "Too many clerks are mere automatic machines handing out goods. Salesmen who understand the goods and are able to explain them to customers are very valuable. Display is the big factor in salesmanship in the groceteria. There is little in the way of introducing and suggesting new lines in a store of this kind. Everything, however, is out before the public, and a tempting array is the magnet that draws sales."

"Is as much attention paid to quality in the cash anad carry store as in the service store? Is it not a fact that the transient nature of the trade of a groceteria makes it possible to put quality second to a price consideration? The intimate interest of the grocer in his customers is lacking," commented the Canadian Grocer.

Quality is Essential

"I think quality is just as essential in the cash and carry store as in any," Mr. Mason replied. "True it is, there is not so much attention given to specialties, but as far as our stores are concerned, no inferior goods are carried. We are carrying the same quality goods in all stores, service and groceteria alike.

"The cost of doing business on the cash and carry idea is only about five-eighths of the cost of doing business in the service store. Before we adopted the new plan, there was an endless amount of detail encountered in our efforts to give the best possible service. Are the orders put up right? Are they reaching the customers on time? Has the bill been put through the office? Did it get into the right account? When are we going to get the money for it? These are some of the questions that many times during the day confront the service grocer. In the new way the consumer comes in, chooses her own goods, presents them to be wrapped, pays for them, and that is the last of the transaction.

"On the other hand the service grocer takes a more personal, friendly interest in his customers, that is denied the groceteria man. In the service store, there is a certain pleasure in buying for your customers, in showing them new lines, and interesting them in products never before tried. The attitude of the customer towards the service man is much like this: 'He is my grocer. He knows just what I get, and I can depend upon him to give me the best.' That is the sentiment that often retains business for the regular grocer, while in the groceteria, trade is retained chiefly on a price basis."

Arrangement of Merchandise

As outlined above, display is an important factor in the success of a groceteria. Mr. Mason's method in his stores is to place goods according to demand. He had arranged his merchandise in this order—1st, staples, 2nd, extra staples, 3rd, specials, and 4th, extra specials. The things people buy every day are first in the layout, then follow the lines they buy less frequently, but oftener than the specials and extra specials. This is the plan, according to Mr. Mason, that works to the best advantage, and achieves the best results.

Customer Sees Higher Prices of the Service Grocer in a New Light

Comment That a Certain Article Can be Purchased Cheaper at the Self Serve or No Delivery Store is Met With a Comparative Statement That Results in Retaining This Customer's Trade

WHEN a customer tells a merchant that his price is too high, that she can purchase the same article two, three or four cents less at a chain self-serve or other store, what comeback has that merchant?

For instance, she says she can buy potatoes at the other store at 10c a bag less than her grocer is quoting. Is there any chance for the merchant retaining this business, or must it go to the self-serve or no-delivery store?

Most people naturally buy in the lowest market, quality considered. If, therefore, potatoes are quoted 10c less by one merchant than another, the business is going to gravitate to the former unless he has something more to offer than mere price.

A Case in Point

Here is a case in point; a customer was purchasing a certain brand of meat sauce from her grocer. He quoted her 35c for the bottle.

"But," she said, "I can buy this same bottle at Blank's for 31c."

What is your answer under the circumstances. There can be possibly no difference in the quality as both are of the same brand and put up by the same firm. They are exactly the same size.

This actually occurred in a grocery store not long ago. The merchant's answer was this: "All right, madam, I'll sell you this bottle for 31c. It will, of course, be necessary for you to carry it home and to pay me cash for it just the same as you would do at the other store."

This happened to be a new point of view for that particular customer and it made her think, with the result that she is again giving practically all her business to that grocer.

Sees It In a New Light

In another case a woman stopped at this merchant's door with her limousine. Her chauffeur was driving. She wanted a bag of potatoes. The merchant quoted the price of 90c.

"Oh, but last time I bought potatoes at Blanks I only paid 80c for them and I know I can get them for that price now."

The retailer's reply was somewhat as follows: "Yes, but do you realize that your chauffeur had to go into the store and carry out those potatoes, put them in the back of your limousine, where no doubt the carpet became dirty from the sack and where you had to sit with them all the way home. Also he had to carry them from the car into the cellar.

"I can sell you a bag of potatoes on the same basis, but do you really think that it is worth 10c to have your car mussed up, and to have a sack of potatoes beside you on your way home, and to put up with the other inconveniences you had to in the case of the lower price?"

The customer eventually pointed out that she had never before looked at the matter in that particular light. It was new to her, and it undoubtedly was reasonable. She is today a steady customer of this merchant. The same dealer has discussed the service matter along practical lines with his other good customers, and although six months ago he found that business was slipping away gradually to stores offering lower prices, he says it is coming back again gradually and he is well pleased with the results from the use of his brain-power.

Retail Grocers Are Asking for Better Graded Apples

Montreal. (Special). — The retail grocery trade wants better graded and better packed Canadian apples. If this cannot be achieved by the Eastern growers, the buyers will look elsewhere for their supply. Now that the harvest season is over and the short-lived demand for barrel apples and bulk apples is finished, the grocer looks for fancy fruit attractively packed to tempt his customers, particularly for the Christmas trade.

Most Progress in the West

If this supply cannot be obtained in Eastern Canada, Eastern grocers will buy fruit grown and packed where more attention is given to marketing. The retail grocery trade is of the opinion that, from November on, boxed and carefully graded apples are the most profitable to handle. As a local grocer said to a Canadian Grocer representative: "Some of the finest grades of apples grown in the world come from the province of Quebec and yet in Montreal I cannot get a uniformly graded box of Quebec apples. The result is that when I buy ten boxes of these apples I must open every box, count the apples, and then figure out my price per dozen by the cost of the box and the number of apples it contains. Seldom do two boxes contain the same number of apples and their size varies considerably.

"I doubt if there is a more delicious apple in the world than the Fameuse grown in this province and yet I cannot find a box of them that is attractively packed or properly graded. Is it therefore any wonder that we grocers prefer to buy British Columbia apples or apples imported from the United States which are uniformly packed and properly graded?"

Good Apples Exported

The general complaint of the local grocers is that all the finest quality apples grown in this province are exported and that the volume of apples offered here are of second quality or else so carelessly packed that they do not keep. The demand for boxed apples is noticeably heavy this year although both retail and wholesale merchants agree that the cost is higher than for barrel apples. Nevertheless the grocery trade is emphatic in the demand for better grading of Canadian apples.

Must be Properly Labelled at the Beginning of Year

The regulation covering the proper definition, composition and labelling of various kinds of soft drinks which was issued by the Department of Health in March, 1921, the enforcement of which was deferred, comes into force on the first of January next. This regulation calls for the declaration on the labels of all sealed packages, giving the capacity of the package, the coloring and preservatives used. This applies also to unfermented wines and cordials. The word wine in this instance is a misnomer for the reason that wine to be a wine must be produced with fermentation from the juices of the various fruits. Therefore when such wines or cordials are made from flavoring or synthetic extracts, it is necessary to declare upon the main label the words, artificial, imitation, or substitute, in type of the same size and visibility as the name of the beverage.

The Deputy Minister of Health extended the enforcement of this regulation until January 1, 1923. Stocks of beverages on merchants' shelves on the first of January next will be expected to comply with this regulation, according to H. J. Dager, Toronto, inspector for the Department of Health, Ottawa.

ARE SAID TO HAVE VIOLATED THE WEEKLY HALF HOLIDAY ACT

Edmonton, Dec. 7.—Some twenty-nine names of stores which are alleged to have violated the weekly half-holiday act recently have been taken by the city police, says Mayor Duggan. No summons have been issued, however, in view of the attempt being made to reach a settlement of the dispute between the merchants and clerks.

The mayor states that the stores now on the list of those due to be summoned were in the centre of the city, in addition to the South Side, North Edmonton, and Calder. The police report that quite a large number of stores remained closed.

Freight Charge to Montreal From Malaga, Spain, Three Times Rate to New York

Exporter in Malaga Makes Complaint to Canadian Grocer and Investigation Shows That the Rate Charged Was an Inexcusable Mistake—Same Rate Prevails as to New York

AN exporter in Malaga, Spain, writing to Canadian Grocer, under date of September 24, on the question of Canadian freightage, says that the rate of freight on dried fruits from Malaga by direct steamers to New York is Pesetas 45, per ton of 1,000 kilos. In July last, when packers on the Spanish market were making calculations for quoting to Canada on almonds, raisins, figs and other dried fruits, he continues, the rate of freight by direct steamers to Montreal in September and October was calculated 60= per ton of 1,000, as it was calculated that a C.P.R. steamer would call, and the C.P.R. agents in Malaga quoted that rate.

"The time for shipment having arrived, no C.P.R. steamer is now advertised," the letter reads, "but the S.S. Canadian Hunter is in port, and the rate of freight has been fixed at Pesetas 130 per ton of 1,000 kilos, that is to say three times as much as direct to New York. Where shippers have sold to Montreal, they stand the loss. Where sales have been made f.o.b. Malaga, receivers stand the loss. But in any case, it places Canadian grocers at a disadvantage in competing with New York jobbers. They cannot buy as cheaply as New York jobbers can. Sales must carry the burden of this heavy rate of freight, and the disadvantage is obvious.

"Moreover the Malaga agent of the S. S. Canadian Hunter refuses to admit any routing of interior traffic from Montreal, other than by the Canadian National Railway. Therefore neither shipper nor receiver is free to route inland traffic by Grand Trunk, C. P. R. or even to leaving the routing free, for bills of lading bear a huge stamp across them, stipulating the route by which interior traffic is to move. This sort of capricious handling of merchandise can do no good to Canada nor to Canadian steamship lines. It simply provokes merchants and packers into ignoring Canadian direct steamers, and routing the traffic via U. S. A. ports."

Editor's Note.—Taking this matter up with the Canadian Pacific Steamship Co., with the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, and with the Redford Co., Canadian Grocer learned some interesting facts in connection with the above.

R. W. Gowans, general manager of the Atlantic Freight Traffic of the C. P. R., had already heard of this instance, and had discussed it with the Canadian Government Merchant Marine. He stated that in the future shippers from Mediterranean ports would have no difficulty in routing their freight as they chose.

Mr. Thompson, export freight manager of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Montreal, claimed that the freight charge of 130 pesetas per ton was an inexcusable mistake on the part of the agents in Malaga. The C.G.M.M. have a strict and firm policy, he pointed out, of meeting the rates of any ocean freight steamship company from Mediterranean ports to New York in their traffic from those ports to Montreal. In other words the freight rates which apply from Mediterranean ports to New York can be relied upon to be the freight rates from the same ports to Montreal. He cannot understand how the rate of 130 pesetas per ton was charged when previous to the above shipment the agents in Malaga had been instructed

CANADIAN FOODS ON EXHIBITION AT BRITISH INDUSTRIES FAIR

London, Dec. 13.—An exhibition of foodstuffs prepared by Canadian manufacturers will be a feature of the British Industries Fair, which will be held concurrently in London and Birmingham, early next year, says the monthly circular of the American Chamber of Commerce in London. The exhibits, which will include canned goods, breakfast foods, and dairy products, will be prepared with a view to popularizing Canadian foodstuffs in Great Britain.

An attractive and artistic window display of Christmas lines, recently put in by A. A. Fournier, Ltd., Ottawa, Ont. Fancy biscuits in full tins, figs, candies, peels, raisins, currants, flour, shortening and bottled fruits and wines are some of the articles shown.

Printer's Error in This Advertisement Leaves Butter Out of the Christmas Cake

EDITOR, Canadian Grocer:

I wonder if anyone reading the Fall Number of Canadian Grocer got into the same trouble that I did? I refer to an advertisement of Bradley's giving the grocers the suggestion that the publication of a good Christmas cake recipe had proved successful in attracting additional Christmas business. Thinking that was an original idea, I decided to mention it in our advertisement this week. This afternoon a lady customer came in and, referring to our interesting ad., said: "Did you ever hear of a cake without butter and whoever told you that that cake with two tablespoons of mace made a good cake must have been under the influence of dandelion wine, because a cake like that would poison a pup."

I give you my experience in this matter for what it is worth for, alas, I am one of those unfortunates who can't tell a good recipe from a poor one.

S. J. J.

Editor's Note:—The ad. referred to in the above letter was one of a group of three published in the issue of November 3, and were chosen from a number of others because they were good examples of Christmas advertising. Thinking that perhaps the omission of the butter from the recipe was a typographical error, we wrote Bradley & Son and the following is their reply:

Recipe in Much Demand

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

We regret exceedingly that you should have reproduced our advertisement with Christmas cake recipe in which a printer's error had occurred. We enclose our advertisement which appeared the following day after the one you reproduced had appeared.

The correct recipe is a good one—customers tell us they have used it in preference to their own, and are delighted with the quality of the cake produced. We have published this same recipe for years. Customers cut it out and send in for the exact quantities mentioned in the recipe of fruits, spices, etc.

One year we did not publish the recipe quite as early as some customers thought we should, with the resu't that we received requests for its publication.

We trust that this explanation will clear up the error and put right the merchant who wrote in. It shows how carefully the pages of Canadian Grocer are read for ideas, when an error such as this is discovered.

Yours truly,
BRADLEY & SON.

that the freight rate would be 40 pesetas.

Mr. Thompson also claims that they will route any freight carried by their steamships from Montreal over any railway which the exporter may designate. However if no special routing is mentioned, it will be made over the Canadian National Railways.

Keeping Windows Clear of Frost

Merchants in All Parts of the Country Are Now Confronted With One of Their Worst Annoyances—Every Precaution Should Be Taken to Prevent the Freezing of One of the Most Valuable Advertising Assets the Store Has

NOW THAT the winter months are at hand grocers in all parts of the country are faced with the old trouble of window freezing. As this is one of the worst annoyances the grocers have to contend with in the winter, every precaution should be taken. Windows that are covered with frost are as bad as no windows at all and, realizing this, a number of merchants in different parts of the country have asked Canadian Grocer for pointers on the art of keeping the windows clear. Herewith are presented some tips which the grocer who is troubled with frosted windows might find useful:

The method usually advised to prevent the deposition of moisture and frost on the window-panes are the employment of double windows, or the coating of the glass with some one of the various liquids which have been recommended for the purpose. Another very efficient measure is said to be a small fan, so placed as to blow directly upon the glass.

Some years ago a correspondent of the "Scientific American" reported to that journal a number of experiments he had made to remove ice or congelation of water from window-panes. He placed the efficacy of the remedies he employed in the following order:

Remedies Tried and Tested

(1) Flames of an alcohol lamp; (2) sulphuric acid; (3) aqua ammonia; (4) glycerin; (5) nitric acid; (6) hydrochloric acid; (7) benzine; (8) hydriodic acid; (9) boric acid; (10) alcohol; (11) cobalt nitrate; (12) infusion of nutgalls; (13) tincture or solution of ferrous sulphate.

Some years ago H. F. Ruhl, of Manheim, P., read a paper before a State association in which he declared that the only really effective way to avoid window frost was to have the window properly constructed in the first place, and to use suitable methods of heating and lighting in the second. He had remodelled his window in accordance with his particular ideas. To quote a portion of Mr. Ruhl's paper:

"It is a well-known fact that where illumination is produced by kerosene, gas, or gasoline, the condensation of moisture on the glass is worse at night. This shows that illumination has something to do with the frost on the window. Heat supplied from a stove, a hot-air furnace, or a steam boiler also causes more or less condensation of moisture.

"In the writer's store the window is left open at the back, except that a mirror back is used; this is 30 inches high, is hung on a Pullman car spring sash balance, thus permitting it to be raised or lowered at will. At night, when the temperature ranges somewhat lower, the mirror back is raised, thus admitting warmed air to the bottles of the window and entirely preventing frost during the night. The store is heated with a hot-water heater. With this heat the radiating surfaces do not become so hot as with stove or steam heat and there is no doubt that hot-water heat is a strong factor in preventing frost on the window. The store is lighted with electricity, and this, because of the absence of an open flame, is without doubt another factor in preventing frost.

"'The proof of the pudding is in the eating,' and here's the proof of the store with the frost-proof windows: The writer's windows were entirely free from frost during the past winter, while the windows of the other stores in town were covered with frost for months at a time."

Results of Research

Quite a formidable list of glycerine and soap mixtures are employed for the purpose of preventing the condensation of moisture on the screens and windows of motor cars. During the war one of the Research Committees of the United States investigated the subject anew with the object of finding out the best "anti-dimming" preparation for gas-respirator eye-pieces. The official formula is as follows:

Sulphonated castor oil (85%)	100 parts
Sodium hydroxide	15 parts
Water-glass syrup	5 parts
Paraffin oil (heavy)	5 parts

The following two formulae are improvements on the above:

(1) Sodium salt of 65% sulphonated rape oil containing 35% water	100 parts
Sodium hydroxide	20 parts
Water-glass syrup	5 parts
Glycerin	3 parts
"Marine" oil	3 parts

Dried to form a solid stick when compressed.

(2) Potassium salt of 62% sulphonated cotton oil containing 38% water	100 parts
Sodium hydroxide	15 parts
Water-glass syrup	3 parts
Glycerin	3 parts
"Marine" oil	3 parts

Dried to form a solid stick when compressed.

The "marine" oil referred to is heavy paraffin oil. The surface of the glass is first polished until clean and dry, then a little of the composition applied, rubbed in with the hand, and polished off with a soft rag until the surface is clear.

Were Conditions of Storage Responsible for This Trouble?

London, England.—Ten or welve persons have died recently in England and Scotland recently from what is said to be botulism or food poisoning. The Daily Express has discovered that cans of food are being brought into the country from the war dumps in France, "reconditioned" and sold for human consumption. Dealers who have examined samples of this food declare that in many cases it was fermenting to such an extent that the tins bulged with the gases inside. In one instance a consignment bought for the feeding of cattle was afterwards sold to retail grocers at cut prices.

The head of a preserved provision house said that much of the stuff already brought over is six and eight years old, and unfit for food. There are in a dump near Paris something like 200,000 cases of tinned tomatoes. The whole dump was bought by an English firm, who sent their agents over to inspect the stock. Only 22,000 of 200,000 cases were found to be in decent condition. The firm, therefore, cancelled the contract. Tins of these tomatoes are, however, still sold, and some of them have come here. A recent case of botulism was said to have been caused by the eating of tinned tomatoes.

A consignment of many thousands of tins of salmon arrived recently invoiced as high-grade red salmon. A prominent firm obtained samples, but the stuff proved to be low-quality fish in poor condition, and they refused to purchase it. The whole consignment was then sold to be grated up and made into fish paste.

Energetic action is being taken by the minister of health, and rigorous punishment is threatened for persons who distribute tinned food unfit for consumption.

What is Usual Gross Profit on Sugar?

Grocer Seeks Information as to Profits on Certain Staple Commodities—Another Merchant Seeks Selling Talk for Oranges by Way of Advertising Their Vitamine Properties

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

HENRY Phillips continues his queries:

Is it a fact that in Pasteurized milk the vitamines are destroyed and if oranges are given to children, the lack is supplied? If you can answer in the affirmative, please write on a separate sheet so I can put it in my orange window and have a copy made for theatre slides. How do you pronounce vitamines, anyway? I am kind of scared of the word!

I referred Mr. Phillips to the University, right at hand. Pasteurized milk is heated to 165 degrees only and that may not destroy vitamines; but the university people anywhere can tell this, I believe; and it is worth while for a grocer to know.

But there is no doubt that oranges are rich in this essential food element. So are tomatoes, canned and raw, but particularly raw. So are raw potatoes. Raw potato juice, or finely grated raw potato is a specific for scurvy. Men literally rotting away with the disease recover so rapidly as to seem miraculous—in seven days or less in many cases. Practically all fresh fruits and vegetables carry vitamines. Hence their great wholesomeness and food value.

Pronounce vy-ta-meens, I believe.

Do you notice that Mr. Phillips wants to put the information in his window and on the movie screen? He does not hide his light under a bushel. Looks like a good, live, wakeful idea to me.

From New Brunswick comes this:

Canadian Grocer:

Gentlemen:—Could you give us a fair idea of the gross profit usually obtained by grocers and general merchants on the following: Sugar, in 100 pound bags and weighed out in small lots; rolled oats and other cereals weighed out, also in packages; spices and baking supplies in packages; salt pork and beef weighed by the pound; molasses and vinegar, kerosene oil. Our competitors are in the habit of selling some few staple goods, especially sugar, at practically no profit. Sugar now costs us $8.12 delivered and they sell it for $8.20. Is it good business for us to meet their prices or let them have the sugar trade? They have an advantage, being also in the dry goods trade on which, no doubt, they make up the loss, while we have only groceries, flour and feed.

These conditions will be recognized as generally prevalent by every retail merchant, and my answer to this man was thusly:

In general, I can say that sugar in 100 pound bags should pay about 25c per bag, regardless of the market, but I have known grocers to handle it for 5c the bag. Further, one grocer I knew who followed out this plan was a busy, successful man who expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with his margin on sugar. Years ago, after a long period during which the wholesale grocers of Toronto had handled sugar without margin, they agreed to make 25c. the barrel, which was the customary unit of sale those days. Shortly afterwards, one of the most prosperous and progressive among them expressed the opinion to me that they would be better off if they made no money on sugar.

I referred my correspondent to the Harvard Bureau of Business Research, Cambridge, Massachusetts, for a list of its bulletins on the grocery trade. The entire collection, issued to date, will cost around $5 to $8, and—provided he reads them attentively—they will be worth many times the cost.

Then there is "Profits in Prunes," issued by California Prune Association, San Jose; the Orange Book, issued by California Fruit Growers' Exchange, Los Angeles; and "Apple Money is Easy Money," issued by Wenatchee District Co-operative Association, Wenatchee, Washington—all free for the asking, and all good if read carefully.

I hope to have some more specific studies on right margins for the various grocery staples put into booklet form and ready within the next few months. But let it now be noted that because a staple is sold for a price that does not return cost plus the average expense it is not necessarily unprofitable. For, if it be conceded that certain items cost more than the average to handle, it must logically follow that certain others cost less. That is true. How much less, in varying circumstances, environments, character of service rendered and other factors, must be ascertained by detailed analysis in each store.

Merchant Must Do His Own Analyzing

The best any treatise can do is give general, average conditions and draw conclusions therefrom, also on averages. Specific instance may be cited for illustration; but the use thereof depends on the reader's ability to apply the reasoning to his own business, having in mind all factors and their variations. I hope that all this may be facilitated by my book when ready.

This correspondent is a Canadian co-operative concern. As such, it interests me specially on general principles. But this is additionally interesting because, while evidently able to show a profit, the manager seems to lack ability to make a clear statement of conditions. For example, he writes:

The following is a report of our last year's work. We would like to have your opinion on it:

The first figures submitted are these: Total sales, $41,898.25; gross profit, $3,150.02; net profit, $2,431.23.

Then follow these figures:

	1874.93
Wages	82.00
Insurance	90.47
Int. & Disct.	470.46
Mangrs. Salary	1.210.00
Office help	22.00
Average stock on hand	2,500.00
Real Estate	3,645.00
Accts. Receivable	5,399.45
Cash on hand	1,300.00
Profit for year	1.141.66

Then comes this:

Total General Expense, including salaries, wages, etc...	1.949.55
Bad debts written off	170:65
Depreciation, Real. Estate	200.00
Average Gross profit	.7%
Capital Stock paid up	4 570.00
Bills Payable	5,600.00
Accounts Payable	2,836.44

We also shipped over 5,000 barrels of apples, giving a profit of $835.73.

Finally:

Total net profit on everything	1.8%
Expenses and salaries	3.3%
Net profit on merchandise, not including expenses and salaries	5.8%

Apparently Makes Money Anyway

I confess that I cannot make these figures dovetail. Maybe the rather vague use of the word "net" is partly to blame. Obviously, there can be only one really net profit; that means what is earned, net, in total or percentage, on sales. Obviously, too, there can be only one net earnings; the sum earned, stated in total or percentage, on the running investment. Yet here we have a variety of figures.

If we assume that the first three figures state a final fact, then we shall have to add the $835.73 for apples. That will yield us earnings of $3.266.96: If we figure that against capital stock of $4.570, we shall show yearly earnings of 71.48 per cent. plus, or nearly 71½ per cent. If we take the $3 266.96 and deduct the stated total of expenses, $1,949.55, we shall have left $1,317.41; and that would show 28.8 per cent. plus on capital. Either showing would be satisfactory, though the first should seem to be preposterously unlikely.

Again, if we take the first stated "gross profit," $3,150.02, as being inclusive of everything and from that deduct the stated total expenses, $1,949.55, we shall have $1,200.47. Figure that against the total of all investment in the business, which appears to be $12,844.45, we shall show capital earnings of 9.34 per cent. plus. Again, that would be a good showing.

I might go on showing other combinations, but we would progress no farther that way. If my friend had actual earnings, on sales, of 1.8 per cent., in 1921, he made a good showing. We may sense how good it was if we recall that many merchants in all lines went broke last year. We can go further than that and say that if he can make 1.8 per cent. regularly, year by year, he will make a good showing. Therefore, if this statement is accurate—I mean if he is actually making 1.8 per cent. net on sales now—he thereby shows that he is coping with competition and other business problems successfully.

But I should like to have further explanatory details—if what I have written indicates to my friend that he needs anything further.

How to Display Prunes, Etc.

Here is a suggestion that may be worth while:

I have read your articles in Canadian Grocer for four years and must say any man in the grocery business can get a "head full" of good things if he will take the time to read them—and then put them into practice in his business. It would be a small investment with large returns....I notice somebody asked for a suggestion for a suitable display container for prunes. Here is my system: I buy three gallon display jars with covers. This size will hold nearly a 25 pound box of prunes, 'cots or peaches. They cost about $1.75 each. Set on counter. Keep full and you will have real results.

That's a fine idea and simple to put into execution. Of course, the jars must be kept clean. I do not say "cleaned occasionally." I say kept clean. That means daily work. But that's the way to fill odd moments profitably, keep everybody from getting bored, and it's the way to make money in your business.

WERE CONDITIONS OF STORAGE RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS TROUBLE?

tins has been discovered by the sanitary authorities of the port of Dover.

A consignment of more than four tons of contaminated corned beef, sufficient to spread illness among a multitude, has been seized at Dover and destroyed. Markings on the tins showed that the beef had been canned in July, August and September, 1918, but the cases had been relacquered recently.

Editor's Note:—Undoubtedly the conditions under which these canned goods were stored had a great deal to do with the trouble. There is a lesson to be learned from the above which every retailer and wholesaler should give much consideration. Those having canned goods in stock should pay particular attention to the storage and see that everything is in proper shape and that no damage can result from overheating or excess moisture. In another section of this issue are suggestions on the better storing of canned goods.

HALF HOLIDAY QUESTION A LIVE ONE IN EDMONTON

Edmonton, Dec. 13.—Edmonton is in the middle of a hot battle between the retailers of the city and their clerks over the question of a compulsory weekly half holiday. The retailers won the first round in the fight when they got the council to suspend a clause in the city charter providing for the half holiday on Wednesdays or Saturdays. The clerks won the next engagement by getting an order from the supreme court quashing the action of the council. Now the merchants have replied with another legal action, in which they are asking the courts to declare the whole clause in the charter illegal and beyond the proper powers of the Alberta legislature to place in the city charter.

Now It's Bacon and Cheese

IS GREAT BRITAIN falling behind as a meat eating nation? Is the famous roast-beef dinner of the Englishman on the wane?

According to "Field" a publication printed in England, and a paper of exceedingly high standing, this is the case. Referring recently to the Nation's Food Exhibition held in London, it pointed out that raw beef and mutton appeared to be totally unrepresented in the vast building. Although this was largely due to the special aims and conditions of such an exhibition, "Field" maintains it has a further significance. It declares that the upper and middle classes in Great Britain have ceased to be meat eaters to an extent which would probably shock their ancestors could they return to share their repast.

The reason given for the change is partly on account of the widespread gravitation to town or indoor life, and partly to a less formal and pretentious style of entertaining; also to a large extent by the needs and consequences of the War. At a time when beef and mutton were hard to secure the Englishman learned to appreciate more the sustaining power and character of good cheese and bacon, and became skilled in the preparation of dishes from these and other easily procured products.

"Field" also made reference to Canada's grain display at this exhibition and the great wheat crop which has been harvested during the past season. It asked the question as to how many of the non-agricultural public know that on the figures given, the produce per acre of the Canadian farm in this exceptional season is barely two-thirds of the average British output?

No doubt this is due to intensive farming in the Old Country which has not reached the same stage in Canada, a comparatively new country.

Advertisements Lack Interest

GLANCING through the advertising pages of the daily and weekly newspapers, and judging by the sample of advertising copy contained therein, one is almost inclined to ask, what is the matter with the retail grocery business?

The majority of advertisements are nothing more or less than a price list and are apparently written with the object in view of conveying to the mind of the reader one of cheapness irrespective of quality. Occasionally one will run across an outstanding example, where the merchant has endeavored to make the advertisement something more than a list. He has said something interesting which cannot help but hold the readers' attention and create in them a wish at the same time to know the store and the merchant more intimately.

But the bulk of the advertisements are decidedly lacking in originality and interesting selling talk. The typography may be a little different and the size of the space vary, but after all the almost deadly sameness and the apparent mad rush to sell goods cheap can hardly escape observation. This form of publicity lowers the standard of business, and leaves the impression on the mind of the reader that the retail grocer is almost anything but a real merchant.

The ideal advertisement and the real business getter is one which tells the story of the goods in an interesting way, leading the reader on to the point where the desire to obtain some of the goods is created.

Expulsion of the Greeks

A RECENT report from Constantinople indicates that the Kemalists are preparing to deport the Greek and Armenian inhabitants on the Mediterranean and Black Sea coast lines. Recognizing the fact that the Turk is not considered, at least on this side of the world, a business man, and that practically all of the export business in Turkey has been conducted by the Armenians and the Greeks, Canadian Grocer finds a diversity of opinions as to the probable effect on importations to this country of Turkish dried fruits.

One opinion is expressed that the Turks will continue to carry on business with the world at large, and, although as a rule the Turks have not been known in international commerce, they are ably qualified to conduct business. They are considered by men who have done business with them to be strictly honorable and reliable in all their commercial transactions. Other importers are of the opinion that shipments of dried fruits from Smyrna will cease altogether, basing this statement on the fact that the Turk is not a business man and has been conducting his trade relations for many years through the agency of the Armenians, Greeks and other foreign residents of Turkey. "If the Turks let the fruit waste on the ground and do not take advantage of the export business already built up, I do not see why anyone should worry over it. If we cannot get Turkish figs and raisins, we will simply turn our efforts to other channels and buy and sell other lines which show us a profit," is the way another large importer expressed it.

The trade will watch with interest developments in the East, and the effect on importations from there.

Will Discontinue Stores

DISCUSSION at the annual meeting of the United Farmers' Co-Operative Company Ltd., this week in Toronto centred pretty much around the question of the operation of the retail stores. Losses of more than $55,000 were encountered during the year, and the branch stores were claimed to be the chief cause of the same. General manager H. B. Clemes frankly declared in favor of cleaning out the branch store business entirely. He did not think it was the function of the co-operative company to try and serve a pound of sugar, a pint of oil or a pound of nails.

The president, too, in discussing the branch stores problem also referred to the fact that U.F.O. members had not been loyal to the stores, but had succumbed as he termed it to the lower prices of competitors. He instanced the case of one club after having ordered a carload of supplies had refused the same, because the market had dropped, and they could buy them cheaper elsewhere.

The decision of this co-operative organization to discontinue its retail business is sufficient indication that retailing is not their particular field, and the heavy losses incurred are ample proof of the same.

Maritimes

A grocer in New Brunswick was charged a few days ago with the illegal sale of one 35-cent bottle of vanilla extract, and was fined $225, which he appealed. He was called upon to give bail for $500 on one single sale charge and $1,000 for illegal possession of intoxicating liquor.

The wholesale grocers of Cape Breton Island have formerly withdrawn from the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Nova Scotia and have formed a guild of their own. The Nova Scotia wholesale grocers feel that this move will hurt their branch of the guild and are sorry to see the break. It is understood that J. McConnell, wholesale grocer, will be the president of the new formed guild. O. A. Mann will be the secretary.

Quebec

C. Ritz, local sales manager of the Robin Hood Milling Co., was west this week on a business trip.

Thos. Lewis, Montreal, sales manager of the Dominion Sugar Refineries was in Toronto this week attending a meeting of the company's representatives.

E. J. Longard, chairman of the board of directors of the Acadia Sugar Refining Co., Ltd., of Halifax was in Montreal this week on the company's business.

Ontario

T. E. Paterson, of Gibson-Paterson Ltd., brokers and manufacturers' agents, Winnipeg, is in Toronto this week on a business trip.

Graham Bros., Grand Valley, who recently suffered a heavy loss by fire, have opened up temporarily in the Dillon block, but intend to rebuild the old stand.

J. A. Chevrier, grocer in Belleville, has purchased the grocery business of Arnold Boscoe of the same city. Mr. Chevrier will now operate the two stores.

The grocery store of John Penny in Belleville was entered a few nights ago and the sum of $140 was stolen as well as a good portion of a large box of chewing gum. Groceries and other merchandise in the store were untouched.

Breaking a window in Weiler's grocery at Teeswater, a young man whose identity is still unknown, entered the store and carried off a large box of biscuits. The crash of glass was instantly heard by Mr. Weiler who was sleeping upstairs, but before he could get down to the store the burglar made good his escape.

SEND IN A PHOTOGRAPH OF YOUR CHRISTMAS WINDOW DISPLAY

Canadian Grocer would like to get a number of photographs of Christmas window display for reproduction. Merchants are invited to send in a photo of their window. The best size for this purpose is eight by ten inches. The sum of $3 will be paid for each photo if the invoice is attached.

Sugar Companies Move Their Offices From Montreal

Montreal, (Special).—It is assured that early in the new year two Canadian refineries will move their offices from Montreal. Thos. Lewis, local manager of Dominion Sugar Refineries, told Canadian Grocer representative that all he could say at present is that some time in the new year they would close their Montreal office. The firm is holding a meeting at the time of going to press and nothing definite about their plans can be learned until after that meeting. Rumor has it that Mr. Lewis will take charge of the Dominion Sugar Refining Co.'s office in Hamilton.

The officials of the Acadia Sugar Refining Co., Ltd., state that early in 1923 they will close their executive office in Montreal and move it back to Halifax from whence they came two years ago. It is understood that they will maintain a sales office only in Montreal. The officials of the company state that they find it to their advantage to consolidate their executive staff at their own refineries since they are somewhat handicapped by being so far from their producing plant.

NEW PRESIDENT OF THE CITY DAIRY COMPANY

United States and Canada Confer on Postal Matters

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—The International Postal Conference between Canada and United States, held here recently, decided to dispense with the "advice" on all money orders between the two countries. When the regulation covering this decision is brought in effect recipients of Canadian postal money orders in United States will be able to secure their currency without the necessity of waiting until the United States' post office is advised of the issue. In this connection a new money order form will probably be prepared. No action was taken with regard to international cash on delivery service, as Canadian officials felt that this feature should be submitted to a longer test within the Dominion before being placed upon an international basis. The system has only been in operation in Canada for two months.

It was agreed that the present international weight for parcels of four pounds, six ounces, should be mutually extended to eleven pounds, the domestic postal rates of each country to apply.

In view of the fact that a heavier percentage of parcel post enters Canada from United States than is sent from this country to the republic it was agreed that Canada should share in the postage on the difference on a 50-50 basis. The difference in the value of the postage between what United States sends Canada, and what Canada sends United States will be figured out and this amount will be divided. This will mean an increased revenue for the Canadian post office department.

Special delivery service will be speeded up by the decision to permit the use of the stamps of the country in which the letter originates for this purpose. In this connection it was decided to establish a standard fee of 20 cents for special delivery letters posted in one country for delivery in the other. The United States domestic rate is 10 cents.

There is also to be closer co-operation between the postal authorities of Canada and United States in the detection of fraud. The exchange of fraud orders or reports will be one of the first steps. It was pointed out by American delegates that frequently fraud operations in United States were conducted from Canada and vice versa.

The American delegates were the guests of the Canadian government at dinner during the conference.

Action Goes Against U.F.O. for Breach of Cotton Seed Contract

Toronto, Dec. 11.—After an action in which figured promises, failures, the rise of markets and the fall of the same, Justice Middleton has given judgment in the suit between the Humphreys Godwin Company, of Memphis, plaintiffs, and the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, for $3,933, claimed as a breach of contract to buy 240 tons of cotton seed meal, in favor of the Tennessee company.

The contract was made in November, 1920, through Frederick Smith, an independent Toronto broker. J. Edward McRostie, manager of the Co-operative's grain department, alleged that when Mr. Smith had sold the seed at $50 a ton he said the market would never go lower as the cotton growers were not making money at the prices they were selling at and could not possibly afford to sell at a lower figure. He also stated that it had been promised that the plaintiffs would stand behind the Co-operative and see that they did not lose.

In December the market began to fall and the plaintiffs received a letter from the United Farmers' Co-operative Company repudiating the contract and saying that the Memphis Company had guaranteed them against loss, and had promised to turn over a lot of orders to them. On hearing this Mr. Smith communicated with the Co-operative and told them that the statements about guarantees were "unqualified falsehoods." The Co-operative immediately wrote to Memphis and complained of the tone of this letter, but the Memphis Company replied that they had better get in touch with Mr. Smith himself.

Mr. McRostie stated in the action that when he saw how the prices were falling, he wanted to get in touch with Mr. Smith but did not know where to get him. On December 4 he got a letter from the Humphreys, Godwin Company asking for shipping instructions. This he referred to A. A. Powers, president of the United Farmers' Co-operative. They agreed to accept 60 tons as a shipment in January.

Acting for the plaintiff, H. J. Scott, K. C., asked if he and Mr. Powers had discussed repudiating the contract.

"Probably we did discuss that," replied Mr. McRostie. He also admitted that perhaps the drop in the price of meal, which amounted to $7 a ton, had something to do with it.

J. J. Morrison on Stand

When called to the stand, Mr. Powers admitted that if the market had gone up there would have been no talk of misrepresentation.

J. J. Morrison, who also gave evidence, said that he, as secretary-treasurer of the company, had never agreed with Mr. Smith that it was a good time to buy cotton seed meal. He said that Mr. Smith had come to see him several times but that it was to get him to use his influence with other members of the co-operative company.

Frederick Smith said that he had various offers from companies in the city, but that he had offered the seed to the United Farmers at $50 a ton, and that Mr. Morrison had told him that it was $1 less than any offer he had received, and quoted one at $51. But in evidence Mr. Morrison denied that he had ever mentioned a $51 a ton offer.

Fire Destroys Large Supply of Sugar and Soap

Fort William, Ont., Dec. 12.—In a fire, the most spectacular that Fort William has seen since the destruction of the Canadian Pacific elevator "B," number five freight shed of the Canadian Pacific Railway was totally destroyed the other evening.

The fire started at 7 o'clock, when providentially the shed was empty of men, somewhere at the west end of the huge shed. In less than 30 minutes the waterfront was ablaze over a length of 1,000 feet, flames leaping through the skeleton timbers of the roof to a height of 100 feet.

Soap and Sugar in Storage

The structure was nothing but a mass of timbers, enclosed in corrugated iron siding, with not a fire wall in the whole 960 feet to offer the semblance of resistance to the sweep of the flames. It was two stories in height and in the upper portion was stored about 36 carloads of soap and some 45 carloads of sugar.

From the time that the fire was first discovered there was not the slightest hope of saving the building or the contents. Smoke, which made the interior of the shed black as pitch, poured through the building, and one or two persons who were on the dock had hard work to grope their way out. They had to feel along the corrugated iron sides, so as not to stumble into the river until they reached the east end of the shed and found their road clear to the subway leading from the city dock.

Letters To The Editor

THIS RETAILER GETS GLOBE CIRCULAR

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

We have been following the actions of The Toronto Globe in its mail order propaganda, and consider such work should be beneath "The Globe."

Evidently they are father to the slogan "Us for Toronto."

They also had the nerve to send the writer one of their information blanks to fill out.

The retail merchants' situation is not one to be envied, and such action as The Globe is taking is sufficient to make towns support the U. F. O.

Yours truly,
The Craig Co., Ltd.

Suggestions for Better Storage of Canned Goods

1. Avoid rough handling of cases at all times. It damages tins and starts leaks and swells.

2. Watch for the evidences of can leak stains on the outside of the cases. One broken can, no matter what the cause, can stain a remarkable number of cans if the case is allowed to stay in the pile.

3. Storage should be cool, dry and frost proof. Do not store alongside of radiators or steam pipes. Extreme heat or cold will impair the quality. Rapid changes of temperature will cause cans to sweat, resulting in rusty cans and damaged labels.

4. Do not store in basements if possible to avoid it. If absolutely necessary, be sure to put strips of lumber under piles so that the bottom case is at least two inches from the floor.

5. Store cases on their sides and change position occasionally, "THIS IS MOST IMPORTANT."

6. Store goods so that first in will be first out.

RECOMMENDATIONS REGARDING SALMON NOT EFFECTIVE IN 1923

Ottawa, Dec. 7.—The recommendations of the Duff Commission that sockeye salmon fishing on the Fraser river in British Columbia be closed for five years will not be made effective in the 1923 season, it was stated by W. A. Found, director of fisheries in the Marine Department. Word to this effect has been sent to the salmon fisheries on the Fraser.

The recommendation of the commission in regard to sockeye fishing on the Fraser was not unanimous, two of the commissioners dissenting, and was contingent on the United States following a similar course on Puget Sound. Furthermore, it is stated at the Marine Department, advance preparations for next year's fishing on the Fraser are now being made.

The number of Japanese licenses issued in 1922 was 2,614, a reduction of 200 from the previous year. If the 40 per cent. reduction recommended by the Duff Commission is put into effect, the number of licenses held by Japanese will be reduced by 1,045.

SHOOTS HIS MANAGER AND THEN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Saskatoon, Sask., Dec. 12.—After fatally wounding David McNair with a bullet from a .32 calibre revolver, Albert G. Davidson turned the weapon on himself and committed suicide in the Mitchel general store at Dunn Lake, Sask., a few days ago.

Davidson, a man of 65, had been employed for 28 years as a clerk in the store. McNair, some thirty years his junior, was the manager.

According to Armand Guilbault, another clerk in the store, who was a witness of the suicide, Davidson had been accused of stealing goods and cash, by McNair, had confessed his guilt, and been discharged at the lunch hour. Returning, apparently to ask for his check, he followed the manager into the business office of the store, hidden from view by a partition, and there fired the two fatal shots.

IS ALLEGED TO HAVE MADE FALSE RETURNS TO WHOLESALERS

Bures Laskin, general store keeper at Goodeve, Sask., was arrested at Yorkton recently by request of the Winnipeg city police. He is wanted to answer a charge of having made false returns to Winnipeg wholesale houses and the amount involved is alleged to have been between $10,000 and $12,000. He will be brought to Winnipeg for trial.

SECRETARY OF B. C. R. M. A. ADDRESSES KAMLOOPS RETAILERS

Kamloops, B. C., Dec. 7.—In an address to the merchants of Kamloops and district at a banquet at the Leland Hotel the other night, G. S. Hougham, secretary of the B. C. Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, told of the accomplishments and aims of the association for the betterment of the retail trade conditions.

Incidentally, Mr. Hougham spoke of the necessity of informing the public mind regarding the attitude of the association. When dissatisfied the consumers were liable to blame the party nearest to them—the retailer—for the injustice they felt was being done them. This was unfortunate, he said, for usually the blame should be placed further back. The retailers' association, he declared, desired to play fairly with the public.

Prov. R.M.A. Sec'y Chief Speaker at Kamloops Banquet

Kamloops, B. C., Dec. 12.—G. S. Hougham, secretary of the B. C. Board of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, was the chief speaker at a banquet given here recently, at which a large number of the retail merchants of the town and district were present. The chair was taken on this occasion by the president of the Kamloops association, J. R. Colley. Mr. Hougham in his remarks dwelt on the value of organization, and what the retail merchants throughout Canada have accomplished through being organized. He instanced the defeat of the personal property tax as it affected British Columbia. Such a tax was inequitable and unfair. Then again, the association was taking action on the question of the Oriental at the Coast. He gave figures indicating the growth of Oriental retail trade in Vancouver and the province generally, and showed how Chinese and Japanese were going ahead in agriculture and other lines.

$30,000 FIRE VISITS TOWN OF CHINOOK, ALTA.

Chinook, Alta., Dec. 12.—Property damage estimated at $30,000 was done by fire in the business section a few nights ago. The blaze started in Montgomery's general store and totally destroyed a drug store, grocery shop, Masonic Hall, and implement warehouse. The flames were eventually halted by a volunteer bucket brigade.

SELLS RAISINS BY THE CASE

A retail dealer in Rapid City, Man., recently advertised in his local paper raisins by the case in both packets and bulk, seedless or seeded. He pointed out that they were a good buy at the present time.

Editor's Note.—Merchants who are located in the smaller centres and who have among their customers a good many country people could very well consider at the present time the lines they should endeavor to sell by the case. Some of these customers do not come to the buying centres during the cold weather months, and they will need many things by the case, or in other large containers. For instance, there is sugar, salt, tea, prunes, apricots, canned vegetables, tobacco, flour, breakfast cereals, etc. These are a few of the lines that might be featured at the present time and the attention of the out-of-town buyers who come a long distance called to them at the first opportunity.

B.C. Fishermen Do Not Approve of Five-Year Closure

New Westminster, Dec. 13.—At a recent meeting of the executive of the B. C. Fishermen's Protective Association, a committee consisting of Oscar Eckroth, Leon Patterson and J. N. Brodwick, with Secretary Maiden, was appointed to draft a communication to Ottawa protesting against the proposed five-year closure of sockeye fishing and proposing instead the following arrangement:

That there be no fishing allowed during July with gill nets of less than eight-inch mesh; that sockeye fishing, that is with a 5 3-4-inch mesh net, be confined to the forty-five days from August 1 till September 15; that from September 15 to 30, no 6 1-2-inch mesh nets be allowed, nothing smaller than seven-inch.

The fishermen recommend also that the annual close season for all kinds of fishing be definitely fixed as from November 20 till December 31.

In regard to the weekly close season, the fishermen are prepared to accept the sixty-hour period advocated by the commission but ask that it be from 6 p. m. Friday till 6 a.m. Monday, instead of from 6 a.m. Saturday till 6 p.m. Monday, as the commission recommended.

Joe Gabriel, an Indian from upcountry and a member of the executive, reported that as a result of conditions at Hell's Gate canyon many of the sockeye were unable to get up to their spawning grounds and have floated down the river dead with the spawn in them.

The executive will back the commission's recommendation to have conditions there remedied.

Other points in the commission's reports will be taken up at a later date.

B. C. HONEY CROP PRODUCTION IS AT RECORD FIGURE

Nelson, Dec. 13.—British Columbia's honey crop breaks all records this year, according to the official estimate just given out here by W. J. Shepherd, provincial apiarist. The crop totals 711,356 pounds against 309,074 last year. At 25 cents wholesale, the crop is valued at $177,839, against $89,631 last year, when the wholesale price was 29 cents. The average yield for the 11,591 hives in the 2,143 apiaries in the province is 61 pounds. There has been a gain of 71 apiaries and 1,262 hives. Beeswax worth $5,000 has also been produced. Eleven years ago the provincial production was 20 tons against 355 this year.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE raw sugar market has been fairly steady during the week. Sales of new crop Cuban sugar were made at 4c c. & f. New York for December shipment: 3 5/8c for January; and for February at 3½c c. & f. The weather in Cuba for the grinding of the new crop is reported favorable and there are now 13 central factories in operation. A new feature has entered into the sugar situation and that is the offering of 20,000 bags of Cuban refined made by the Cuban American Sugar Co. at Cardenas. This Cuban refined, said to be in transit is said to test approximately 100 per cent. and the duty is 1.912c or about 15 points above the duty on Cuban raws. The United Kingdom market is firm to dearer on raws while the refined market is down 6d due to light demand. U.S. refined is unchanged at $7.10 to $7.25 for fine granulated. There is nothing new in the Canadian refined situation, the price remaining on the basis of $8 Montreal.

The tea markets continue to advance under stimulus of a short crop and a strong demand. Prices on spot to the retail trade in most quarters show another advance this week, and as teas are still being quoted below replacement levels further advances can be expected.

The shortage in currants on spot is the feature in dried fruits, and resales have been numerous, which has considerably enhanced values. Shipments of currants are on the way but will not likely reach here until about the second week in January and upon which lower prices are quoted. Canned goods are moving in good volume while cereals continue strong. The southern rice markets are reported fairly active while European markets are weak. Nuts are unchanged but the demand is good. Prices are steady to firm at the moment, but some reductions are likely after the first of the year.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—The grocery trade is in a more healthy condition than it has enjoyed for some time. Buying is not heavy but it is steady with prices on a firmer basis. The Christmas trade calls for specialty lines more particularly and a brisk business is being done while on staple lines the demand is good. The trade shows a more optimistic outlook all through. Naturally a quiet period may be expected after next week but the new year is expected to open with a decided change for the better. Sugar shows weakness but the grocery trade both wholesale and retail is prepared. Cereals are a little easier with more competition for business and a lighter demand until after the new year. Package goods are steady. Dried fruits are expected to be lower after the holiday but the demand for currants in New York has forced up market values. Walnuts are easy but a last minute rush with a stronger tone is expected. The spice market is quiet. There is no change in flour. Oranges are easy for Christmas with big supplies. Cranberries are further advanced. The coffee market is steady with a good demand. Tea values are high but strong and will likely remain so for some months.

EASIER FEELING IN CEREALS

Montreal

CEREALS.—During the last week an easier feeling has developed in the cereal market. It does not actually indicate a tendency towards lower prices but it does show keener competition to sell. Some millers have made a slight reduction in their prices on rolled oats. Others are holding firm but December grain is slightly easier in price as well as in better supply. The trade is fairly well supplied until after the new year and this too tends to weaken the market.

BETTER CANNED GOODS MARKET

Montreal

CANNED GOODS.—The local wholesale trade expects a much improved market for canned goods after the new year. At the present time list prices are being well maintained and tomatoes in particular point towards higher prices. The whole trade is on a better basis with old stocks cleaned up and much less cutting than formerly. The demand after the holiday is sure to be good since the stocks carried by the retail trade are no larger than actually required.

FLOUR PRICES STEADY

Montreal

FLOUR.—Flour prices are steady with a firm wheat market backing it up. The local demand for spring wheat flour is only for small lots to meet immediate requirements. The trade in winter wheat flour is quiet since the trade has stocks on hand to carry it over the holiday season. Prices are well maintained and no change is in sight.

WALNUT MARKET UPSET

Montreal

NUTS.—While there is a good demand for all kinds of nuts and prices are fairly steady an uneasiness is evident in walnuts on account of the stocks of inferior nuts that have found their way to this market. Prices vary more at present than they have for some years and the retail and wholesale trade is dissatisfied with conditions in both shell and shelled walnuts. Easier prices may be expected in all nuts after the first of the year but dealers in this province are expecting a last minute demand for supplies right up till Jan. 1, that will likely tend to strengthen temporarily the market.

WEAKNESS IN DRIED FRUITS

Montreal

DRIED FRUITS.—Local dealers in dried fruits look for an easier market in all lines except currants after the first of the year. The currant market, while easier abroad, is strong in New York and it is expected that supplies will not be sufficient to meet the demand of the American wine makers, thus forcing values up. The demand for other lines is good and the trade is brisk with prices firm for the Christmas trade.

EASIER FEELING IN SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—While for the present there is no change in the sugar market local wholesalers frankly admit that they are looking for lower prices for the first of January if not before. The sugar refiners will not comment upon the situation. New crop raws will be in the hands of Canadian refiners before the end of the month and developments should come then. In the meantime the trade is buying in small quantities to cover immediate needs.

CHRISTMAS TREES PLENTIFUL

Montreal.

CHRISTMAS SPECIALTIES.—There promises to be a good supply of Christmas trees on the market. Most of the retailers have contracted for supplies at from 15c to 25c each and those offered already on the open market are selling at 15c. The demand will be greater next week and no doubt higher prices will be asked. Evergreen in bales is quoted at $2 a bale of 200 yards. Holly and mistletoe are scarce this year. The prices on mistletoe are almost prohibitive and little is being handled. Holly wreaths are quoted at $3 per doz.

TEA HAS STRONG FUTURE

Montreal.

TEA.—Local tea dealers and wholesale grocers are unanimously of the opinion that a strong market is ahead for tea for some months to come. Higher prices are being paid for the replenishment of stocks and package teas are also in a particularly strong position. Some packers have already advanced their prices and others, although discussing seriously the matter, have made no decision. The advance however is almost sure to come.

LOWER PRICES ON ORANGES

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The feature of the fruit market is the easy prices on oranges for the Christmas demand. Local fruit merchants are pleased with the business and claim that the low prices have stimulated the demand. While the quality of the oranges on the market is not extra the supply of all grades and varieties is good and moving freely. Boxed apples are slightly easier. Prices vary from $2 to $2.25. Some fruit dealers look for lower prices on oranges next week since more shipments are due. Other lines are steady in price.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—The feature in general grocery commodities is the shortage in currants and which reached a famine point during the past week. Since then, however, some small lots have arrived from Montreal but the situation is still acute. Some wholesalers have no currants to offer and in consequence of the shortage on spot, prices are considerably higher. The strong situation in teas is another feature of the spot market and importers have further advanced quotations to the retail trade. Cereals are strong while canned goods hold fairly steady. Nuts are moving in good volume but the tone of the market is steady at the moment. Rices are quiet and spices of all descriptions are active. Sugar is unchanged. Flour and millfeeds are steady.

LIMA BEANS QUOTED LOWER

Toronto.

BEANS.—The situation in Ontario beans continues with a firm tone and quotations are unchanged. California lima beans are quoted at a lower price of 10¾c. per lb. in bag lots and 11½c. per lb. in smaller quantities. According to the United States Department of Agriculture, the production of lima beans in California this year, is estimated at 1,350,000 bags of 100 lbs. each as compared with 825,000 bags of the same weight in 1921.

LOBSTER OFFERED AT LOWER PRICE

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Trading in canned vegetables and fruits is fairly active and quotations generally hold steady. There does not appear to be a great deal of buying for future and the most of the business is based on immediate requirements. Jams are quiet but the situation is steady. A lower price on lobsters is being quoted in some quarters. Halves are offered at $5.75 per doz. and quarters at $2.90 per doz.

NEAR FAMINE IN CURRANTS

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature in dried fruits is the shortage on spot of currants. For sometime past currants here have been rapidly cleaning up and a real shortage was in sight and which actually developed the middle of last week. On Wednesday there was hardly a pound of currants to be obtained on the street but later in the week some houses received small shipment of Filliatras and Amalias in barrels, from Montreal, which were generally cleaned up, and as we go to press some wholesalers are still without supplies. These supplies on account of being purchased in a second-hand way were quoted at 22½c. to 25c. per lb. Direct shipments of currants are on the way but are not due to arrive before the second week in January. These later shipments will reach the trade at a much lower lever of prices. Raisins hold steady and are moving in good volume while dates are in good supply with an easier tone. New Fard dates are quoted at 24c. per lb. in boxes of approximately 12 lbs.

SPOT NUTS STEADY

Toronto.

NUTS.—The spot situation in nuts continues fairly steady at unchanged quotations. During the past week trading in shelled nuts was not especially active, in fact one importer described it as quiet. Nuts in the shell, however, are moving in good volume and prices are steady. Some houses report being cleaned up of supplies of California walnuts but others have still a fair supply which are held at 36c. to 38c. per lb.

TEA ADVANCE CONTINUES

Toronto.

TEAS.—Advices from primary markets continue to indicate an upward tendency with prices now fully one shilling higher than the low point. The London stock is reported to be down to a three months' supply and it is estimated that the total Indian production this season amounted to 275,000,000 pounds as against 300,000,000 pounds for the preceding season and as compared with a normal average production of 340,000,000 pounds. The Colombo market reports a further advance under a strong demand. The spot situation reflects markets abroad. Importers have advanced prices to the retail trade 3c. per lb. on Tuesday of this week. This increase applies to practically all grades and as quotations are still below a replacement bas's, there is every reason to believe, that further advances will be registered.

POTATOES NOW SOLD BY GRADE

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—Dealers are now buying and selling potatoes by grade and although some complaints are heard about the method, the system is pretty well acknowledged to be the proper method of handling potatoes. The market is described as flat and the open weather is blamed somewhat for the easy feeling prevailing. Potatoes f.o.b.,Toronto, are quoted from 55c. to 65c. per bag and to the retail trade grade A, is quoted at 80c. to 90c. and grade B at 70c. to 80c. per bag. Other vegetables show little change as compared with a week ago. New carrots and beets are on the market and quoted at 90c. per doz. bunches for the former and 75c. per doz. for the latter. Cauliflower, radishes, green peppers and mushrooms are offered.

NO CHANGE IN SOAP

Toronto.

SOAPS.—There is no change in the situation on laundry soaps. The better known brands continue to be quoted at $6.90 per single box of 100 cakes.

HOLLY PRICES STEADY

Toronto.

HOLLY.—Holly is now plentiful on the market. Prices are unchanged at $6 per case and $2.50 per doz. for wreaths.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 13.—There are few features in the market for general grocery commodities but trading on the whole is fairly active, particularly on staples and lines suitable for the Christmas trade. The sugar market is strong under a recent advance. Coffees rule firm while teas show indications for further advances. Sardines are reported scarce and the tone of the markets upward. Cereals continue to show strength, particularly rolled oats. Dried fruits of all descriptions are moving in good volume and spot quotations hold fairly steady. Spanish shelled peanuts are reported higher. Oranges and grapes are in good demand for the Christmas trade. Vegetables are fairly steady and show few price changes.

FIRM COFFEE MARKET

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The Brazilian coffee market continues firm under an advance of about one cent per pound on practically all varieties. Locally the situation shows little change and while there is a good demand, grinders are purchasing in just sufficient quantities to meet the trade's requirements.

SARDINES REPORTED SCARCE

Winnipeg

CANNED GOODS.—Sardines are reported scarce and a small shipment of King Oscar and Cross Fish which has arrived is offered at higher quotations, the former at 16¾c per tin and the latter at 19c. Sardines generally are firm and are likely to advance. There is a slight uneasiness on some lines of salmon. Sockeye, however, remains firm. There is a good demand for all grades of salmon. Sales of canned vegetables have been fairly steady and market conditions show no change. Sales of canned fruits are limited, but indications point to an improvement after the first of the year.

DRIED FRUITS IN DEMAND

Winnipeg

DRIED FRUITS.—Wholesalers report that early arrivals of Spanish table raisins are practically cleaned up. Owing to strike conditions in the South, seeded and seedless raisins in 15-ounce packages are reported scarce. No Turkish figs are expected on the market this season and as the limited quantity of old crop has been cleaned up, the demand for California figs in packages shows an improvement. Portuguese cooking figs of good quality and at low quotations are meeting with ready sales. There is a good demand for dates of all kinds. Prices are somewhat easier. Bulk dates of finest quality are quoted at 9c per lb. Packers in order to place new brands of package dates on the market are offering cases of 36's at $2.85. Fard dates are also in good demand.

FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR A STRAWBERRY PLANT

Three Rivers, Mich., Dec. 13.—Fifty thousand dollars for a single strawberry plant was paid recently by Frank B. Beatty, President of the R. M. Kellog Co., fruit growers. The plant is to be known as "Rockhill" in honor of its breeder, Harlow Rockhill, of Conrad, Iowa. The price is believed here to be the highest ever paid for a single strawberry plant. The plant bears in early summer and begins again in late summer, bearing continuously until the frost comes. The purchaser said he believed the plant he had purchased would revolutionize the strawberry industry.

Did You Ever Stop to Think—

THAT your city is moving ahead. She has a winning gait.

THAT a diversity of paying enterprises, both of the soil and in the manufacturing field, will assure your city against business depression.

THAT your city should use every effort to develop the resources of your city and county which have lain dormant for many years.

THAT your citizens should be working together to make your city a better city, a finer city in which to bring up your families, a good city in which to make a living.

THAT the most satisfactory market center is a city where all the merchandise you need to buy and sell can be obtained quickly. The largest assortments, the least inconvenience and loss of time, and the lowest costs are the factors which determine its superiority.

THAT all that progressive citizens require, can be bought in your city.

THAT popularity always and ever will be the proof of the charm of a city.

THAT your citizens can make your city popular and well-liked and known as a good city in which to trade or live.

Credit Men Want a Supt. of Bankruptcy

Winnipeg, Dec. 11. — Recommendation for the appointment of a superintendent of bankruptcy, to whom all complaints regarding the administration of the Bankruptcy Act may be made, will be made to the minister of justice by the Credit Men's Trust Association. The legislative committee of the Canadian Credit Men has had under consideration several amendments to the present Bankruptcy Act with the view to more efficient administration of the Act.

The amendments to be suggested to the minister of justice include the restricting of the number of trustees to be appointed and limiting the appointments to persons fully qualified and the cancellation of some appointments previously made. The action of an authorized trustee in Eastern Canada in soliciting the retail trade for possible assignments was condemned, and it is suggested that steps be taken to prohibit such measures. For the greater protection of the creditors the suggestion will be made to the government that, pending the consideration of the composition, the legislation should enable the trustee to be invested with the assets of the assigned business.

Reproduction of a window display recently put in by Jenkins & Son, Charlottetown, P.E.I., and dressed by Hazen Baker, a member of the firm's staff. In the center is a hive of bees which assisted materially in stimulating sales of honey. The balance of the display is composed of apples, pears, cocoanuts, grapefruit, plums, grapes, oranges, cantaloupes, ripe tomatoes, cranberries, etc.

Canadian Potato Crop is 2,990,250 Tons

Average Yield per Acre is Slightly Under That of a Year Ago— Average Price for Grade C at 50c Per Cwt. is Said to Be the Lowest for Some Years at This Period of the Season

ACCORDING to the latest information from the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, the total crop of potatoes for all of Canada this year is estimated at 2,990,250 tons produced from 683,594 acres as against 3,220,380 tons from 701,912 acres last year. The average yield per acre this year is 4 1-3 tons as compared with slightly over 4½ tons in 1921.

No Speculating in Potatoes

The average price per hundred weight so far this season for the Dominion is 50c per bag delivered for grade C, which is the lowest for years at this period of the season. Apparently the reason for this is the fact that this fall there has been very little buying for storage by speculators who evidently have kept in mind the heavy losses of last spring and are quite content to let the farmer hold the stock and take a chance on the market improving later.

U. S. Crop Reported Large

Another factor in the situation is the big crop in the United States, which is nearly a million more bushels of potatoes this year than a year ago, and nearly half a million bushels greater than the average crop during the past five years. Furthermore, the high tariff will almost prohibit heavy shipments of Canadian potatoes from going to the country to the south. The large crop over there and the high tariff will naturally be factors in determining present prices.

The following indicate the production of potatoes in the Dominion:—

Northern Ontario Conditions

Fort William.—There were 1,500 acres of potatoes in this district and the average yield was 4½ tons per acre. Condition of the crop was only fair as there was considerable rot, some scab and rhizoctonia. Approximately 75 per cent. of the total crop is in pits, root cellars, common storage, etc. The average price received has been around $1 per cwt to the grower.

New Liskeard—There were 1,500 acres in potatoes, which gave an average yield of 4½ tons per acre. Quality of the stock is very good. A large percentage of the crop was stored, but there was a very heavy loss during the forest fires. Potatoes have been selling lately at $1.25 per cwt.

Central and Eastern Ontario

Alliston—The total acreage was 50 per cent. over 1921. The yield averaged 4¼ tons per acre of excellent quality potatoes with the exception of a few isolated districts where blight did considerable damage. Approximately one-third of the crop has been stored in pits, etc., but for the potatoes sold the grower received 75 cents per cwt.

Lindsay—There were approximately 2,000 acres planted in this district in 1922, and the average yield is estimated at 4½ tons to the acre. Quality was very good and 80 per cent. of the total crop was stored. The price ranges from 50 cents to $1 per cwt.

Morrisburg—The potato crop in this district was well above the average, and although there has been some rotting, the dry weather during the latter part of the season arrested this to a great extent.

Western Ontario Conditions

Leamington—In this district an average yield of 7½ tons to the acre is reported. The quality was very good, and from 40 to 50 per cent. of the crop is now in storage.

Caradoc District—There were approximately 700 acres planted to potatoes, and the average yield is estimated at 4½ tons per acre. Sixty-two per cent. of the crop is still in the hands of the grower. Price received by grower, 65 cents per cwt.

Wellington County—There were approximately 6,000 acres in potatoes, but the average yield is not over 3½ tons per acre. Eighty per cent. of the crop, which is very clean, is in storage, but for the portion sold the grower received from 55 to 60 cents per cwt.

Waterloo County—The average yield was 3 tons per acre. Fifty per cent. of the crop has been stored, and the price is around $1 per cwt.

Situation in Western Canada

There were approximately 19,200 acres planted to potatoes in British Columbia, which are yielding 6.16 tons per acre, against 5.28 last year. The quality is reported as good, with a little weather damage in some localities. In Alberta 42,503 acres were planted, which yielded on an average 2½ tons per acre. Half the crop has been sold at $12 per ton. The best yields were in the south and southwest of the Province. Nearly 56,000 acres were planted in Saskatchewan, with a yield of 4½ tons reported, as against 5½ tons a year ago. The quality of the crop is good. Manitoba farmers planted 38,798 acres, which averaged 4 tons per acre. The crop is of excellent quality, but prices have been so low, ranging from 25 cents to 90 cents per cwt., that a considerable portion has not been dug, and many tubers will be fed to stock. In all the Western Provinces much of the crop, probably 50 per cent., is being stored.

Eastern Canada Situation

In Quebec the crop will amount to only about sixty-five per cent. of that harvested a year ago, but the quality is good, with little damage from disease reported. The yield from the 175,980 acres planted will average three tons. In New Brunswick only half the yield from the same acreage as last year is reported for the potato crop this season. Nearly 75,000 acres were planted. The general quality is reported as good. The crop is stated to have done better in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, the average yield in these Provinces being 3¾ tons and 5½ tons, respectively. The quality is good. Prices in Eastern Canada for the portion of the crop sold average round 65 cents per cwt., with a dollar quoted on seed potatoes from Prince Edward Island. More than half of the crop is still in the hands of the grower. Over 40,000 barrels have been shipped from Nova Scotia to Havana, Cuba, and more are on the way.

Turkeys for Christmas Are Being Bought at From 41 to 42c per lb.

Deliveries of Poultry From Ontario Points Are Fairly Large—Offerings of Turkeys From the West a New Factor in This Market

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Deliveries of poultry from sections in Ontario have been fairly large during the past week and in consequence dealers who delayed storage operations have been fairly busy putting away their requirements.

Turkeys, however, as yet are not appearing in any great quantity and although the price has somewhat stiffened, it would appear that Ontario farmers are holding their supplies for a higher price during Christmas week. But a new factor has entered into the turkey situation and that is the offering of turkeys from the Western Provinces, and some of the local dealers predict that the West will be an important source of supply this winter. In fact several carloads of dressed turkeys have been purchased by local houses at a price said to be around 41c. to 42c. per lb., laid down in Toronto.

"As to whether prices of turkeys will be higher," said one dealer, "that will depend a great deal on whether the United States comes into this market. Buyers were here from the U. S. during the latter part of November which stiffened prices, but it remains to be seen what will happen as the Christmas holidays approach. It is safe to say that there is not any likelihood of prices being any lower."

Prophesies a Big Development in Can. Dairy Products

Ottawa, Dec. 12. (Special).—A hopeful view of the outlook for export trade in dairy products may be taken from the evidence of the deputy minister of agriculture, who recently returned from a visit to Great Britain where he took occasion to enquire as to the relative standing of these on the Old Country market. Addressing a gathering of senior officials of the Live Stock branch in Ottawa a few days ago, Dr. Grisdale prophesied a big development in dairy products, provided Canadian products are uniformly graded, are better advertised abroad and are produced and marketed with a view to meeting the exacting taste of the British consumer.

On the latter point Dr. Grisdale was able to say from his observations that Canadian butter is at a disadvantage as compared with butter from New Zealand and Australia for the reason that it lacks the uniformity so necessary to secure and maintain an established position on the market. At the same gathering, the dairy and cold storage commissioner, J. A. Ruddick, made the important announcement that after April 1 next year, it is proposed to grade all dairy products for export. This practice, it is expected, will have a great influence in stabilizing Canadian butter trade, and in maintaining for Canadian cheese the reputation that is now being jeopardized when considered side by side with New Zealand cheese. For some years cheese from New Zealand, owing to its greater uniformity, has been creeping up on Canadian cheese on the British market and now sells at an even price, and in many cases at a few cents above the price received for fine Canadian. With the system of grading that will go into effect next spring, no further ground should be lost by Canadian cheese, but rather it should again assume the lead that it held for many years.

Coreless and Seedless Fameuse Apples Are Produced in Quebec

Montreal. (Special).—At the annual meeting of the Pomological and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec held at Macdonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue, last week, it was announced that a seedless and coreless Fameuse apple had been developed near Abbotsford, Que. A number of samples of the apple were displayed at the meeting and fruit growers manifest much interest in the discovery. From a commercial point of view as well as from the botanical standpoint it is a great discovery.

A Real Fameuse

The apples were found to be genuine Fameuse, so popular for their flavor and keeping quality, only differing slightly in shape from the common variety. It is a little longer and flatter on the top but has the real Fameuse color and flavor. There is only a slight marking in the flesh where the core is generally found. The apples were exhibited by A. W. Buzzell, of Abbotsford, Que., who has built for himself a reputation in this province for his orchards. S. M. Luke, of Luke Bros., nurserymen, of Montreal, who examined the apples, told Canadian Grocer that little could be definitely said about the future of commercial possibilities of the freak apple or what fruit growers call "sport varieties."

The coreless apple was quite accidentally discovered. Mr. Buzzell, after picking this crop of apples found that some had no cores or seeds. It was too late to even tell from what trees they came or if all the apples on the tree were of the same nature. The orchard is to be carefully watched to see if the same apple appears next year. In the meantime the fruit growers of the province are reviewing among themselves the possibilities of the tree if it becomes a permanent variety.

Good Fruit From "Sport"

Mr. Luke pointed out to a Canadian Grocer representative that in the past some of our finest fruits have come from sports accidentally discovered and unexplained. He stated that one of the finest varieties of blue grapes found its beginning on a vine of black grapes and was grafted into a variety of its own. He also stated that some years ago in the United States a coreless and seedless Spencer apple was grown but it was found to be so poor in quality and flavor as to be unfit for commercial purposes. "If this apple proves to be permanent, a great future is in store for it. It will become famous and make a reputation not only for its producer but for Canada," said Mr. Blake. "In the meantime, we can only wait and hope."

Remembering the publicity given to a raspberry that brought a small fortune, Mr. Luke offered a million dollars for a limb from the parent tree that would reproduce the seedless Fameuse but he took the pleasure out of the offer by adding that the million would be paid in Russian money. Nevertheless Mr. Luke does not make little of the discovery or its possibilities. He most sincerely hopes that the variety can be established. He tasted one of the forty samples shown at the convention and was enthusiastic over its qualities.

WANTED GROCERIES EXEMPTED FROM EARLY CLOSING RESTRICTIONS

Winnipeg, Dec. 7.—A petition from the Retail Stores' Association to have groceries exempted from early closing restrictions was shelved by the Winnipeg public health committee at its meeting the other day. Repeated applications either for exemption of groceries or suspension of the Early Closing bylaw until the Shops' Regulation Act has been amended have been made but the committee takes the stand that nothing can be done except with the consent of all concerned.

Ald. W. B. Simpson informed a delegation that regulations for screening of prohibited goods and operation of the by-law was agreed to by both large and small stores and that the committee did not desire to take any action until all stores concerned had reached a satisfactory settlement as to the terms they desired in the bylaw and were prepared to abide by any further change made.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—The only feature of note in the produce and provision market is the strength apparent in butter on account of an improvement in the export outlook. Local wholesalers predict an advance in butter in the near future. Cheese is on a firm and steady basis with a fairly good movement both for domestic and export trade. There is an excellent demand for eggs and the drain on storage supplies is sure to produce strength since these supplies are not being replenished. New laid eggs find a ready sale at the high prices. Contrary to expectations the poultry market has shown no signs of the usual advance at the Christmas season. Wholesalers expect that this year there will be ample offerings to insure low prices with a big demand resulting. Turkeys however are scarce so far but it is felt that supplies are being held back. The hog market shows a slight decline but the trade feels that a reaction will occur. There is no change in lard or shortening. A good supply of halibut is on the market and fish prices in general are unchanged. The cold weather has brought an improved demand.

BUTTER MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

BUTTER.—The butter market is firm with a good demand for the domestic trade and some shipments to the United States. The English market is quiet but butter maintains a strong position with prices so far unchanged. Local wholesalers are of the opinion that an advance in the price is due before very long since the export market to the United States is favorable to Canadian butter. In all probability an advance will come before the end of the week.

GOOD DEMAND FOR EGGS

Montreal.

EGGS.—There is no actual change in the egg market but the feeling is firm owing to the continued good demand for consumption, which was never known to be better at this season of the year. Stocks of storage eggs are being reduced rapidly. Supplies of new laid eggs are small and all offerings meet a ready sale.

SMOKED MEATS STEADY

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—Although hog prices are slightly lower, bacon and smoked meats are unchanged in price. Local packers state that they do not expect a change in the quotations on these lines but look for a stronger market in the future. The domestic and export trade in cured meats is only fair but supplies held are only sufficient to carry the trade and no weakness is apparent.

POULTRY PRICES STILL STEADY

Montreal.

POULTRY.—Poultry, except turkeys, has not yet shown any indication of an advance. In fact wholesale dealers expect a comparatively easy Christmas market for poultry on account of the bigger supplies available. At the same time they do expect a much bigger demand. Turkeys are firming up, but producers and cold storage people show no anxiety to sell. Prices may advance a little in the next week.

HOG PRICES LOWER

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—The market for hogs shows decided weakness but local packers are of the opinion that a reaction will come. Prices on select bacon hogs showed a decline of 50c. a cwt. This decline is in sympathy with general market conditions on account of the smaller demand for bacon hogs while offerings are fairly large. Fresh pork is slightly easier in price and trimmed lines are quoted at 26c. a lb. There is no change in the beef market. Prices are maintained with some improvement in the demand but a stronger market is expected by the close of the month.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—For the most part all provision and produce markets continue with a steady to firm tone and price changes are decidedly lacking this week. Butter and eggs hold firm while cheese has a shade easier tone on local and country boards. Live hogs are in an unsettled condition with the price opening last week at a higher basis and receding again at the closing market and a continuation of the easier tone for the opening market of this week. Fresh caught lake fish is practically off the market but frozen varieties are taking the place. Receipts of poultry are heavier but the market has a firmer tone with a prospect for some advances.

BUTTER HOLDS FIRM

Toronto.

BUTTER.—Although the movement of butter to United States during the past week was not so brisk as the preceding weeks, the tone of the market continues firm. Shipments of fresh-made Danish and New Zealand butter are on the way but these are not likely to make any material change in market conditions as it is understood that the price laid down in Toronto is around 38c per lb., which compares very favorably with local prices on Ontario stock.

EASIER TONE IN HOGS

Toronto

FRESH MEATS.—Trading at the Union Stock Yards during the week was brisk especially for finished beeves for the Christmas trade. Values in consequence were slightly enhanced for the better quality and the opening market of this week was also stronger on that class of cattle. Although live hogs closed last week at a slightly lower level the situation is considered as rather unsettled and if anything the larger packers are looking for an easier situation during the coming week. Quotations on dressed meats show little change as compared with last week.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 13.—There is little change in the produce and provision market. Hog prices are holding steady. Butter, cheese and eggs are ruling steady with no change in quotations. Lard is showing an easier tone and a decline of one cent per pound is recorded. Cooked meats are in light demand. Smoked ham and bacon shows no change. Poultry is firmer and with the heavy demand from the East for turkeys prices have moved upward. With colder weather the demand for fish has shown an improvement.

BUTTER MARKET UNCHANGED

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—The butter market shows no change in quotations. Finest quality prints in cartons are quoted at 40c to 42c per lb. with second grades ranging from 38c to 40c. There is a steady demand.

CHEESE MARKET FIRM

Winnipeg.

CHEESE.—The cheese market continues to rule firm due to the heavy export demand and the light stocks being held by dealers. Large cheese is quoted at 26c per lb. with twins at 26½c and triplets at 27c. The demand is light.

How To Take Advantage of LIPTON'S "Coupon System"

TO SHOW your customers how good Lipton's Tea is and to help you in selling it, we have commenced a coupon system that will wean many of your customers away from buying poor grade, cheap teas from the peddler at the door.

Our salesmen will call on you and for each pound purchased we will send to each of your customers a coupon card, worth 10c to the customer in your store. We ask you to redeem it on a pound of Lipton's Tea and you will receive a cheque for full amount of redeemed coupons.

Don't let the peddler get away with the tea trade of your district. He cannot duplicate Lipton quality, or Lipton flavor.

We recommend that you do not wait for our traveler to call, but send us your order for a definite number of pounds and names of your customers to the same number. We will immediately mail them the coupon cards.

Is Your Store Their First Thought?

NO ONE knows better than the man behind the counter how many different things influence people in selecting a store, in neighborhoods where there is competition. And where isn't there competition these days?

Have YOU considered carefully how many people in your neighborhood — so located that a turn east instead of west, north instead of south, or vice versa would bring them to your store instead of to a competitor's—should come to you as a matter of course?

You can make these people your customers by simply proving to them once how much they benefit themselves by trading with you. Housekeepers do not forget the mark ROSE BRAND because the PRODUCTS bearing this mark never fail to satisfy them absolutely, both in quality and price. 67 years' experience, every modern improvement, and the most rigid Government Inspection are your guarantee of complete satisfaction from ROSE BRAND.

Real dealer co-operation is assured when you are handling ROSE BRAND PRODUCTS: unexcelled supply service, and plenty of publicity outside and inside your store, free. Make the ROSE BRAND do for you what it has done for so many other tradesmen—steadily increase your volume of business.

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

It's KLIM'S cleanness —convenience —and economy —that sell it to your customers

GOOD, convincing sales points these—cleanness no dirty cans or bottles about—no frozen milk. You mix only the powder you need and the rest will keep for months without spoiling.

Convenience—with a can of KLIM on the shelf, one needn't worry about deliveries failing through storm, breakdown or strike. And it takes up very little room—a small one-pound can makes a gallon of fresh separated milk.

Economy—no milk is wasted. One mixes only the amount required—the rest stays in powder form for future use. It neither freezes from excessive cold nor sours from excessive heat.

These are good things to tell your customers.

"Shake hands with health everyday"

All America is doing it!

The new Sunsweet slogan—"Shake hands with health everyday"—is getting across in fine, forceful fashion. All America is doing it! And the stirring newspaper campaign we are to run in the metropolitan markets of the country will "shake up" America to the big health-story back of Sunsweet. Yes—and to the big story back of our new 2-lb. carton.

Almost over night this 2-lb. Sunsweet carton has been accepted the nation over as the new way to buy prunes. Clean, compact, convenient! No shrinkage of fruit! No loss from down weight or sampling! You lose no time wrapping!

LARGER PRODUCTION OF LIMA BEANS

The production of dry lima beans in California is estimated at 1,350,000 bags of 100 pounds each from an acreage of 125,000 acres, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. The average yield per acre is placed at 1,080 pounds. In 1921 the estimated production of dry lima beans in California was 825,000 bags of 100 pounds each.

OREGON PRUNE YIELD LARGE

The estimated prune crop in the Sheridan district in Oregon totals 1,800,000 pounds. This figure is based on shipments of the Oregon Growers' Co-operation Association, which controls approximately half the acreage of the district and which shipped 966,500 pounds, the last carload going out last week.

Toledo—No. 383.

The diagram at the left shows weight balanced against weight. The one to the right shows weight balanced against a spring. Which of these two methods will operate with the same accuracy and reliability day after day and year in and year out?

Weighing is simply measuring the force of gravity. There is only one never-varying measure of gravity and that is gravity itself. Springs vary, but the pull of gravity is constant and unchanging.

It is the constant, never-changing pull of gravity which operates the pendulum in Toledo scales.

Look at the above picture of the Toledo Scale. As the load is placed on the scale it is automatically counterbalanced by the pendulum; and the pendulum operates the indicator which constantly shows the weight to the fraction of an ounce, and the value to the fraction of a cent.

When the weighing principle of Toledo Scales is contrasted with the weighing principle of spring scales the fundamental reason for the great superiority of the Toledo is readily apparent to anyone.

There are more than 100 styles and sizes of Toledo Scales, containing all modern improvements, such as self-aligning jewel bearings and the sighting wire that insures the same exact reading by the tall man or the short man.

You can purchase Toledo Scales on easy terms and at prices no higher than you would have to pay for inferior and less accurate weighing machines.

Sectional Unit Bin Fixtures.

Well friends, another Christmas rush is over and our sincere wish is that it has brought to a close for you an all round successful year. No doubt as you read this you are resting up your aching feet and tired limbs and if yours is not a WALKER equipped store you are most likely reflecting over the miles of extra steps you have taken, the hours of needless time you have wasted and the scores of lost sales that inefficient store equipment has cost you in the past. Why not settle that point right now and insure that 1923 will be a more profitable one for you by installing.

"WALKER" Service Fixtures

the last word in modern, efficient and artistic store equipment. A Merry Christmas And A Happy New Year!

TO MEN OF GOODWILL

1922 will soon be the past.
Many will say, yes at last,
Still let's be grateful after all
Business was much better this fall.

Seems that 1923 should bring us
Added volume, and better profits plus
If we only will forget Pessimism
And adopt as our motto Optimism.

For after all what's the use
To blame, to reproach, to abuse
Depression, this miserable and mournful creature
Born of the Past, without Future.

Sure to fall and die ignominiously,
At the first blow struck effectively
By those giants of strong determination
Men unwavering, builders of the Nation.

Who constantly and without fear, fight
To make morality good, business right:
And would accomplish the task sooner
With better support and greater number.

Let's join them, and by cooperation,
Put bad business out of operation.
And soon will show up Prosperity
This beloved sister ship of Opportunity.

VOL. XXXVI. TORONTO, DECEMBER 22, 1922 NO. 51

Canadian Grocer Wishes All Its Readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year : : : : :

THE GREAT Festival of the Year, with all that it means of peace and goodwill to the world, draws near, and Canadian Grocer once again takes this opportunity of extending to its thousands of readers in the trade, the old, old wish, "A Merry Christmas."

With all the sincerity and wholehearted goodwill that this wish may convey, the editor and staff of Canadian Grocer greets each of its readers with the hope here expressed, that happiness will be their lot on this Christmas Day of 1922, and that prosperity and success will attend them throughout the coming year.

When these days of busy, hustling preparation on the part of the public, and the anxious desire of the merchants to meet the demands of the same, have passed, the retailer will have time to reflect on the achievements of the past, and plan for the accomplishment of greater things in 1923. There is reason for a spirit of thankfulness, in the business life of Canada, in tune with the message of peace and goodwill this season signifies. Time has witnessed changes, and in the past year there have been brought about more staple, better conditions that indicate progress rather than retrogression. Significant in these changes has been the return to par of the Canadian dollar, that a year ago was being discounted at a rate not at all pleasing to Canadian people. The realization of a bountiful harvest in this country, and the marketing of the same has re-established our dollar and given to business generally an encouraging and more optimistic outlook.

With a widely conceded improvement in trade in the past year, and with a feeling of gratitude for the best Christmas business on record, grocers and retailers can look forward to a continuance of prosperity in the next twelvemonth. Unemployment is rapidly diminishing, and likewise the consequent abnormal need is passing. Thus Canada is perhaps better situated than any other country.

Merchants are an important link in the business chain, and share alike its successes and its failures. In this land of opportunity, the latter constitute a minimum. The merchant who brings into play his honest endeavor, together with sane business ability in the coming months will find worth-while reward.

And in conclusion again the old wish, "A Merry Christmas and a Bright and Prosperous New Year."

Enforcement of Receipt Tax May be Deferred, Says Unofficial Report

Deferment May be Made Awaiting Return of the Officials of the Department of Finance Who Went Over With Hon. W. S. Fielding to Make a Study of the English Law in This Regard

OTTAWA, Dec. 19. (Special).—The receipt tax, which it was expected would come into force on the first of January, is likely to be deferred, according to reports here, although no official confirmation of the report has as yet been made. The reason for this possible delay is that the officials of the Department of Finance who went overseas with the Minister, Hon. W. S. Fielding, and who are understood to have made investigations of the British regulations governing the receipt tax, are not likely to arrive in Canada until a few days before the beginning of the New Year. As it is expected the Canadian regulations will be somewhat along the same lines as those in operation in England, the officials at Ottawa will likely require some little time to draft them. The effect of this delay while, of course being farthest from the minds of the officials, will be to give the trade an opportunity to launch a still more strenuous attack against the measure, while the members are assembled in Ottawa in the early stages of the forthcoming season of Parliament.

Protests in the form of telegrams were sent in large numbers to Premier King and his cabinet last week, from merchants and business men all over the country. The general impression conveyed by the messages was that the business world of Canada was decidedly opposed to the measure, and was prepared to go the limit in preventing its enforcement. What effect this flood of protests will have upon the government is problematic. The telegrams will likely be followed by personal representations to the Prime Minister at an early date.

There is little or no prospect that the operation of this receipt tax law will be entirely suspended—at least, if parliament decides that it should be—before May next. Its operation cannot be suspended by an order-in-council, as it is an act of Parliament, which can only be negatived by another act, unless the former specifically provides for government suspension, and in the present case it does not.

Week After Christmas Busy Time for the Quebec Grocers

Montreal, Dec. 11. (Special).—In the Province of Quebec particularly there is a double opportunity for the grocery trade to reap from the holiday season demand for specialty lines. The French people in this province do their giving at the New Year instead of at Christmas, and while Christmas Day is a festival occasion, the New Year is the real celebration. Christmas to the French people is a church holiday when the religious significance is emphasized.

This is a significant fact this year in particular in the grocery trade. The demand for all kinds of specialty lines is quite as heavy in this province during the week after Christmas as before, and since stocks carried by the retail trade are very small the wholesale trade is expecting a sudden call for replenishment of many lines directly after Christmas. This will tax available supplies and a stronger market temporarily is expected, particularly on walnuts, table raisins, etc. Stocks carried by the wholesale trade are not heavy, in view of the fact that easier prices are expected in January on dried fruits and nuts. The fact remains that in Quebec the retail grocer has a second opportunity to build up sales in specialty lines for New Year.

Henry Ford is Now Operating Grocery on Cash and Carry Plan

Having taken a hand at reforming almost everything else, Henry Ford has now started a grocery store, says the New York Journal of Commerce; not for the purpose of making money, nor for putting competitors out of business, but to "keep prices within reason" and to show what scientific management can do with a grocery store. A recent story in the "Boston News Bureau" gives something of the scheme and the way it works out, from which the following is abstracted:

While intended for employees only, the Ford grocery, meat market, shoe and clothing stores are open to the public. Between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. the Ford stores look like a ticket office for a world's series baseball game. A queue of customers begins to form an hour before the stores open. At 8 o'clock on a recent morning it extended nearly a block. The butcher shop last month sold 235,000 pounds of meat.

"Cash and carry" prevails. The store rooms are arranged much like a country bank, with a long counter the entire length of the room. Every commodity is put up in packages of standard weight or number of pieces and, as nearly as possible, each article is ready to hand over to the customer without a second wrapping. One buys a dozen eggs, a peck of potatoes, 25 pounds of sugar, a pound of butter—no split dozens or half units.

On entering, an attendant hands the customer a tag. As each purchase is made, the salesman pencils in the amount. When the purchasing is finished the tag is presented to a cashier who foots the items, takes the money and stamps the tag "paid." The tag then becomes one's pass for getting out the back door where another attendant takes up the tag and deposits it in a large box, as a sales record.

As an influence in holding prices down in the vicinity of Ford's plant these stores are important. They are not operated to drive others out of business or to make large profits, but, as an official says, "to keep prices where they should be."

An interesting feature of the Ford store is the "assembly line." Ford has applied the principle of assembling cars to the grocery. Figures on number of customers per salesman are not available, but the ratio must be very high, for the salesman wastes not a minute making out sales slips or running to and from the cash register. The tag system eliminates all this, as well as saving the time of the customer.

As a simple accounting system there are many advantages. Each salesman pencils his number in a column opposite amount of each sale. Cashier needs no cash register, because the total of tags bearing each cashier's stamp taken out of the "ballot box" at the exit must agree with her total cash at end of her shift.

Cost of goods plus salaries and allowances for rent, light and heat costs must equal total receipts for any given period. If the total receipts exceed total costs for a period prices are lowered during the next period, and vice versa if the opposite proves true.

L. Dixon & Son, Trenton, have recently installed a new front to the store. New all-glass show cases have also been installed and other arrangements made to make the store more attractive.

Harr Azmier, a grocer in Ottawa, was held up in his store on a recent Saturday night and relieved of a roll of bills amounting to $70 and some odd pieces of silver. The assailants made their escape in a large motor car. They have not yet been apprehended.

Arrangement of the Interior of This Store Carries Out Effective Displays That Result in Increased Sales

In this grocery store of C. R. Parker at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., counter displays, silent salesmen, and other facilities for showing merchandise are used to the best possible advantage as is evident from the attractive reproduction shown above.

Equipment of a Kind to Facilitate Service and the Easy Serving of Customers is a Feature in This Store

Patented bins, according to Jenkins & Son, Charlottetown, P.E.I., the interior of whose store is here shown, keep bulk goods in a clean, sanitary condition and are easily accessible at all times.

"More Annoying in Amended Form"

Hugh Blain Presents Attitude of Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association Towards the Anti-Combines Bill, and Likewise Towards the Amendment—Legislative Committee Hears Wholesalers' Delegation

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—In connection with the hearing before the Ontario government committee on the Anti-Combine Bill, and which in its amended form was recently reported upon in Canadian Grocer, the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association not having an opportunity to present its views on the legislation at the first sitting of the committee, was heard on Thursday last. On this occasion, the committee convened to hear opinions on Blue Sky legislation, but prior to the presentation of views in this regard, Hugh Blain, of Eby-Blain, Ltd., wholesale grocers, Toronto, and honorary president of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, and A. C. Pyke, secretary of the association, were heard.

Will Present Amended Bill

Walter Curry, K. C., presided, and when asked if Bill 207 in its amended form, as decided by the committee some ten days ago, would be again brought up for further consideration, stated that he thought likely that it would be sent on to parliament as it at present stands.

Mr. Blain in presenting the wholesalers' opinion in regard to the Bill, declared that in its amended form, it was even more annoying than the original Bill. It provides, he stated, for examination for discovery on the ex parte application of the Attorney-General to the Supreme Court at the instance of an affidavit from any person who may think himself aggrieved. "Now an examination for discovery in a suit between private parties may be alright," Mr. Blain's statement continued, "although the court does not admit it as evidence. It is, however, done at the expense of the parties, and the action is properly before the court; but when it comes to an examination for discovery by the Attorney-General, before the action is taken under a roving commission at the expense of the country, with perhaps the hope of finding something to commence action with, in the course of which the unfortunate person has to produce 'all books, documents, records, memoranda, letters or other writings relating thereto,' it is quite a different thing. For government detectives in search of bootleggers and other criminals it is quite all right, but when you put a respectable business calling on a level with illicit whisky vendors, thieves and robbers, it is going too far, and I for one must enter my protest. I object to such an extension of the Attorney-General's Detective Bureau Department.

Need No Examination for Discovery

"No such procedure, so far as the wholesale grocer is concerned is necessary. All goods sold under agreements, if there be such, are or become well known to the trade, and need no examination for discovery. Any person can get the information without the permission of the Supreme Court. It may, however, make matters interesting to the manufacturer. The Attorney-General under this Bill can investigate the manufacturer's affairs to his heart's content. He will be able to discover all about his business, his raw material, where he gets it, what it costs, together with his secret process of manufacture.

"Mr. Roebuck has said, I believe, there will be little or no publicity. Why should there not be publicity? If the party complained against is guilty, there certainly will be publicity; if innocent, why not make it public, as well as the name and conduct of the party making the complaint?

A Strangely Twisted Vision

"Mr. Roebuck's personal opinion apparently is that price-fixing agreements are in restraint of trade. If he means all price-fixing, then Mr. Roebuck must have a strangely twisted vision, because a properly fixed price enlists all the healthy energizing factors in the legitimate channels of distribution. The manufacturers' interests are supreme. He is fortified with the right to take whatever action he may consider advisable to enforce his fixed prices, and thus increase the distribution and consumption of his product, such as advertising and furnishing the highest quality of goods at the lowest price. It would be absurd for the manufacturer to advertise and improve the quality if he could not protect them.

Depends on Fixed Prices

"The wholesaler has the proper incentive to push the sale, and distribute all he can, for which he receives reasonable compensation, and there could be no such incentive without fixed prices. The retailer, satisfied with his profits, also pushes the sale, knowing the article cannot be sold for less, and anxious to make the sale, rather than have his competitor make it. He would not press the sale if he did not have confidence that no one could sell for less. The consumer will also be pleased with an article having a well-known and definitely established value, which it could not have unless it had a fixed price. What set of conditions could contribute more to an increase of trade, or tend to furnish a wider market? All this depends absolutely upon fixed prices and their proper observance. This system affords 100 per cent. efficiency in the distribution and consumption of goods, and carries all the way down the line from the producer, through the wholesaler and retailer to the consumer, the highest guarantee which is possible for man to furnish—a guarantee based upon absolute knowledge of the material and the method of production.

In Restraint of Trade at Source

"Mr. Roebuck without expert information, and without practical experience to furnish knowledge of business economics, no doubt like many others, holds the view that when goods are cut they sell freely. If so, however, he forgets that cutting prices also stops production, and is, therefore in restraint of trade at its very source. You can't cut the price in the distribution of goods without destroying the system, any more than you can cut a water hose without destroying the hose, and unless repaired, in either or both cases they become useless. The buyer of cut price bargain goods very often needs the goods just about as much as the spot where the hose is cut needs the water. As a rule, each implies a waste, which is the most criminal of all business abuses, especially when applied to food products."

Great Aid to Mail Order Houses

Among other things stressed in Mr. Blain's presentation was the fact that mail order houses are assisted by a substitutional government delivery through the Parcel Postal service, on the basis of an immense bonus paid by the public, to the serious detriment of small municipalities and their surrounding rural districts.

"Do you mean that the Dominion government is carrying on a mail order business?" asked the chairman, Walter Curry, K. C.

"I do, sir," replied Mr. Blain. "A gross injustice is being done the people in rural parts, and many small places are being held back because of this mail order competition."

Does Buying Policy Lower Packers' Quality?

Some Wholesalers Admit There is a Demand for Price From the Manufacturer But Say Retailer is Cause—Yet Many Aggressive Retailers Are Stocking High Priced Lines—Several Opinions on Point Raised by the Montreal Merchant That He Was Forced to Buy An Imported Vegetable

IS THE wholesale grocer generally a price buyer? Is he in any way responsible for any Canadian manufacturer not putting on the market goods of higher quality than he otherwise would if the wholesale buyer did not insist on price?

These are two of the questions that arose in the article published in Canadian Grocer, December 8, giving a retailer's reasons why he was buying a particular brand of imported vegetables instead of Canadian.

Since that time several expressions of opinion have come in from wholesalers, retailers and brokers.

One of our representatives for instance was in a small town recently calling on retailers. In one store he noticed an attractive display of canned corn put up in Canada. On enquiry he was told that formerly he used to buy an imported corn, but that since this particular brand came out, he did not require the other as his customers thought the new line just as good, and it was five cents per tin cheaper. There you have one side of the story.

In another store in the same town the merchant was featuring an imported line of canned corn in preference to Canadian. Asked as to why he did this, his reply was that there was nothing in Canada that could touch the imported line for quality. He had sold both lines to his customers and claimed that the majority of them preferred to pay the five cents per tin more for the imported line. That's the other side.

Think Canadian Brands Equal

A Montreal firm selling a special brand of fancy corn made in Canada claims that in comparison with the best brands on the market, it is equal in quality to anything they have seen that has been imported, and superior to a number of imported brands. They also state that one of the largest retailers in Montreal has made the test, with the same conclusion.

One firm that during the past year have developed a line of canned goods under their own registered trade mark, state they have a line of fancy quality canned corn which is equal to, or superior to anything imported.

"We are quite willing to put up our 1922 pack of canned corn against the best United States corn your correspondent can produce and if we do not excel, we are sure we will at least equal his quality," he says.

One Toronto wholesaler says there is no doubt that the reason for so many low grade canned goods on the market is due in a large measure to the fact that the wholesale buyer demands price. "But," he added, "it must be remembered that the wholesale buyer does it because he is forced to do so by his customers. Many in the retail trade to-day are buying goods on a price basis and when our travellers call they want a line at a certain price so that they can sell it at a certain price. Our travellers come back to find out why we cannot get a cheaper line. We had this happen last Saturday when two of our men wanted to know why they could not get canned peas to sell at a lower price because their customers were continually asking for them. Ninety per cent. of our sales, however, are for the better quality goods, and the majority of our travellers state that they have no difficulty in selling the better grades."

The reason given by still another wholesaler for so many imported lines of canned goods was that the Canadian packers were not using sufficient quantity of printers' ink or sufficient detail representatives in the field to tell the trade and public about their product. He stated he would not purchase imported products if he could get the same quality made in Canada.

Still another wholesale grocer maintained it is necessary to create a bigger demand among the trade of Canada for the highest quality of canned goods. He made the point that poor quality in the way of canned goods is not allowed to be imported into Canada so that we get only the choice variety. When compared with the lower grades of Canadian packed fruit and vegetables, the result is to the disadvantage of the latter. Many, he claimed, were trying to judge all Canadian canned products by the standard of the lower grades and because of this fact seek out the imported lines, forgetting that choice or fancy products were being packed here.

Editor's Note:—From the above it will be seen that "opinions differ." Whether our packers are producing as good quality as any imported or not, it is a fact that we import large quantities. A broker told Canadian Grocer recently that during the past season his first sale of a certain brand of imported vegetable amounted to 10,000 cases whereas four or five years ago—the first year the line was brought in—total sales amounted to 200 cases. He says that many wholesalers are price buyers, so as to be able to compete with one another. This, he thinks, brings about cutting, and cutting leads to still further demands from packers for lower prices; and to meet this situation the tendency is for some packers to take less care with their products in order to cut costs. Then he claims that those merchants who can sell the highest quality of any line made, look elsewhere. They test out the goods themselves and they buy the best quality at the best price they can secure, whether imported or Canadian.

This appears to be the cycle that is followed when the demands for price are strong enough whether from wholesaler or retailer.

Canadian Grocer would be pleased to hear from others with their analysis of the situation.

Custard Powders Are Subject to Customs Rate of 22½ Per Cent.

Canadian Grocer has received a letter in regard to customs tariff from a firm importing custard powder and blanc mange powder into Canada from the Old Country. This importer was recently informed by the Customs Department that owing to blanc mange powder being unsweetened the rate would be 15% instead of ½c a lb. and 22½% ad valorem, which was the duty he has originally been charged on the blanc mange.

The question arose as to whether custard powder which was not sweetened could be brought in at the same rate as blanc mange powder.

Canadian Grocer has secured a ruling from Ottawa through our correspondent there to the effect that the Customs Tariff specifically enumerates custard powders as coming under the ½c per pound and 22½% rate, whereas blanc mange powder is not mentioned particularly. It would require at least an Order-in-Council to change the rating on the custard powder.

Adding Water to Oysters

APPARENTLY the practice of giving oysters "drinks" of water is still in vogue with some merchants. Not long ago a representative of Canadian Grocer made some investigation along this line, and was surprised to find merchants adding water to oysters being under the impression that the addition of water made the oysters fat and added to their appearance. One retailer stated that to every five gallons he added one gallon of water the night before he offered them for sale, while another admitted he added one pint of water to every gallon of oysters.

It is true that a certain variety of oysters will soak up or absorb a certain amount of water and increase the bulk. From the investigation conducted some merchants are still participating in the habit. Just why they do it is not quite plain but we can hardly credit the opinion of those who state it is done to increase the profit, thus defrauding the public. One retailer quite sincerely said that the reason he put water with the oysters was to wash them and make them more attractive to the eye. But in doing so he was overlooking the fact that he was committing an adulteration and as such was guilty under the Act and liable to a heavy court fine and perhaps imprisonment.

The law in regard to importing and marketing oysters is much more strict than it was a number of years ago. In those earlier days, oysters were shipped in buckets in which was a considerable portion of water and a chunk of ice to preserve the oysters during transit. Now, however, that is all changed. At the oyster beds and packing houses, a rigid inspection is going on by government employees and the oysters must not only be shipped and offered for sale in the solid form, but before being packed for shipment, it is required to give the oysters a thorough washing in three changes of fresh pure water.

Aside from the fact that the merchant in watering his oysters is breaking the law, he must not overlook the point that by selling water at the price of oysters that he will soon lose the confidence of his customers and will ruin not only the trade in oysters, but the rest of the business as well.

The Transient Traders' Law

A CORRESPONDENT in Calgary states that a number of merchants there are complaining about the transient traders who open stores during special holiday seasons, pay a small license, sell while the selling is good, and then disappear.

This is a practice all too common in all parts of the country. It is self evident that it is not fair for merchants who pay business taxes, income taxes, sales tax and everything else, who are definite factors in the stability of a community, and many of whom give a great deal of their time and thought to the direction of municipal affairs, to have these transients come in and with little expense take the cream of the trade during the time when it is easy for them to get business.

Most of the provinces have a special transient traders' law which permits municipalities to regulate the license fee, but it is usually placed low enough so that it does not prevent this sort of business being done by a great many. For instance in Ontario, the maximum license fee is $250 for cities and towns, but we have never heard of a town demanding the maximum. The fee is usually twenty-five or fifty dollars.

Municipalities might very well look into their by-law in this respect and make sure that this type of trader is being properly dealt with.

Analyzing Quality Field

SOME say that there is no quality market in Canada, that merchants want the lowest price regardless of quality. Our advice to manufacturers is that they get closer to the retail trade and analyze for themselves the question of quality and price. Undoubtedly there are many who do buy on a price basis but we maintain that the better class retailer throughout Canada and the one that is selling perhaps between 70% and 80% of all the food products sold in Canada, wants quality first and price afterwards. A closer contact with the good merchants will, we are sure, demonstrate this fact.

A Place for the Service Merchant

THERE are a few merchants of the opinion that because the chain store, the cash and carry or self-serve store can sell cheaper than they, that naturally they must go out of business. This is, however, not true of the aggressive independent merchant. There is undoubtedly room for both. The one sells on a price basis, the other on a service basis.

As long as the chain store continues to sell on a price basis so long will it get business; and while the independent service merchant gives a good service and keeps his goods at a fair reasonable price, he is bound to get his share of a certain class of trade.

All must face the fact that some people look for price in buying food products, while others look for service. As long as this condition lasts there is a place for both stores.

Editorials in Brief

FORTY publishers of morning newspapers met in Chicago a couple of weeks ago and formed an association to promote the morning newspapers' interests in competition with the evening newspaper as an advertising medium. The chief method by which they say they intend to accomplish this is through announcements in the business newspapers of the United States—that is papers of the type of Canadian Grocer. This is an interesting evolution—the recognition of the place and power of the specialized newspaper.

IT IS MORE than likely that new customers have made purchases at your store during the Christmas buying period. It is up to you to see that the same or at least some of them are retained, and this can be accomplished through service and having on hands goods of such quality that will bring them into the store.

WITH THE END of 1922 almost at hand, the grocer will be well advised to watch his collections and see to it that the beginning of another year will find few outstanding.

Resigns After Twenty Years as Secretary Hamilton Grocers

Hamilton, Dec. 18.—After having served as secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association for twenty years, M. R. (Bay) Hill tendered his resignation at the annual meeting the other evening and it was accepted with regret. The energy, initiative, originality and organizing ability of Bay Hill during all these years had much to do with making the annual picnics of the grocers so popular and successful.

In retiring, Mr. Hill thanked the members for the support given him in his duties, and wished the association and his successor, Mr. Main, every success in the future.

The usual grant of $10 each for Christmas cheer was made to the following: Boys' home, Girls' home, Home of the Friendless, St. Peter's home, St. Mary's Orphanage, Mountain sanatorium, Children's shelter, Salvation Army Rescue home, Old Ladies' home and the Day nursery.

The members present endorsed the efforts of the Retail Merchants' Association to repeal the act compelling merchants to place a two-cent stamp on all receipts of $10 and upwards.

The election of officers resulted as follows: John Young, president; R. Gardner, first vice-president; Fred White, treasurer; J. Lawrie, secretary, James Main; executive committee, W. Smye, J. Venator, J. L. Brown, G. Dawson and J. Kenny; auditors, J. M. Simmens and R. Gardner.

Chatham Merchant is Help Up and Robbed

Chatham, Dec. 18.—Isaac Johnson, a merchant who has a place of business on Grand Avenue, was held up by three men, struck on the head, rendered partially unconscious and relieved of $75 in money.

Johnson, who is over sixty years of age asserts that there were three men in the job. One of them sneaked up behind him as he was walking along the street and struck him over the head with a piece of iron bolt about eight inches long, and seven-eighths of an inch in diameter. He was stunned by the blow, but as he was falling he distinctly saw two other men approaching from the other side of the street and he heard one of the men shout "Get him." He remembers, also, that the men knew exactly what pocket to search in order to get the money, which they grabbed and then ran away, leaving no trace of their identity.

The fact that the three hold-up men knew where to find the money without any loss of time convinces Johnson that they must have been looking through the window of his store when he was closing up for the night, and emptying the contents of his till.

Dom. Milk Corporation Hold Anniversary Dinner

Toronto.—The Dominion Milk Corporation held an anniversary dinner last week at which a number of stockholders and others were present. It took place at the King Edward Hotel and was the first annual, the company having been organized a year ago.

Newton Wylie, the president of the company, presided, and reviewed the operations during the past year and particularly since June, when the product of the company, Keepsweet Cream, was first placed on the market.

G. A. Putnam, dairy commissioner in Ontario, Dr. R. J. Jackson of the Roman Meal Company, and Dr. F. W. Routley, director of Northern Relief, were among the speakers of the evening, also S. H. Moore, representing the sales staff, and Mr. Norris, another officer of the company.

The guests numbering about seventy altogether included A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Wholesale Grocers' Association, T. J. Medland and Ross Humphrey, Toronto, wholesale grocers, and W. Aston, Reckitts (oversea), Limited, also of Toronto. Congratulatory letters were received from Archie Foster of National Grocers, Ltd., North Bay, and T. H. Kinnear, who were not able to be present.

According to R. G. Dun & Co., W. F. Morley, Toronto is suing I. K. Knowles, late manager of the Wholesale Groceries Limited, Toronto for $1,000.

Montreal Wholesale Grocers Suggest Amendments to Bankruptcy Act

Charles Ciceri, President of Chas. Ciceri Co., is Elected President of the Montreal Guild for the Coming Year—Report of the Year's Work

MONTREAL (Special).—The Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Guild held their annual meeting for the election of officers for 1923 on Tuesday morning of this week in the chambers of the Board of Trade Building. E. Couvrette, president of Couvrette Sauriol Ltd., who has been laid up for some weeks, was able to attend the meeting and occupied the chair.

Charles Ciceri, president of Chas. Ciceri Co., wholesale grocers of Montreal, who was vice-president last year, was elected president for the coming year. Mr. Ciceri is also Italian Consul-General for Canada. Constant Gendru, managing director of Lacaille Gendru Co., Ltd., wholesale grocers of Montreal, was elected vice-president. Mr. Gendru was last year treasurer of the Guild. S. J. Carter of the firm of S. J. Carter & Co., wholesale grocers, St. Paul Street, was elected treasurer.

Reviews Work of Year

Prior to the election of officers, Mr. Couvrette presented the report of this year's executive on the work accomplished since its election. He gave a brief review of some of the new circumstances under which the business had to be operated. In the first place he pointed out that the sales tax was increased again in 1922 and that from the Government's point of view it had been a financial success, $38,000,000, having been collected. He also reviewed the enforcement of an increase in the stamp tax which dated from August 1st, 1922, and its effect upon the grocery trade. He illustrated the increase in the sales tax since its inauguration on the 19th of May, 1920, by the following table:

	1920	1921	1922	Percentage Increase
Sales Tax on sales from manufacturer to wholesaler	1%	1½%	2¼%	125%
From manufacturer to retailer	2%	3%	4½%	150%
Importations to manufacturers or wholesalers..	1%	2½%	3¾%	275%
Importations to retailer...	2%	4%	6%	300%

The application for membership of J. H. Dionne of Garthby Station, Que., and W. Pouliot of W. Pouliot Ltd., Joliette, Que., were received and accepted by this guild. Mr. Gendru recalled the action of the railways in refusing to accept for shipment molasses in puncheons which is not to come into effect until January 1st, 1925, giving the manufacturers and wholesalers ample opportunity to make other provision for the handling of molasses.

It was felt by some of the members that the Bankruptcy Act could be very much improved by a few slight amendments and it was therefore suggested that the following clauses should be inserted in this act:—

No. 1. A provision should be inserted in the act, presumably in clause No 3, whereby it would be possible for a creditor or creditors whose claim amounted to $500, or over may apply to the court for receiving order.

No. 2. That a debtor before making an assignment must consult not less than two of his largest bona fide unsecured trade creditors, and make an assignment to the authorized trustee whom the said creditors designate.

No. 3. That a trustee, when sending out notices of the first statutory meeting under an assignment, should be compelled to enclose a list of the creditors with their addresses and the amounts owing.

No. 4. That under an assignment, composition extension or scheme of arrangement, a trustee should be compelled to take a physical inventory of all the assets, and submit to the creditors a statement prepared by himself showing assets and liabilities.

Brooms Show Higher Quotations Following Stronger Market for Broom Corn

Broom Corn is Three Times More Expensive Than a Year Ago, and the Strength of the Situation Shows Little Indication of Abating—Difficult to Secure Supplies

THE strength which has characterized the situation in brooms and broom corn does not show any evidence of abating. In fact, in view of the condition in broom corn, manufacturers are having difficulty in procuring sufficient material to meet consumer demand even at the extremely high prices prevailing for broom corn. Prices on broom corn have been rapidly advancing since last mid summer and in consequence broom manufacturers have again advanced quotations on brooms. This later advance averages one dollar per dozen.

"During the past month," remarked one manufacturer to Canadian Grocer, "there have been further advances in the broom corn market and to-day prices are considerably higher. The price now being asked for broom corn that will make a good medium house broom is fully $400 per ton at point of shipment with freight and revenue tax as well as other incidentals to be added to this, making this broom corn cost the manufacturer in Ontario at his factory about $460 per ton or 23c per pound. When you consider that this is three times as much as was being paid for the same broom corn twelve months ago it need not surprise anyone to know that a good many manufacturers were compelled to advance prices another $1 per dozen during the past week or ten days. It is becoming more difficult indeed to secure necessary requirements of broom corn and with the demand for brooms keeping up as it is there can be no accumulation of raw material in this country working up the broom corn as fast it comes in, shipping out the brooms just as fast as they are being produced. One can now safely say that brooms will not be cheaper until another crop of broom corn is being harvested and until then it would seem as time goes on there will be few manufacturers who will have any brooms to sell at all. There is every indication that for several months next summer a good many factories will be obliged to close down entirely because they were not able to purchase broom corn sufficiently far ahead of immediate needs.

Empty Cash Register of Fifty Dollars and Make Their Escape

Simcoe, Ont., Dec. 19.—Youths forcing a window in the cellar of Clarence Wark's North Ward Grocery Store, tore the cash register from its socket, walked calmly from the front door to their waiting auto and escaped.

Wark was aroused when the bandits endeavored to smash in the front entrance, but thought it was merely a customer calling for gasoline. When the disturbance downstairs increased, he secured a gun. Unfortunately it was not loaded and though Mr. Wark ordered them to stop under penalty of being fired upon, they made a quick getaway. Chief Muir and County Constable Alway with Mr. Wark, took up the midnight chase. At Waterford, a M. C. R. train halted the fugitives' progress, but they escaped the vigilance of their pursuers and doubled back, striking eastward.

The police were forced to give up the chase, but at once telephoned Hamilton officials, from whom it was learned that the car, the number of which Mr. Wark had espied, was stolen in Hamilton last week.

The store owner motored to Hamilton and apprised the police.

Letters to the Editor

COUPONS ARE NOT LEGAL

Editor Canadian Grocer:

We are enclosing two coupons. The one with our name on is the one used by the company's salesman when here and on which he represented the percentages to be about half to one per cent., but when they sent the goods which amounted to $51.24 the tax included we find it to be 3-1/5 per cent. When we explained this to the company they sent coupon No. 2, and by way of explanation stated that they had sent the wrong coupons. The proposition looks good to us as we think it would mean ready cash. The amount of cash sales required to redeem silverware is $1601.

With this information we trust you will be able to advise. Thanking you for past favors, we are,

Yours truly,
N. & S.

Editor's Note.—In the first place these coupons do not comply with the Trading Stamp Act, the Act governing all coupons given for premiums, etc. The law in this regard demands that on each coupon, there must appear the words, "redeemable at any time at (name of merchant)," and must state a definite merchantable value at which these coupons can be redeemed, that is to say, 5 cents or 10 cents, or whatever it might be. If you are desirous of using this means of attracting business, see to it that the coupons comply with the law, and save yourself unnecessary confusion.

CASH REGISTER RECEIPTS

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

In connection with the new tax receipt order, which comes into effect on January 1, 1923, we are at a loss to know whether or not we will have to pay a tax on every receipt we issue on our cash register.

Our register issues a receipt each time a sale is rung in and on this receipt is printed "This is your receipt." Now here is the point: Will this be classed the same as a receipt which we might draw up, acknowledging the receipt of a sum of money, as received from J. Jones, etc.

We will be glad to hear from you on this matter by return mail, and if such is the case, we will have to change our register, because by paying stamp tax on each receipt from our register, we would soon be ready for the poor house. This is a crude way of putting it, but I think it will convey our idea.

If you care to publish this in the Grocer, it will be quite O. K. and we invite the opinion of others in the trade.

We take pleasure in enclosing specimen receipt referred to above.

Awaiting your reply, we are,
Yours truly,
Gehan's Groceteria,
per D. J. Gehan.

Editor's Note:—We have been informed unofficially that the enforcement of the Stamp Act is to be deferred for a month. Officials have been in England for some time obtaining information as to how the Stamp Act is operated there. They are not expected to return until a couple of days before the first of the year and we understand one of the questions to be taken up will be the receipt given on the cash register.

PURE FOOD LEGISLATION

Editor Canadian Grocer.

Will you please advise me the date on which you published extracts of Orders-in-Council covering alterations to pure food legislation, etc., during say, the past three years.

Yours truly,
H. I. NELSON,
for Chief Purchasing Agent Dept. of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment.
Ottawa, Dec. 18.

Answer:—The following articles were published during the past three years:—

KEEP A RECORD OF YOUR CHRISTMAS WINDOW DISPLAY

If your window display of Christmas lines is worth the time devoted to putting it in, it is surely worth photographing. Such a photograph would give the merchant a record and assist the window trimmer in the work of next year.

Canadian Grocer would like to get a number of photographs of good Christmas window displays and is prepared to pay the sum of $3 each for them, providing the invoice is attached. The photographs should be unmounted and about eight by ten inches in size.

"Future of the Wholesale Grocer In His Own Hands"

Crawfordsville, Ind.

Editor of Printers' Ink:

Have you any information available covering the position of the wholesale grocer in the distribution of groceries and provisions—in his value to the manufacturer and the dealer; what he has accomplished for both and his future.

I appreciate the service you are rendering subscribers and assure you that my office files would not be complete without Printers' Ink, of which I have been a reader for at least thirty years.

Charles R. Trowbridge.

The wholesale grocery business, like every other business, is in a state of flux. And the grocery jobber's attitude toward both manufacturer and retailer changes from time to time.

Originally merely a distributor—buying the manufacturer's goods, selling them to the retailer and financing the transaction, from beginning to end—the jobber later became, in a great many instances, a manufacturer himself; or what amounts to the same thing, the exclusive distributor of brands in which he had a financial interest. There is a pretty general feeling on the part of wholesale grocers that in doing this the jobber is carrying water on both shoulders, and it would not surprise us to see a change of policy in this respect in the comparatively near future.

In another respect are we likely to see a change of policy on the part of the wholesale grocer; and that is in his attitude towards the retailer. Many large retailers—to say nothing of the chain stores—have "cut out" the jobber and buy direct from the manufacturer. As a matter of protecting his own interests, the jobber must establish closer relations with the retailer. Indeed, it would not surprise us if, when the wholesale grocers' associations launch the advertising campaign which they talked of doing, two or three years ago, the "big idea" on which it is based would be to "interpret" the retail grocer to the public.

The future of the wholesale grocer is in his own hands. If he lives up, even approximately, to the doctrines which the "best minds" in the business are preaching, he can look forward to a long and useful life. Otherwise.—Ed. Printers' Ink.

Fire destroyed the grocery store of Gabriel Grushko, 450 Pritchard avenue, Winnipeg, the other evening, the loss to building and stock amounting to $1,500.

W. Murray, manager of the W. G. Patrick Company, Limited, Winnipeg, is attending the annual convention of the firm's sales at their headquarters in Toronto.

W. A. McKay of the Codville Company, Limited, Winnipeg, who has been confined to his house with a slight attack of lagrippe, has fully recovered and is again to be found at his usual place of business.

Fruit Shippers in Okanagan, B.C., Plan Organization

Kelowna, B. C., Dec. 19.—After discussing plans for controlled distribution of the fruit crop of the Okanagan, shippers who handle about 90 per cent. of the tonnage, favored the organization of a board of control to govern all marketing arrangements for the sale of the crop. This plan will be submitted to a representative meeting of growers to be held here at an early date. Shippers named E. Doberer, manager of Salmon Arm Farmers' Exchange, to present a plan to the growers, and also named a committee, consisting of L. Hayes, Occidental Fruit Co., Kelowna; J. T. Mutrie, president Okanagan United Growers, Vernon; W. H. Smith, Vernon Growers, and Thomas Bulman, Kelowna, to discuss marketing problems with a similar committee to be appointed by growers.

A central selling agency plan was advocated by several shippers, but the general opinion, after taking into consideration all the questions brought up, was that as the two plans had the same objective, it was a matter of detail as to how the scheme should be brought about. The shippers unanimously agreed that growers must give whatever plan is finally adopted their unanimous and wholehearted support.

McBride's Ltd. Open New Store in Regina

Moose Jaw, Sask., Dec. 18.—McBride's Ltd., with head offices and stores in this city, have recently opened a new store at 12th and Hamilton Sts., Regina, Sask. The new store is 50 by 60 feet, and constitutes grocery, meats, fruits, bakery and confectionery departments. McBride's Ltd., recently moved this business from the basement of the Regina Trading Co., where it had been located for the past two years.

McBride's Ltd., was organized at Weyburn, Sask., by F. B. Mitchell, president, and J. A. McBride, vice-president. The first store was located at Weyburn, and the second one at Assiniboia. At the present time there are nine stores at Moose Jaw and seven at Regina, making eighteen in all. The head offices are at Moose Jaw, with a bakery also located here, and two bakeries at Regina. McBride's Ltd., have been in business five and a half years. In 1921 their turnover was nearly one million dollars.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE raw sugar market during the week was fairly steady for sugars in nearby positions. Sales being made for prompt shipment at 3¾c c. & f. and on which basis over 20,000 bags changed hands. Since our last report the market eased off but later again firmed up in tone, but without recording any advance. New crop Cuban sugars were offered for January shipment at 3½c c. & f. New York and for February at 3⅜c c. & f. Favorable weather is reported in Cuba for the harvesting of the new crop, and there are now 27 central factories in operation. The first shipment of new crop sugars sailed from Cuba during the week with a cargo of 32,400 bags for the American Sugar Refining Co. One central factory which only just started operations met with a disastrous loss by explosion and is now out of the running. The United Kingdom is showing increased interest in new crop Jamaica sugars for March, April and May shipments and this competition for British West India sugars may become formidable for Canadian refiners, who naturally wish to show interest in preferential sugars. The present estimate for the World production shows an increase of 1,000,000 tons over last year, but in view of the heavy consumption of the year just closing and the fact that Cuba was able to dispose of a carry-over of over one million tons, makes it extremely difficult to predict the future course of the market. Refined sugar in the U.S. is quoted at $7.10 to $7.25 and one refiner is still withdrawn from the market. In the Canadian refined situation, there is nothing of special interest to report, prices are steady and unchanged on the basis of $8 Montreal for standard granulated.

The outstanding feature in general grocery commodities is the strong situation in teas both on spot and in markets abroad and the strength which has characterized teas for the past few months shows no sign of abating, but rather on the other hand the future indications point to a continuing of the high prices for some time. Coffee, too, is much stronger in primary markets but the spot situation shows little change although in some quarters there is some talk of advancing prices to the retail trade. Walnuts and almonds are steady on spot but reports from primary centers indicate a slight tightening of the situation. Cereals generally are firm but in rolled oats there is a shade easier tone. Canned goods are moving in good volume but market conditions at the moment are steady and quotations unchanged. Butter and cheese continue to occupy a strong position while eggs are also held firm. In Toronto, the hog market was easier during the week but in Montreal and Winnipeg, hogs showed little change, remaining steady to firm.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 20.—The grocery market is without any feature of note. The wholesale trade has been quiet during the past week and will likely remain so until after the New Year when a marked improvement in all lines is expected. The market is firm and the prospects for the remainder of the winter are good. The sugar market holds firm despite predictions in some circles that lower prices would rule in January. The syrup market is steady but is temporarily quiet. An easier market in all lines of dried fruits is apparent. Supplies sufficient to tide over the shortage of currants are now on the way to the market and local dealers do not expect the advance that was, for a time, threatening. The nut market is dull after the Christmas demand and prices on all lines except shelled walnuts, are easier. The cereal market is firm but to a great extent the bullish feeling in rolled oats has disappeared and some quotations are cut. Package lines are unchanged. Oranges are low in prices and are selling freely. Vegetable prices are lower on imported lines on account of the large supplies shipped in for Christmas.

CEREAL MARKET QUIET

Montreal.

CEREALS.—The cereal market is unchanged and quiet. The retailers are supplied until the beginning of the new year and while there is still a premium on raw oats there is not the likelihood of an advance that there was a month ago. A bigger demand is expected after the turn of the year as neither the wholesaler nor the retail trade is carrying a heavy supply.

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is firm with only a limited demand just now. The wholesale trade is looking for a marked improvement for the first of the year with a stronger market. Retailers' supplies are not large and after the Christmas trade is over a bigger demand is expected.

DRIED FRUITS EASIER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The market for dried fruits is easier all around. The demand has fallen off suddenly, but an improvement is expected in January. Big supplies of Sultana raisins are on the way to this market and an easier future is promised. Spot stocks of currants are scarce, but there are some supplies in transit to this market and the future is easier. The demand for dried fruits has been good for the Christmas trade and spot stocks are well cleaned up. Fig prices are a little easier with new and unexpected shipments on the way.

SPICES.—There is no change in the spice market. The demand is limited and so far as can be seen there is no change in prospect for the local market. PACKAGE GOODS UNCHANGED

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—The package goods' market is steady without any feature of note. The demand for all lines has been good but attention has been attracted from it by the holiday season. Present prices will not likely show any change until after the new year at least. There seems to be now no reason to believe that there will be a change in package oats prices. The market is firm but a slight relaxation in rolled oats has avoided an advance in the package line.

SHELLED WALNUTS HIGHER

Montreal

NUTS.—The nut market is quiet and noticeably easier for nuts in shell. The demand has been good but there are surplus stocks on hand. Prices on walnuts in particular have been cut as a result of the inferior quality nuts that reached this market. Shelled walnuts and almonds will be higher for the future since supplies of these have been well cleaned up both here and abroad.

REFINED SUGAR FIRM

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Despite the fact that some of the wholesale grocers are firm in the opinion that January will bring lower prices of granulated sugar, the market as far as refiners are concerned holds firm at the present basis. Local sugar refiners express the opinion that in view of the present state of the raw market no change in refined sugar can be expected before the end of January. New raws are selling freely at from 3½ to 4c. c. and f., New York. The local trade is buying only in limited quantities, but the demand is steady and for the present at least the market may be expected to hold.

LOW PRICES ON ORANGES

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The feature of the fruit market is the low prices quoted on oranges. The best navel oranges are selling at $4.85 a case and the supply on the market is sufficient to take care of the heavy demand and still hold the low price over the New Year holiday. Boxed apples are weak. The demand is good at prices ranging from $1.75 to $2.25 a box.

CRANBERRIES DROP

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—The feature of the vegetable market is the big supply of cranberries and the lower prices quoted during the middle of the week. In fact big supplies of all imported vegetables were rushed to this market for Christmas and as a result easier prices prevailed. The market is well supplied with green beans and peas, lettuce, new carrots and beets, mushrooms and spinach.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—The scarcity of currants and the continued upward position of teas are still the features in general grocery lines. Some small lots of currants are coming out in a second hand way, but the total quantity available is indeed small and many wholesalers and retailers will not have sufficient to meet the requirements for the holiday season. Cereals continue strong and tapioca is scarce on spot with advances in quotations. Nuts are fairly steady on spot with a tightening up of markets abroad. Syrups and sugar show little change while spices indicate a strong tone.

BEANS HOLD STEADY

Toronto.

BEANS.—The market for beans show little change as compared with a week ago. The demand is active at the present time but stocks at the moment are sufficient to meet requirements. Ontario hand-picked are quoted at $3.65 per bushel and one pound pickers are offered at $3.40 per bushel. California limas are quoted at 10¾ to 11½c. per lb. and Madagascar limas at 6¾ to 7½c. per lb.

FIRMNESS IN COFFEE

Toronto.

COFFEE.—Importers and wholesalers report a heavy movement in coffee, almost every week showing an increase. The movement, however, is generally of a day-to-day character and it is said, there is little buying of a speculative character. Primary markets hold fairly strong but spot conditions are steady at the moment, although in some quarters, it has been intimated, a slight advance will be registered in the near future.

WALNUTS FIRMER ABROAD

Toronto.

NUTS.—Nuts in the shell continue to move freely but trading in shelled nuts is reported quiet; apparently retailers and other users have purchased their requirements, up to the first of the new year at least. Importers are offering for January shipment shelled Bordeaux walnuts at 46c. per lb. but for present requirements from spot stocks the price is unchanged at 51c. to 55c. per lb. Markets abroad for shelled walnuts are somewhat firmer and it is the opinion of those in close touch with the situation that the price quoted on futures is at the lowest, and there are indications for advances later in the season. Peanuts continue strong with advances registered on shell goods. Roasted peanuts are now quoted at 20c. to 21c. and green at 16½c. per lb.

CURRANTS STILL SCARCE

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The scarcity of currants continues to be the centre of interest in the dried fruit market. Many wholesalers have none to offer although a few small lots are being picked up. These small lots having changed hands several times are held at a fairly high price, ranging around 23c. per lb. for Filliatras. Direct shipments of currants are reported on the water and are due to arrive in about two weeks. The demand for figs, dates and table raisins is reported excellent and the majority of houses will be well cleaned up of the latter by the close of the holiday trade.

LITTLE CHANGE IN SUGAR

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Quotations are unchanged on the basis of $8, Montreal, and $8.34 delivered Toronto, for standard granulated. The consumer demand is seasonable and it is said that wholesalers are still fairly well supplied with sugar purchased before the last advance. The raw market was slightly easier during the week, sales being made at 3¾c. c. & f., New York, for prompt shipment, 3½c. for January and 3⅝c. c. & f. for February.

TEAS CONTINUE TO CLIMB

Toronto.

TEAS.—Cable advices from Colombo and Calcutta indicate another advance on all grades which has later been followed by advices from the London market stating advances there also. In the spot situation there is little change but the tendency continues in an upward direction. Considerable trading is also noted of a second-hand character which plainly indicates that supplies here are none too large. In regard to the future, one importer sums up the situation as follows:—"At no time have prices here been anywhere near on a level with markets abroad, consequently as shipments arrive bought at the higher range of values, the retail trade can naturally look for further increases."

SPICES LOOK HIGHER

Toronto.

SPICES.—The tendency in spices almost throughout the entire list is upward. This is due partly to the advance in Sterling exchange and also to stronger markets abroad. POTATOES LOOK FIRMER

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—The potato situation continues quiet and speculative buying is limited. The market situation shows little change but with the colder weather dealers anticipate a firmer market. The cost of heating cars and difficulty in loading at country points are said to be factors in bringing about a firmer tendency.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20.—Business in the cities is fair but in the country districts it is below normal. Collections show very little improvement. Christmas lines are practically cleaned up. In a number of cases sales on many lines have exceeded that of last year, especially nuts and dried fruits while sales of candy have been light. There is very little actual change in the grocery market. Reflecting the strong situation in primary markets the spot tea market continues in a strong condition and higher quotations are expected after the first of the year. Bulk cereals continue firm and indications point upward. Sardines are scarce and the market is advancing. Sales of canned fruits and vegetables are light but as stocks are low a better demand is expected during the winter months.

FIRM COFFEE MARKET

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—There is no change in the coffee market. Prices are steady and are expected to remain so. Locally the demand is good and while primary markets are fluctuating, business locally is on a steady basis without any change in quotations.

WALNUT FUTURE EASIER

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—There is an easier tone in walnuts for future delivery but spot stocks are practically cleaned up. New crop shelled almonds of good quality are arriving and quotations are slightly lower. Number one Spanish peanuts continue firm and new arrivals will be on the market some time in January. Pecans are advancing. Brazils are firmer in tone.

SCARCITY OF SARDINES

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Canned salmon is in fair demand. Sardines are reported scarce with the market advancing and many merchants are realizing this fact and are buying accordingly. Sales of canned fruits and vegetables are reported light. Retailers' stocks, however, are low and an improvement in the demand for these goods is expected during the winter months.

EVEN MORE ANNOYING

"The government cannot afford to boost mail order business, by carrying goods at less than cost," Mr. Curry added. "The mail order man should have to pay the cost of delivering his own goods."

W. H. Casselman, member for Dundas, asked Mr. Blain if it would not be working in the best interests of producers and consumers to eliminate some of the agencies of distribution.

"It is more economical to sell through wholesalers," Mr. Blain replied. "A manufacturer very often only sells one article. My travelers carry the lines of several manufacturers. A saving is effected in selling costs as well as transportation. The wholesaler is an economic factor."

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the wholesalers' organization, spoke briefly. He drew attention to the fact that the Sherman Act, about which much was heard at former sittings, was likely to be revised. Herbert Hoover, secretary of state in the United States, within the past fortnight, Mr. Pyke stated, had recommended a revision of the Act. Mr. Hoover advocated trade associations, and advised the calling into conference of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, that some basis may be reached, whereby trade may be stimulated rather than hampered as at present.

Mr. Curry at the conclusion stated that there had been some complaint about the high cost of living, which probably was responsible for bringing forward such a Bill. "The government was anxious to restore confidence," he said. A great deal of thought had been given the Act, and the committee had hoped that in its amended form, it would meet with approval. The committee's idea had been that a Bill such as now is framed, might allay that public suspicion that the cost of the distribution of foods is too high, and thereby serve the purpose for which it was intended.

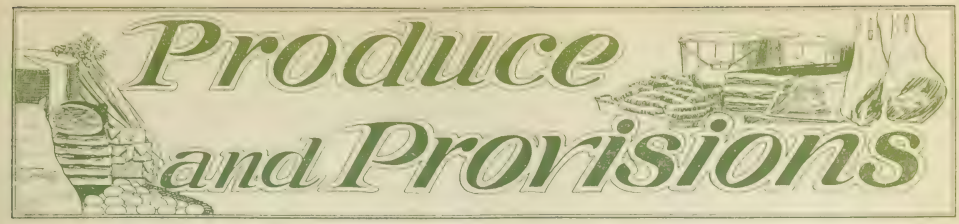
Displays of Xmas Meats and Other Lines at Abattoirs

Toronto, Dec. 20. (Special).—During the past week the displays of Christmas beef and meats generally at the Toronto abattoirs have attracted a good deal of attention. Gunns, Ltd., held their annual show from the 13th of December until the 19th, and it was very largely attended. In the fancy beef shown were the prize cattle purchased at the annual winter fair at the Union Stock yards here. These constituted very fine stock. The showrooms were beautifully decorated in the Christmas colors, and all the products made by this firm were on exhibition.

At the plant of the Swift Canadian Co. the annual Christmas exhibition was held on December 12, 13 and 14. It was held each evening until ten o'clock, and merchants were present not only from Toronto, but a number of visitors were there from out of town. The prize cattle bought at the Royal Winter Fair were a feature of the exhibit. All the Swift lines were shown, and a good deal of interest was manifested in the same.

From Tuesday until Saturday of last week the Harris Abattoir, West Toronto, held their Christmas show. Hundreds of people were present each day, and keen interest was evidenced in the fine array of tempting Christmas meats and other products that are put up by this concern.



At the plant of the Wm. Davies Co., in East Toronto, the showroom where the Christmas meats and other products were displayed was handsomely decorated in the Christmas colors. Hundreds of retailers attended, and many helpful suggestions were given them as to the best way to display meats, the best "cuts" to buy for the Christmas trade, and many other ideas that will help stimulate Christmas sales.

At the Canadian Packing Co. plant at the foot of Bathurst Street the annual Christmas show was held last week. From an educational standpoint this exhibition was decidedly advantageous to the large number of retailers who attended. The showroom was attractively decorated in Christmas colors and the many lines that constitute the output of this concern were temptingly arrayed.

CLEMENCEAU'S FAVORITE ONION SOUP HAS A RIVAL

Washington, Dec. 19.—The United States has brought forth a rival for Georges Clemenceau's favorite dish of onion soup.

It is the Florida grape fruit. The "Tiger" has taken a sudden fancy to this American appetizer and has given it a place of honor with eggs and onion soup on his unique menu. He has evidenced a keen interest in where and how grape fruit is grown, saying it is virtually unknown to France.

Hungarian Turkeys Are Sent to Canada for the Christmas Trade

Large Consignments of Turkeys From the Western Provinces Are Also Being Offered on the Eastern Market—Will Have Tendency to Ease Prices

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Already faced with keen competition from farmers of Saskatchewan, Alberta and other agricultural districts of the Canadian Northwest, Ontario farmers catering to the Christmas turkey market have in the last day or so encountered an entirely new and somewhat unique competition in poultry raisers of Hungary, who it is learned, have been induced by commission agents in Montreal and London, England, to enter the Canadian field, where the demand for this famous Yuletide delicacy is well known.

Just how extensively the importation of foreign birds to the Ontario market will affect the situation is something that remains to be seen, but A. E. Silverwood, of Silverwood, Limited, declared that he had no doubt but that the latest development would undoubtedly lower prices.

"The turkey market is in a peculiar state just at the present time," declared Mr. Silverwood. "Twelve years ago, in 1910, we shipped 50,000 birds to the Canadian Northwest for the Christmas trade; to-day I believe that there are just exactly 50,000 turkeys on the way from the Canadian Northwest for the Ontario market, so that it is just exactly a reversal of the market situation in 12 years."

Mr. Silverwood stated that Western turkeys were quoted at 34 and 37 cents, f. o. b. shipping point, with $3 per hundred freight rates. Laid down locally these birds would sell at about 40 cents to 42 cents.

Ontario farmers are quoting turkeys at 40 and 42 cents, while the Hungarian turkeys, now on the way here, would in all probability wholesale at about 36 or 38 cents.

The importation of Hungarian turkeys to the Ontario markets is declared by those in touch with market conditions to be the very first attempt at anything of this sort in history. Last year Hungarian birds were sold in the United States in small quantities.

Making Winnipeg a Shipping Centre for Dairy Products

Winnipeg, Dec. 18.—A movement is being launched by the produce bureau of the Winnipeg Board of Trade to make Winnipeg a greater shipping centre.

Plans for a new venture along these lines were discussed at a meeting of the producers' bureau in the office of the Board of Trade recently. The plans made thus far leave the venture as yet only in its preliminary stage.

It is proposed to make Winnipeg the shipping centre for all dairy products gathered from all over the province. At present these products are being shipped in comparatively small quantities to the markets of the world. The plans under consideration will, when accomplished, centralize the channels through which these products will be marketed. It is proposed to have dairy products gathered from all the branch lines in the province, brought to Winnipeg and shipped from here to the markets in Europe and the United States in carload lots.

At the meeting of the producers' bureau, Thursday, the matter of mak-

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 20.—A steady and firm market is evident in nearly all produce and provision lines. Three outstanding features are noteworthy. Butter is in a particularly strong position with a good export to the United States and local prices have been advanced. Eggs are higher with the likelihood of another advance. There is a very heavy demand for poultry. Some wholesalers say it is the biggest they have seen in years. Turkeys show no signs of being higher and as the local supply came to the market after shipments from the west arrived, the market is fairly easy. This condition is expected to last over New Year's. There is no change in the fresh or smoked meat market. Hogs are on a firm basis and lard is steady under a fair demand. The cheese market is strong but without any change. Halibut prices are too low according to fish dealers and chicken halibut is scarce. The demand has been good and for the week between Christmas and New Year's is expected to be heavy.

HIGHER PRICES ON BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There has been a steady increase in the movement of butter, particularly for the export trade. During the past week many carloads of Canadian butter have been shipped into the United States and the price quoted here in car lots for the best creamery is 39c a lb. As a result the wholesale price is advanced to 41c a lb. for creamery prints and solids are quoted at 40c per lb. The future of the market is strong and while a further advance is not expected until after Christmas another jump is likely before the end of the month provided the export market keeps as active as it is at present.

CHEESE MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

CHEESE.—There is a good market for cheese both for the domestic and export trade and prices are firm. No change in the wholesale price is expected before the New Year at least and for the present the market is on a steady basis.

STORAGE EGGS HIGHER

Montreal.

EGGS.—The striking feature of the egg market is that receipts of the past week and in fact for several weeks, have been far below that of the corresponding week of last year and that at the same time prices now quoted are much below that of a year ago. No. 1 storage are advanced to 38c. a doz. as compared with 48c. quoted one year ago and selects now quoted at 42c. were then quoted at 55c. It is evident that with the drain on storage supplies that the good domestic demand is bringing this year that values are due to be higher, particularly in view of the fact that receipts are so much smaller.

HOG MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—The market for live hogs remains unchanged with a steady feeling evident. The demand for dressed hogs continues steady with prices also firm. Some improvement in the demand is expected this week but the market values are not expected to change.

SHORTENING PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

SHORTENING.—Conditions in the shortening market are like those in lard a steady trend with a fair demand for small lots. Local wholesalers cannot forecast any change for the near future since all influences bearing on the market point towards a steady market.

HALIBUT PRICES LOW

Montreal.

FISH.—Local fish dealers complain the low prices current on halibut. Chicken halibut is scarce and quoted at 16c. to 17c. per lb. Medium halibut is quoted at 19 to 20c. and the second grade at from 15c. to 17c. a lb. The first shipments of Newfoundland frozen herring are on the market at reasonable prices.

LARD MARKET UNCHANGED

Montreal.

LARD.—There is no change in lard prices. The market is steady with a fair demand for small lots to meet immediate requirements.

COOKED MEATS STEADY

SMOKED MEATS STEADY

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—The Christmas trade has had little or no effect upon the smoked meat market. Prices are steady and if anything the brisk business in poultry has detracted from the demand for smoked meats. The market, however, is on a firm basis.

GOOD SUPPLY OF TURKEYS

Montreal.

POULTRY.—The feature of the market is the steady feeling in turkeys despite the heavy Christmas demand. Western turkeys are quoted at 47c. a lb. and local supplies at 45c. a lb. This is 6c. a lb. lower than the wholesale price of last year and local dealers expect a good movement both for the Christmas and New Year trade. Other lines of poultry are in good supply and prices are comparatively easy. Towards the last day or so bigger supplies of local turkeys may be on the market than can be foreseen at present, and in that event prices will be easier.

ing application to the railways for special rates in this connection was under consideration. Nothing definite was done, however, beyond reaching a decision to make inquiries in other large centres as to whether or not railways in their cases have been making it a practice to give special rates.

The opinion is expressed by members of the Board of Trade that such a program, if carried out, would increase greatly shipping activities in Winnipeg, and would also have a salutary effect on industry.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—For the most part, produce and provision lines show little change but maintain a firm tone. Butter and cheese under export enquiry continue firm, with quotations to the retail trade unchanged as compared with a week ago. Receipts of new laid eggs are a little heavier but the quantity arriving is still very limited. New laid eggs from the U.S. are arriving in good volume. Live hogs are lower under heavy arrivals, but lard, hams and bacon and other pork products show little change. Poultry of all kinds is plentiful and the market holds steady. The demand for fish is active and prices are well maintained.

FIRMNESS IN BUTTER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market holds firm. The shortage in the United States helps to maintain the firm position here, as any surplus is readily absorbed across the border. Some shipments have arrived from the western provinces and New Zealand butter is due to arrive after the turn of the new year. There are no changes in quotations.

HOG PRICES DROP

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—Buyers of hogs during the past week were able to put into effect a cut of 50c per cwt., owing to the large quantity offered. On the fed and watered basis live hogs are sold at $10.50 although some sales were made at $10. Cattle are also weaker due to the overloading of the market.

BACON AND HAMS ACTIVE

Toronto

PROVISIONS.—According to packers the demand for hams and bacons for the holiday season has been particularly good this year. This to some extent has had a certain amount of influence on the market, in creating a steady feeling throughout the entire list. The hog market, however, is unsettled and inclined to drop and there is some talk of easier prices on bacon after the holiday demand is over.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20.—The butter market is ruling steady. Cheese is slightly easier and a decline has been recorded on the local market. Eggs show no change. Lard is ruling steady under a fair demand. The movement of cooked meats continues light and a slight reduction is noted on cooked hams. Hams and bacon are ruling steady with no change in quotations. Large supplies of turkeys are arriving and as the supplies in Eastern Canada and United States have been filled lower prices are expected on this line. Fish is in good demand. The hog market is ruling easier.

STRONG TONE TO BUTTER

Winnipeg.

BUTTER. — The butter market is steady in tone especially on the better grade. Quotations to the retail trade range from 40c to 42c per lb. on finest prints, with second grades quoted at 38c to 40c per lb.

CHEESE QUOTED LOWER

Winnipeg.

CHEESE.—Dealers report that there is an easier tone to the cheese market in the East and this has been reflected in a decline on the local market of 2c per lb. Large cheese is quoted at 24c, twins at 24½c and triplets at 25c per lb. New make Stilton is in fair demand at 27½c per lb.

EGGS UNCHANGED

Winnipeg.

EGGS.—The egg market remains unchanged with a fair demand for select eggs at from 38c to 42c per doz. and No. 1 candled at 34c. There are practically no fresh eggs arriving from country districts.

LARD MARKET STEADY

Winnipeg.

LARD.—The lard market is ruling steady and buying is done in a conservative manner. Shortening is in fair demand at 14½c per lb. on the tierce basis.

TURKEY RECEIPTS HEAVY

Winnipeg.

POULTRY.—Large supplies of turkeys are arriving daily and the production this season has been remarkably heavy. One reason for the abundant supply for city markets is that the United States has not purchased so heavily this year. Turkeys that arrive from now on will be sold locally and consequently quotations will be lower.

FISH DEMAND IMPROVES

Winnipeg.

FISH.—More seasonable weather has improved the demand for fish. Frozen halibut at 17c per lb. and salmon at 20c per lb. are selling freely. The demand for smoked fish such as haddies, kippers, fillets and goldeyes are showing an improvement in the demand. Oysters in gallon cans are finding ready sales at $3.75 to $4.

EASIER TONE TO HOGS

Winnipeg.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market has an easier tone. Quotations on select bacon hogs are lower at $9.90. Fresh pork cuts however show no change in quotations. The cattle market has developed a weaker tone due to the heavy supplies of cattle arriving. The sheep and lamb markets are also easier and good lambs are quoted at $11, with mutton sheep at $7.50.

Did You Ever Stop to Think---

THAT it is the get-together, stay-together and boost-together citizens that build a city.

THAT a city that has built a reputation with industry and commerce should be a proud city.

THAT all citizens should boost with real enthusiasm.

THAT their city is worthy of their best endeavors.

THAT the stay-backs and the pull-backs among their citizens often harm themselves more than they do their city.

THAT city builders have enthusiasm.

THAT enthusiasm is what starts things.

THAT the city knocker lacks enthusiasm. His narrow mind never goes beyond his own pocketbook.

THAT making trouble is his great pastime.

THAT trouble of that kind is very timid in the presence of optimism.

THAT there should be an "OPEN SEASON" on city knockers.

THAT city boosters should occasionally give a little of their careful and undivided attention to these pests.

TURKISH FIG LOSS ESTIMATED LARGER

A recent commercial report places the probable loss of the fig crop of Asia Minor, due to the Greek retreat, at about 35 per cent. The report places the yield at 56,000,000 pounds before sustaining the loss, which is somewhat larger than an earlier commercial estimate of 50,000,000 to 55,000,000 pounds.

LARGER CROP OF FORMOSA RICE

It is reported in a despatch from Taikoku that the first harvest of uncleaned rice in Formosa amounted to 2,735,620 koku. As compared with the first harvest of rice for last year, this is an increase by 226,814 koku, and the record for the rice crop in Formosa since the island passed into Japan's hands. It is due to the fact that many farmers have abandoned the cultivation of sugar cane and engaged in rice cultivation, and that weather conditions were very favorable this year.

MACDONALD'S

The Tobacco with a heart

LONG years ago Macdonald's created a distinctive flavor in tobaccos.

To-day the Canadian taste for Macdonald tobacco is as distinctive as the Scottish taste for oatmeal.

There is no other tobacco line of such general appeal—make the most of the opportunity.

Why should a merchant display this Sign?

Because the Public knows these facts:

Why "No Springs" in Toledo Scales

International Encyclopedia says: "Spring Scales are not as reliable as balance scales." "The force of the spring varies with temperature which alters the length and elasticity of the wire and renders impossible precise measurements."

The Encyclopedia Britannica says: "Spring balances are very extensively used for the weighing of the cheaper articles of commerce and other purposes, where a high degree of precision is not required." "Their indications are apt to vary from fatigue of the springs . . . Their indications also very with the temperature."

Chambers' Encyclopedia says: "Spring balances are made in many forms, but the principle in all is the same—the stretching of a spiral spring. They have no pretension to great accuracy."

Nelson's Encyclopedia says: "The spring balance becomes unreliable when frequently used."

Why Toledo Scales give "Honest Weight"

Weighing is simply measuring the force of gravity. There is only one never-varying measure of gravity, and that is gravity itself. Springs vary, but the pull of gravity is constant and unchanging.

It is this constant, never-changing pull of gravity which operates the pendulum in Toledo Scales; and the pendulum automatically counter-balances the load on the platter, thereby measuring the weight of the load by gravity itself.

It is the Pendulum that makes Toledo Scales automatic without springs, and therein lies their great practical advantage.

It is the Pendulum that makes possible that confidence-inspiring, trade-bringing slogan, "Toledo — No Springs Honest Weight."

This is the slogan that is universally recognized as the guaranty of a square deal on both sides of the counter.

When Information Is Wanted

When the United States Tariff Commission wanted information a short time ago about the Lemon situation in Canada, they wrote CANADIAN GROCER for it. Here is their letter:

UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSION
8TH AND E STREETS, N.W.
WASHINGTON

Nov. 24, 1922.

Editor Canadian Grocer:

The United States Tariff Commission wishes to secure information regarding the marketing of California and Italian lemons in Toronto and in other Canadian cities. We shall esteem it a great favor if you will be kind enough to co-operate with us in this matter by furnishing answers to the following inquiries:

(1) Are California lemons regularly or only occasionally sold in Toronto? In other Canadian cities?

(2) In what months do California lemons appear in largest quantities? Italian lemons?

(3) Do receipts of California lemons fluctuate with seasonal changes or do they merely appear when Italian fruit is temporarily absent from the Canadian market?

(4) What comparison can you make between the selling price of California lemons and Italian lemons? (a) Messinas? (b) Verdellis? How do you explain these differences?

(5) Are either the California or the Italian lemons sold at auction?

(6) Are Italian lemons ever brought to Toronto or other Canadian cities via New York?

(7) In your price quotations on lemons, which we have examined for a number of years, we note Verdellis are quoted in the summer and fall and Messinas in the winter and spring. Will you kindly explain this change?

(8) Are the prices which you have quoted brokers' wholesale prices or auction prices?

(9) What size or weight of box is used as a basis for your quotations on Italian lemons?

The Tariff Commission will greatly appreciate your aid in this matter and we hope that such of these inquiries as you are unable to answer you will submit to members of the trade and will transmit their answers to us. An addressed envelope requiring no postage is enclosed for your convenience in answering.

UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSION,
Washington, D.C.
By John F. Bethune,
Secretary.

Their letter was answered a day or two later and the following reply received:

"The Commission has received your letter of November 30, containing answers to our inquiries regarding sale of lemons in Toronto, and wishes to thank you for your courteous and prompt attention to our inquiries, and for the information which you have supplied."

This is just another evidence of Canadian Grocer's leadership in the food product field in Canada.

Quaker Talks

The Greatest Salesman of Them all

The eye is the greatest salesman. That organ sells most of the world's goods. Whether it is pictures, rugs, automobiles or food, the sight determines the purchase more often than any other sense.

A neat, orderly display of cereals in packages makes your grocery store attractive. It brings in new people. It makes old customers better pleased.

And when your customers, new and old, use the package cereals they buy from you, they know the goods you sell are just as pure and well flavored as they looked to be. The eye again proves itself to be a good salesman.

People like to deal at a clean, neat store. The time is past when slovenly disorder is looked upon with favor by the purchaser of household supplies.

Quaker Package Cereals Are Best

—best for your customers and best for you

The Quaker Oats Company have been successful in pleasing the consumer, hence, the enormous and steadily growing demand for their packages. The grocers' turnover is greater and they therefore realize much better profits. That is why so many of the better class grocers handle the Quaker line exclusively.

Make a good display of the right packages--put the Quaker line out in front--and let the greatest salesman of them all show you what he can do in making more sales in your store.

Your Wholesaler can fill your order for Quaker Oats, Quaker Corn Flakes, Tillson's Aluminum Oats, Tillson's Health Bran, Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice, and other Quaker Quality Products.

VOL. XXXVI. TORONTO, DECEMBER 29, 1922 NO. 52

Review of Grocery Trade for Year Now Ending Sees More Staple Conditions at Its Close

Strength of the Sugar Market and the Rapid Absorption of the Huge Carry-over of Cuban Raws From the Year Before is a Feature—Lower Production of Teas Enhances Values—Trend in Other Commodities is Fairly Steady

THE situation in both retail and wholesale grocery circles at the close of the present year is considerably more encouraging than in the closing days of 1921. A year ago merchants had still a fair stock of merchandise bought when the market was at the peak but during the first few months of the year such stocks were practically liquidated and as the year advanced the unemployment situation showed a marked improvement, placing collections on a better basis. Viewing the situation as a whole the tone is appreciably better and merchants are looking to the coming year with a greater degree of confidence than at any time since the termination of the war. Furthermore the firmness, almost throughout the year, which characterized the markets for general grocery commodities, is having its effect on merchants and consumers alike and there is a greater disposition to adopt the policy of buying in quantity for future delivery.

Strength of Sugar a Feature

Of outstanding interest in the grocery markets during the year 1922 was the strength displayed in sugar and the rapid absorption of the huge carry-over of Cuban raws. At the beginning of the year and shortly after the commencement of harvest of new crop sugars, stocks of old crop sugars in all Cuba amounted to over 1,200,000 tons and to which each week was added an accumulation of new crop sugars. But by the middle of the year both the old sugars and a large part of the new had been fairly well absorbed and on December 1 the total stocks of sugar in Cuba only amounted to 27,266 tons. The diminishing of these stocks was due principally to the demand in European countries for both raws and refined sugars, and also to the increased consumption on this continent. The total meltings of raws in the United States by refiners from January 1 up to December 1 was 3,479,000 tons, an increase of 1,095,000 tons over the same period last year. Out of the former figure, 808,000 tons were exported as against 373,000 tons for the same period in 1921. Canadian refiners also participated in the export business. For the seven months' period from April 1 up to October 31, Canada exported sugars to the amount of 244,292,703 pounds of which 173,891,300 pounds went to the United Kingdom, as compared with 82,540,016 pounds for the same period in 1921 and as against 64,443 889 pounds in 1920.

Highest Points in December

This condition in the raw sugar market created a steadily advancing price. In Canadian refined sugar the Chart showing the fluctuations in refined sugar and in raws week by week during 1922. The prices quoted on raws are cost and freight New York for prompt shipment on the date specified. Refined sugar prices are on the Montreal basis.

price trend was fairly steady until the month of April, when it commenced to drop in spite of the advancing market for raws. The downward movement continued until the middle of June and from then on, prices showed a gradual strengthening reaching the highest point the first week in December. The commencement of harvesting of the Cuban crop for the season 1922-23 was greatly delayed, the first shipment of this crop not leaving Cuba until about the 15th of December. Sales of the new crop sugars for January and February shipment were made at a slightly lower basis, from 3 3-8c. to 3½c., c. & f. New York, as compared with 4c. the average price during the month of December for old crop sugar. The present estimate for the world production shows an increase of nearly one million tons over last year, but in view of the heavy consumption of the year just closing and the fact that Cuba was able to dispose of a carry-over of over one million tons, makes it extremely difficult to predict the future course of the market.

Lower Production Boosts Teas

Another commodity which has been watched with much interest during the year under review, was the situation in teas. The end of the war and the cessation of government control in England released an overwhelming supply of low grade tea, which for a time rendered the business of production unremunerative. Heavy stocks featured the markets and the growers decided to cease the production of common tea, which was not wanted and was saleable only at a loss, and to confine their attention to the better grades for which there was an increasing demand. This concentration upon quality rather than quantity, or fine plucking has had a twofold result. It has caused a reduction in stocks and raised the average price. Another factor resulting has been to reduce the total production in both India and Ceylon. Stocks held in London on November 30 were said to be reduced to a three months' supply, and the total production is estimated to be 75,000,000 pounds less than actual consumption.

Market Depends on Growers

The total Indian production for this season was about 275,000,000 pounds as against 300,000,000 pounds last season, and as compared with the average season's yield of 340,000,000 pounds. The quantity available in Calcutta for shipment during the first part of November was only 15,333,000 pounds as compared with 19,250,000 pounds for the corresponding period in 1921. The total shortage in this season's crop of Ceylon tea is estimated at 151,250,000 pounds. Prices throughout the year showed an increase every week and they now show an advance of fully one shilling from the low point. As to the future condition of the market, that will depend largely on the attitude of the growers. If they revert again to coarse plucking, it may have a tendency to bring prices down, but the experience of the last two years does not encourage such a course even if the bushes, after their drastic pruning, permitted it. In any event should this occur prices would hardly be greatly affected in this country until well into the middle of the coming year.

Situation in Other Commodities

The trend in other commodities during 1921 was fairly steady. Price fluctuations were not numerous and were under the control of supply and demand, rather than due to any speculative movement such as occurred two years ago. Canned goods opened at a lower price basis than a year ago and consequently a larger consumer demand has resulted with probably the exception of fruits and jams. The demand for jams so far has not been large, owing no doubt to the low prices ruling this past season on fresh fruits which enabled housewives to preserve fairly large quantities.

Prices on flour and cereals held on an even level until the new crop grains were available and something could be learned about the size of the crops and probable prices for grains, after which the markets were considerably stronger in tone and prices advanced. The upward movement in rolled oats was particularly noticeable, but this was due to a large extent to the congestion of freights at the head of the lakes, making it extremely difficult for millers to get supplies. Since navigation closed and supplies are coming more freely to the mills, an easier tone is manifested. In farm produce, prices generally were much lower than last year and were under the influence of seasonable demand. Butter and cheese were fairly low in price, as compared with the previous two years, well into the latter part of the year. In November, however, an export enquiry for both these commodities developed, resulting in stronger markets and higher prices.

Hog prices were controlled mostly by the demand for immediate use as packers did not show any inclination to stock up. The peak price was reached in mid-summer and was attributed to the small shipments causing keen competition among buyers. As the year advanced heavier offerings were made, prices dropped and stood at

Takes His Inventory In Three Days

An interior view of the store of C. L. Grant, Montreal, following inventory taking. The table in the centre is used to clear odd lines that have been brought out during stock-taking. This table is a splendid means of display and sells a lot of goods.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26 (Special).—The task of stocktaking is often looked upon as a tedious, exasperating and laborious piece of work which comes once a year, and sometimes twice. The story of how one Montreal grocery accomplished the work in three and one half hours, together with giving the whole store a thorough cleaning, is interesting and may prove helpful to many grocers who are about to take an inventory of stock on hand.

Keeps a Price Book

This is the story told to a Canadian Grocer representative by C. L. Grant, the store manager of Grant's Grocery, at the corner of MacKay and St. Catherine Streets, Montreal.—"In the first place we have what we call a Price Book. Through the year we keep the list of prices paid, per unit, for any goods that come into the store. For instance, if we get a case of a certain brand of canned goods, we put down in the book the name of the brand and the price per dozen. The next time we get an order for the same goods, we check up the price and in that way at the end of the year have an accurate statement of the last price we paid for any of the goods in the store. On that basis we make our inventory.

Dividing the Task

"At seven o'clock one evening early in January, we began the work with twenty men, office staff, clerks, drivers and two outsiders. We divided the store into eight sections, putting each section in the care of the man most familiar with the particular line. In my opinion the most accuracy is required of the man who counts the goods, names the brand and checks over the quality and merits of the goods on hand. Almost anyone who can write can put down the figures. In the case of canned goods, bottled goods, fruit and packages, it only took two men to each section, but where cases had to be moved, bins emptied, bulk goods weighed, it required three of four men to each section.

Only Took Three and One Half Hours

"It only took from seven in the evening until a little past half past ten to finish the work. Everything in the store was moved at least once. The shelves were all dusted as the line was taken out and counted and particular care was taken to examine the goods as they were put back and piled neatly on the shelf. In the case of bulk goods every bin was emptied, the goods accurately weighed, the bins cleaned and the goods put back. I feel safe in saying that every inch of shelving, cupboards and bins were cleaned during that evening.

A Revelation

"The stocktaking taught us many things. For instance it pointed out a number of lines that had not been moving freely, in fact lines that we decided to discontinue. In the case of these lines we are making special sales but without any fuss. In our trade it would damage our reputation to make any big fuss about the sale of odd lines. In other cases it would be only beneficial to the grocer to do this, but we do not want to intimate to any of our customers that there is anything on our shelves that is not first class. Nevertheless in our store, as in all others, goods will be left at the back of the shelves and deteriorate to some extent. The safest plan is to write this off as a loss, then if anything can be realized on the goods put it in against the loss later.

Prices Down to New Basis

"We honestly endeavor to write our inventory on the basis of to-day's prices without trying to deceive ourselves in the least. Now that it is all over we can safely say that there was very little if any loss to be written off, since during the decline we have kept our stocks very low, pushed sluggish lines and bought closely to the market.

"Buying from day to day in the hands of two or three in the store is apt to duplicate certain lines. When stocktak-

Counter Slips and Cash Register Tickets Are Exempt From Tax

New Rulings on the Receipt Tax Which Comes Into Effect on January First Are Announced—Eliminate Words "This is a Receipt" so Often Seen on Cash Tickets

"THE intention of the government is evidently to exempt cash register checks, and counter slips given at the time of sale in cash transactions," stated E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association to a representative of Canadian Grocer, in discussing the new rulings in regard to the receipt tax. "However, the ruling is very clumsy and, on the face of it, might mean that all cash register and counter slips are not exempt. I think I can definitely state that these are exempt from the receipt tax, and the retailer may not feel any concern in regard to them. The other clauses I consider are quite clear, and the merchant and buiness men generally need not have any doubt as to the course he is to follow in regard to them."

Eliminate "This is a Receipt"

Discussing the new regulations applying to the receipt tax which comes into force on the first of January, (Monday next), with representative men in the trade, it would appear that it is not the intention of the government to tax cash register checks, unless it is stated on the same that it is a receipt. A. E. McLean, sales manager of the National Cash Register Co., Toronto branch, told Canadian Grocer that on a great many cash register slips, the words were printed "this is a receipt." With these words the cash register check constitutes a receipt, and is therefore liable to the tax, applying on amounts of ten dollars and over. "However we intend to change the registers at once," Mr. McLean stated. "We will have these words eliminated. Merchants are well advised to have this change made in their machines at once. It will be an easy matter to do this. Some of the large department stores have already done so, anticipating that the check handed out from the cash register with the words "this is a receipt" would be liable under the law. I expect that the government will permit a certain amount of latitude in the enforcement of the law at the start, permitting merchants time to have their cash registers changed."

The Letter is a Receipt

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, discussing the new regulations, stated that he had not looked into them closely, but first hand, he thought the intention of the government in regard to this legislation had been made clearer. It was apparently not the purpose of the government, he said, to place the tax on cash sales over the counter. A letter or card acknowledging the receipt of payment is evidently viewed as a receipt, and the stamp on the letter is the only stamp tax required.

In regard to the clause in reference to payrolls, a manufacturer remarked that usually employers demanded signatures of employees as receipt for the same. "There might be a tendency," he said, "to offset the tax that must accompany these signatures, by paying employees with cash." However in most instances a signature of receipt is required, and with this the tax is demanded.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE RECEIPT TAX

"Counter sales slip and cash register tickets are not taxable, provided no words implying or stating acknowledgement of the receipt or the payment of money appear thereon.

"Payrolls, signature of employee thereon, being receipt for wages, taxable in respect of each such signature.

"Receipts for payment of taxes are taxable. A receipt for money in a deed or mortgage is taxable.

"Receipts for payment of taxes except those given to or by the Dominion Government or a Provincial Government, are taxable.

"Individual freight bills and periodical statements of same, acknowledging receipt of payment, are taxable.

"Customs House brokers' receipts are taxable.

"Letters forwarded by mail, also postcards, acknowledging the payment of money, are regarded as letters and cards, and are not subject to this tax.

"All insurance policies, whether fire, marine, life or casualty, wherein the payment of money is acknowledged, are taxable.

"All insurance receipts, acknowledging the payment of money, are taxable.

"Receipts drawn out of Canada, but not valid until countersigned in Canada, are taxable.

"Voucher cheques and cheques with receipts endorsed thereon, when drawn upon or addressed to a bank, are not taxable as receipts.

"Remitter's counterfoil, being part of a taxable express money order, is not taxable as a receipt."

Persons violating or evading the regulations are liable to a penalty not exceeding $100.

Ald. Gordon Drake's Store Badly Damaged by Fire

London, Ont., Dec. 24.—Fire which caused damage to the extent of between $6,000 and $7,000 broke out early this morning in the grocery store of Ald. Gordon Drake, Rcetory street. Mr. Drake and his family occupy the second story of the building, and they awakened with their rooms filled with smoke and the large frame warehouse in the rear of the store was in flames.

A passerby saw the fire and sent in an alarm but before the brigade arrived Ald. Drake succeeded in taking two motor cars from a garage which was close to the warehouse.

PEDLARS MAY ORGANIZE FIRST UNION IN CANADA

Quebec, Dec. 27.—Fear that they will be liable to a very heavy license to operate in this province if the recommendations of the Retail Merchants' Association are accepted, has prompted the "pedlars" in the province to start organizing and forming an association to protect their rights. This will likely be the first "pedlars' association" in Canada and is to resist some of the demands made by the retail merchants by which they would be licensed at a rate of $1,000 per annum.

MORE BRAZIL NUTS

Brazil nuts may be as popular and as widely used in a few years as the lowly peanut. During 1922 more than 15,000 tons of Brazil nuts were harvested, says Consul Pickerell, Para, in a report to the U. S. Department of Commerce and prices reached a low figure, but nevertheless they paid. Owing to the big money in rubber, the natives have concentrated on supplying that commodity and have neglected the nut, but now the owners are really cleaning up their forests and making an effort to facilitate a greatly increased harvesting of Brazil nuts. Hitherto only a very small percentage of the crop has been gathered and then only from those trees that grew close to the river's edge.

TURKISH FLOUR IMPORTS AND PRICES

Flour prices in Constantinople have dropped 5 per cent. during the previous week, according to a cable dated November 29 from the Constantinople office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Arrivals during the week reached 20,000 sacks, and stocks on hand total 50,000 sacks. Shipments aggregating 50,000 additional sacks were en route to Constantinople. The Turkish pound has been quoted at between 50 and 57 cents lately, on November 29 being quoted at 55½ cents. Trade has improved somewhat on prime necessities. Native Armenian and Greek merchants are still cautiously doing a limited business.

Globe "Buy By Mail" Scheme Assailed

General Merchant on Pelee Island, Ontario, Lays Bare Some Facts in Regard to the Mail Order Question and Writes The Globe in Regard to the Same—The Position of the Merchant in the Country

Editor Canadian Grocer:

I notice in your issue of November twenty-fourth some editorials on the mail order business, and the new C. O. D. department of the post office, and an invitation to your readers to express their opinions.

One of the special advertising pages and questionnaires of The Globe came to us, and we thought it worth while replying to it, but up to the present time we have not had any acknowledgement of our letter. However, we have a copy of our reply, which we are taking the liberty of enclosing, as it may contain some points that have not been covered by other communications. At any rate it covers our side of the question pretty thoroughly, although we might say more and still leave things unsaid.

If not too much trouble, if you do not use the enclosed may we ask you to return it? We would also like to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of your magazine, the Canadian Grocer, which we find of great assistance, both instructive and interesting in every particular.

A. M. McCORMICK & SON.

The Letter to the Globe

The following is a copy of Mr. McCormick's letter to The Globe:

The "Globe:"

Toronto, Ont.

I have read with much interest your advertising sheet, booming the new postal C. O. D. service, also your questionnaire, and thought it might be of interest to give you my views on the matter, from a double standpoint, first, of a rural postmaster, and secondly, a retail merchant in a rural district.

We admit, of course, that this service, from the standpoint of a Toronto daily paper, looks like a pretty good thing, not so much perhaps, for the general public, but for the Toronto department stores, whose money, collected from all parts of the Dominion, yields large profits that are invested in Toronto.

However, to be fair in this matter, we must look at all sides of the question. In every post office in the country the postmaster and his assistants spend all their time and energy in a service that is more arbitrary and exacting than any other public service, with less pay and longer hours of work, and are finding themselves every year more and more an "annex" to the Toronto department stores.

Salary on Basis of Stamp Sales

The postmaster's salary is based—not on the mail matter that he distributes, or the tonnage that he handles, but on the number of stamps that he sells. Consequently, two or three stamps that he sells, will bring him fifty or a hundred pounds of mail matter to distribute.

This in itself would seem to be a sufficient burden to add to the ordinary post office work, but now a paternal government, imitating our American neighbors, makes the postmaster, already nearly crowded out of his office with mail order parcels, responsible for the collection of the department store accounts, through the C. O. D. service. It is of absolutely no benefit or convenience to the public; a package cannot be delivered until the charges are paid, and it simply adds work and expense. As an instance of this, a firm in Toronto advertised a two-dollar article at a special price of one dollar. A patron of this office sent the dollar, and the article is mailed to him with a C. O. D. charge of $1.15, including charges the amount to pay is $1.22, which he must pay before he gets his purchase.

From the Retailer's Point of View

That is the postmaster's side of the story. Now look at it from the standpoint of the retail merchant, and show us where the public receives any benefit. True, the Toronto merchants are enabled to unload "sight unseen," as small boys trade broken jack knives, a quantity of goods that they could not handle over the counters, and the money they receive is invested in Toronto, and nine times out of ten they get away with the transaction because it is less bother to keep an unsatisfactory article and wear it out as soon as possible than to return it, and get your money back.

In the meantime, the retail merchant in the country or small town is trying to hold his trade, compete with the big department stores and make ends meet, and does not always find it an easy problem. In the first place, he must keep a better class of goods, because he could not sell over the counter the class of goods sold by advertising, and in the second place, in many cases he is waiting for his money while his customers are sending all their ready cash away to pay for the wonderful bargains (?) they read about in The "Globe." Possibly their conscience troubles them a little as they remember some absolutely necessary items they must have for dinner to-morrow, but then you know "we have an account with Mr. Jones, and he won't mind waiting until next month for the money—in fact, he ought to be glad to have our custom at all, and we could not afford to miss a bargain like this."

What the Country Merchant Does

Now no one will deny that the retail merchants throughout the country are a necessity—a necessary evil, judging from the amount of abuse they get. Nevertheless, they are a necessity, and besides being good citizens, they endeavor, as far as possible, to give as good service as any department store in the city. They carry a pretty heavy stock, too, compared with their volume of trade, much heavier than a city store, because they have to carry every line that is carried by a big department store, and their profits are less because they cannot turn their stock over as quickly. They pay taxes at home, they help keep up roads, schools and churches. They employ help at home, nearly always supporting from the business one or two families of employees, and when hard times come and money is scarce, they are the ones who hold a man up and keep him and his family from suffering for lack of necessities until he gets another job. Now, how much of this neighborly assistance and co-operation does the country district or the far-away customer receive from a department store in Toronto?

Cut out "buying by mail," and we venture to say trade will be better for the merchants and the customers will have a lot better return for their money, and the postmasters will rise up and call you blessed, when the parcel post and the C. O. D. services are abolished.

HALF AND HALF

Pat had just purchased a mule, but he was not satisfied, so he went back to the horse-dealer with it.

"You said the mule was quite tame," he said to the dealer.

"And so he is tame, isn't he?" replied the dealer, in an aggrieved tone.

"Not altogether—only partially so," the disconsolate Pat replied. "He is tame enough in front, but he is mighty wild behind!"

Wrong Slant on Profit Computation

Statement in Business Paper That Profit on Any Article is the Difference Between Its Cost and Selling Price is Taken Exception to by a Number of Merchants, and is Shown to be Incorrect

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

FAR be it from me to place hurdles in the way of any sincere efforts to improve business or business men. Even if awkward, or half fledged, or ill-digested, so long as they are honestly put forth, they should be welcomed. The great need of the hour—of any other hour, for that matter—is that men shall be stirred to think, for then they are more than likely eventually to arrive at sound conclusions. Therefore even the most arrant nonsense has its uses.

But it certainly is surprising to have a publication called "Better Business," published in Winnipeg, come out with its editorial department burdened with stuff about "profit" all of which was known to be wrong by every enlightened merchant a generation ago, understood to be wrong by merchants only partly enlightened now and conceded to be wrong even by merchants who act on their better knowledge only part of the time, to-day.

In its August issue, "Better Business" ran material which I condense as follows:

> Profit on any article is the difference between its cost and selling price. And the percentage of profit is the proportion between that profit and the cost.....There is no use trying to evade the issue or to "educate the people" to believe that anything else is correct.....One of the factors that has brought about the present depression....was when someone put over the argument that profit was what the dealer had over after he paid his expenses and that percentage of profit should be figured on the selling price. The only reason a dealer is allowed a profit is to pay the expenses of his business. If he had no expenses, he would not be entitled to any profit. His expense includes a reasonable interest (per annum, not per amount of sales) on the money used in the business, a reasonable return to him for service....and payment of legitimate charges in connection with that service.

It would be difficult to crowd more error and misstatement into as few words, to say nothing of the question of clarity; but the following merits most careful study:

> The danger of charging profit on the selling price is that the selling price contains the expenses; naturally, there is little tendency to cut expenses if one is to have a profit on them.

And you will have to think pretty hard to get the meaning of this:

> It is not right to make a profit on another's money, and that happens when you get a dollar from a man for an article and charge a profit on the whole dollar; part of that dollar is his money, you have no right to a profit on it.

Further:

> If you have one of those cards showing how to charge profits on the selling price, throw it away and get back to the actual mathematical, multiplication table way of marking your profit.....And it may as well be added at once that the method of computing profit by percentage is very faulty. The use of the money involved....is only one part of the service given....When the cost of an article doubles....it does not justify doubling the selling price....A broom costs 30c. wholesale and was sold for 45c.; then it was raised to 90c.—the dealer is not justified in charging $1.35 for it....The broom drops to 15c. wholesale—can you sell it at 22½c.? You know you cannot pay the service costs and do so.....All you can do is figure out as low a margin as you can do business upon; then increase sales and reduce expenses to bring the profits.

H. Cross, Wood Mountain, Saskatchewan, sent me the clippings I have condensed, with this comment:

> Apropos of your contention for calculating margin on selling price, which, by the way, I have practised for thirty years or more, I am sending by this mail a copy of the Credit Men's Magazine, "Better Business," which contains an article reverting to the prehistoric methods of our revered forefathers. Please read this and give us your comments, when you have time, that is if you consider th's old dead dog worth any more ammunition.

The Wilson Grocery Company, Kamloops, B. C., also comments as follows:

> In your articles in Canadian Grocer you have always advocated the figuring of profits on the selling price. In this we quite agree and believe that system the only safe one, but we got a surprise a short time ago when we read the editorial in the August issue of "Better Business," clippings from which we enclose. Now, we would like to know what you think of an editor who issues a paper with the idea of promoting "better business," spreading such stuff broadcast amongst the merchants of the West. It seems to us that the people who are behind this so-called trade paper have in mind the keeping of storekeepers in ignorance of proper methods of doing business, so that they will be led to imagine that they are making a good profit when, as a matter of fact, they are not doing better than breaking even. We enjoy reading your "stuff" as you call it. Some of the problems you are asked to solve are really amusing. The fellow who is looking for a cheaper container than the cookie cans which belong to the biscuit manufacturer for his dried fruit must surely be Scotch. He reminded us of the old lady who asked if there was anything cheaper than Parowax to use in sealing up milk bottles in which she was canning her jam for winter use!

Some Still Contend the Earth is Flat

Well, I am really not much worried about any harm the editor of "Better Business" will do. As I recall it, such a question was discussed in a far western journal about ten years ago, and, as is invariably the case so far as my observation goes, the man who sought to maintain that cost was the right basis got himself badly involved. In fact, this matter of figuring wrong is the most alluring thing. It looks simple, logical, workable. But any man who seeks to follow it through a mercantile business soon gets mixed somewhere in his figures. Our editor quotes what also looks simple: "Two and two make four." But our difficulty is not in finding the sum of two and two—it is in making sure that, having the first two we shall get the second. We can add 'em all right whether we are eastern, western or middle. What bothers us is to get 'em!

Do not let us get discouraged. There are men to-day, caliphs—meaning successors—of the manager of what formerly was humorously called Zowie's Dion, who maintain that the world is flat. And it may be at that—from certain points of view. Aviators tell us that is as flat as a map when looked down on from up in the air. Quite evidently, this editor is up in the air—so we must expect his vision to be somewhat distorted. If he gets down to earth, behind the counter of any store, with the job wished on him to make money out of that store, he won't bother much about taking what isn't "his'n," for he will find that the best brains he has or can hire will be needed to get the second two of the equation aforesaid.

He is approaching reason, too, as any man must, who thinks for a time on these problems. For though in his beginnings he insists that the total spread between cost and selling price is "profit," in his last sentence he makes a much clearer statement: "All you can do is figure out as low a margin as you can do business upon. Then increase sales and reduce expenses to bring the profits." That is a good differentiation—may I say, "the beginnings of wisdom?"

A Little Specific Stuff May Help

To confute all the error in the editorials would be to cover the entire subject—and there is neither space for that nor would it be useful nor even tolerable to most readers. But I feel that it will be worth while for many, including the editor of "Better Business," to refer to Fernley's "Right Way to Figure Profits," "Profits in Prunes," "Apple Money is Easy Money." I may add:

The difference between cost and selling price is margin—not profit.

The dealers—in all lines—who survived the recent depression were those who figured on sales, not cost. Witness Harvard's report on department stores as the only business which, as a whole, passed through 1921 with profit—the business which, as a whole has figured correctly for the longest time most universally of all. Consult Eaton's, Ltd., for the method followed; or ask B. Altman & Co., or Marshal Field, or Arthur Letts, or the Slessingers, or Harry Selfrige, or Harrods, Ltd., or Duffy Powers Co., just for samples. And will you prefer to follow known successes—will you consent at least to ask about their methods—rather than take the say-so of somebody who talks about brooms quite evidently without knowing a thing about the practical handling thereof?

For, though it may surprise him, this editor should know that brooms have been retailed at not merely as low as 22½c. but at 20c., and 15c.; that the margin in these cases was not more than 33-1/3 per cent. (correctly figured, by the way) which meant 6-2/3c. in the one case and 5c. in the other—gross—in Saturday Night Shopping Passing?

By Amy Campbell

IS Saturday night shopping not a thing of the past, particularly in grocery stores? There is something to be said for the little group thus described:

"As sure as Saturday night comes 'round
There's a nameless group of three,
Who get fussed up and go down town
On a sort of unconscious spree—"

But the story of this very likeable group of Dad, Mother and little Chap has this to say of their shopping—

"They haven't very much to spend,
But they purchase with their eyes
The very best that the windows hold,
Nor wonder if its wise—"

Not only because "they haven't very much to spend," but because their Sunday supplies are already tucked away in their pantry, do they turn to the luxury of "purchasing with their eyes" from the window displays, with a careless leisure that does not include the anxiety of choosing Sunday's "roast" or the replenishing of the week-end supplies. These have had their place en regle. Saturday night is gala night with nothing to do with waiting for change or parcels or boring tired clerks.

In spite of this growing fact it is perhaps the grocers that are hardest to educate to the change. Competitors wait on each other to come into line with the result in London, Ontario, that of over two hundred or more grocery stores, a very small majority close their doors to business at seven. Another agitation is at its height among these merchants and fine results are expected.

"Perhaps we lose a small amount of trade," admits John Diprose, whose store is situated on Dundas street, in the very heart of the city's business centre.

"But," he continues, "what is that to the comfort of not having to return on Saturday night after supper to another half day's work, already tired beyond usual, with the rush of the week-end orders.

"One's own customers very readily accustom themselves to the early closing and co-operate accordingly. The amount of business missed is scarcely worth mentioning. At least we don't consider it so and all the other grocers adopting the new hours are exceptionally well pleased with the results."

"It isn't justice," declares Harry Ranahan, "to expect lady clerks to start their day at eight o'clock in the morning and come back to wearisome walking up and down behind counters all evening." That Mr. Ranahan's store has one of the busiest sections of Richmond Street for its site, makes the fact of sacrifice of Saturday evening business interesting as an experiment.

"With pay-day coming on Thursday, the Saturday night shopping is not so necessary as it used to be. Telephone orders are in long before the evening, as a general rule. It is very unusual to have our patrons call up that they have forgotten their orders or overlooked an item. People become thoroughly acquainted with the change in hours and remember them. They are glad to co-operate with the grocers for a civilized week-end.

"There are several more grocers contemplating falling in line. They are handicapped in many cases by competitors who still hold out for the old order of things, but it is certainly coming our way, especially with two of the principal departmentals closing every Saturday night at six o'clock."

Mr. Ranahan tells an interesting story of an order secured after Thanksgiving Day from a spasmodically regular customer. The latter arriving with a goodly order on the Saturday evening preceding the holiday, found the door locked, remembered with a jerk that "things that used to be were not"—and was good-natured enough and co-operative in sufficient degree to hold his order over till Tuesday for Mr. Ranahan, instead of taking it to another shop that was open, and where he was in reality a more regular customer. The order and the story both came the way of the grocer who was not afraid of respectable and early closing. It begins to look rosy for the future of sane Saturday evenings for tired business people. Another evidence that the world continues to grow better, more considerate and charitable.

Problems of This Year's Inventory

Trend of Price Fluctuations This Year Raises Some New Problems in Pricing the Stock on Hand—What the Inventory Should Include—Pricing at Cost or Market Whichever is Lowest

Written for Canadian Grocer by G. W. HAFNER, Manager G. W. Hafner, Inc., Auditors.

AN inventory is a part of a statement of the financial position and operating condition of a business upon a certain day. And yet anyone at all familiar with actual conditions will agree that the inventory is usually the most dubious figure in the financial statement or balance sheet. It may look very precise, but it commonly covers a multitude of sins. The entire process is often full of guessing and juggling; and, to cap it all off, a thoroughly unsound scheme of valuation may be employed.

What an Inventory Should Include

The influence of the closing inventory figures upon the showing of net income and financial position is so great as to demand the most searching scrutiny of inventory practices, and the insistence upon the use of principles and procedures which are as rational and accurate as possible. Especially in these days of heavy income and profits taxes has the inventory process—both taking and pricing—become a matter of utmost significance to all business men.

Hence our endeavor should be to ascertain, not alone how to take the inventory so as to eliminate mistakes, but also the best manner in which to price the inventory after it is taken. What we should be interested in is getting at the facts, whatever they may be. We want to know what the goods on hand on a certain day are worth as an asset of the business.

The merchant or manufacturer must not forget that, where the title to the goods is vested in him or in his concern, the following classes of merchandise should be taken into account in the inventory: consigned goods, in the hands of customers; goods in public warehouses, subject to order; goods in transit and the like.

Pricing at Cost

A choice of two distinct methods of valuing the inventory is offered: "Inventories should be valued at (a) cost, or (b) cost or market, whichever is lower." However, the use is permitted under abnormal conditions, of the selling price, if actual selling prices were lower than cost or market.

When used as a basis for pricing inventories, the word "cost" in the first method means the actual invoice price paid for the merchandise plus freight, hauling and handling. At the option of the taxpayer, cash discounts, may or may not be deducted, but the method adopted by the taxpayer in this respect must be followed consistently thereafter.

Now, the question immediately arises, how are cost prices to be determined? A plan widely adopted by business men is of assuming that goods utilized or sold are always taken from the oldest lot first; or in other words that the stock actually inventoried consists of the most recently acquired lots. In carrying out this plan it is necessary merely to arrange invoices in a chronological sequence; and beginning from the latest, take off both quantity and value figures until a quantity total has been obtained equivalent to the quantity shown on the physical inventory. Thus, the corresponding value total would be the value of the inventory. By this means the inventory value is drawn from the actual records in a simple and systematic way, all guesswork and uncertainty being eliminated.

Pricing at Cost or Market

Where the second method—"Cost or market, whichever is the lower"—is used; it becomes necessary to set up three price columns on the inventory records, designated as "Cost," "Market," and "Lower," as illustrated by Fig. 4. The cost per item or unit should be entered in the first column. the market price in the second column; and the lower of the two preceding figures, in the third column. The number of units of each item appearing on the inventory sheets are then extended at the values showing in the third column.

Market is defined as the current bid price prevailing at the date of the inventory for the particular merchandise. In establishing a "bid" price it is necessary to show actual tradings in the particular merchandise, goods or materials at the prices used. But it is not necessary for the individual taxpayer, himself, to have made the transactions used to establish the market price; the known transactions of others are acceptable evidence of the validity of such a price. Getting at the market price is sometimes difficult, but there is no mystery about getting such values in the same form as it is bought.

The material part of any manufactured product, such as in the case of tinsmiths, would also be priced at market, plus labor and overhead. In labor and overhead the use of "market" also applies. These are usually measured of course by the actual payments for labor during the period, and by actual overhead for the period, or by an average rate or a standard rate of overhead. Thus the labor represented in the goods being inventoried may have been at a higher rate than that obtaining at the close of the year. The actual burden rates at the end of the year may, likewise, be lower than the rates applied when the products were manufactured. In such cases the lower rates in effect may be substituted.

In the Nature of a Photograph

This whole matter of pricing the inventory will be simplified and clarified, if it is borne in mind that the inventory is in the nature of a photograph, a snapshot, of the value of the stock on a particular day. It is not an impressionable painting that brushes into the values either the hopes or the fears of the future. Neither is it a forecast of what the business will be in a week, a month, or six months hence.

It is advisable, then, from every conceivable standpoint that inventories be valued by the second method; i.e., "cost or market, whichever is lower." As an indication of financial condition on a specific date, actual cost is not, in the very nature of the case, a satisfactory valuation. Price changes between purchase and inventory dates, are quite likely to be so striking as to render "cost" an extremely dubious representation of the true economic position of the concern. Especially during a phase of depression, with the trend of prices constantly downward, such as that we are now experiencing, it would put a valuation upon the inventory entirely too high.

Taking the Inventory

The taking of a true physical inventory involves some considerable preparation. This matter of preparation is a governing factor in securing accurate quantities. If you want an exact inventory you must begin some time in advance. A definite plan of procedure must be laid out, definite instructions sent to all officials and employees, and everyone must familiarize himself with the instructions. For the guidance of business men in this respect, the following general instructions are presented:

The following instructions outline the means of taking a physical inventory of stock at the close of business, December 31st, 1922. In order to obtain dependable information, these instructions must be understood by the executives of the company, as well as by ALL the individuals who will handle the detail work of counting, checking, pricing, recording and extending the inventory.

The manager will assume the entire direction and responsibility for properly carrying out instructions and taking inventory. He will determine that all persons in any way connected with the work understand the instructions, and are thoroughly familiar with just what will be required of them.

The department manager, or individual in charge, in each department will be held responsible for the count of all merchandise which is within the boundary of his department at the time of taking inventory.

Each department manager will assign certain individuals in his department, who are competent, to the various sections to make the count of all stock within such section. Since the department manager will be held responsible for the accuracy of this work, he should use care in choosing the men who write legibly, know the stock thoroughly and are careful and accurate.

The Working Arrangement

The men shall work in gangs of two, one counting the stock, and the other writing up the description and other necessary information on the tags to the proper lot of merchandise. The tags marked "general stock" (figure 1) shall be used for listing all stocks of merchandise; the tag marked "goods in process" (figure 2) for all products in course of manufacture; and the tag marked "supplies" (figure 3) for sundry items of supplies on hand.

Every tag will be numbered, and all of them must be accounted for. In case an error is made in writing a tag, under no circumstances must it be destroyed. It shall be marked void, and given to the department manager.

As soon as an entire department or section has been completed, the department manager will notify the inspection committee, who will make a sufficient examination to determine that all stock has been tagged, that the description on each tag is correct, that the proper unit appears on the tag, and that the quantities appearing on the tags are correct.

As this is done, the inspectors will tear off the bottom portion of the tag, place their initials in the space marked "checked by," and turn the tags over to the department manager. The department manager will see that all tags received by him are accounted for, and will then turn them over to the office, for checking with the issue records. The stubs must remain with the merchandise and no stock shall be removed until all tags are accounted for.

When the tags are received in the office, and are checked with the issue records, they will be turned over to the pricing clerks, who will price the tags under the direction of the manager.

When all the tags are accounted for and priced, they shall be assorted, first by the following classifications, and then by particular items.

1—General Stock.
2—Goods in process.
3—Supplies.

Having been thus assorted, they shall be listed on inventory sheets (figure 4) and the first extension made on the stub of these sheets.

After this extension has been made, all sheets will be numbered, the stub to bear the same number as the sheet. The stub will then be torn off and the final extensions made in the column provided on the sheet proper. By comparing the total of each sheet with the total of its respective stub a proof of the clerical accuracy of extensions and footings will be obtained.

ing comes there should be a consultation and the buying confined to one or two of the best brands in each particular line. I know of one store in particular in this city which sells seven different brands of canned peaches, all of which are about at the same price, same quality and are competitive with each other. Personally I believe this to be a big mistake and where I find such competition among lines in my store I endeavor to cut it down to at least two or three."

Seek Out the White Elephants

A REPORT from Columbus, Miss., states that a wholesale grocer there has a private zoo which included a large elephant. Recently the elephant lost its life in an accident. The elephant escaped from its keeper and foundered in a slough. Her neck was broken in attempting to haul her out.

We have not yet heard of any grocer in Canada having a live elephant, but we wonder how many grocers will find "a white elephant" among their stocks when they take their yearly inventory?

One of the valuable results obtained from taking an inventory at least once a year, and apart from the desire to know just where the merchant stands, is to become better acquainted with the stock. To find what goods or brands have been selling and those which have not, to analyze the situation and learn just why certain goods sell freely while other brands are barely moving at all, are tasks for the retailer at this time. It is an opportunity to clean house and to cull the "white elephants." We know of one merchant who does this as regularly as the inventory is taken. When the clerks go over the stock, to those lines which have not been selling as fast as they should for some reason or another, a colored tag or slip of paper is attached. Then when the stock is all written up, the goods with the colored tags attached are gathered together, placed on a display table and a special price put on them. This enables the merchant to get rid of the "white elephants" with as little loss as possible and makes him more careful in buying and in the selection of his merchandise during the coming year.

A Lesson For The Retailer

MANY OF the most pressing problems facing the trade to-day are those in connection with costs of distribution. This subject has many ramifications for the retailer involving as it does the question of store administration, but it is a subject to which manufacturers and wholesalers are also giving much more attention and as their decisions in regard to marketing methods directly affect the retailer, he must be fully alive to what is going on and introduce such efficient methods in his business and take such steps to stimulate turnover that producers will not be given cause to consider other channels for adequate marketing of their goods.

For some months it has been quite apparent to manufacturers that too much attention has been paid in the past to production, and too little to distribution. This was a more or less natural development of the war period when productive capacity of our industries was strained, and in the immediate post-war period when there was little hesitation on the consumer's part to buy freely. In recent times, however, this condition has changed and not only must the manufacturer seek an outlet for his normal production but in many cases he must secure more than ordinary distribution to keep running those plants which were expanded under the pressure of war requirements. Thus the problem of distribution has become an acute one for all concerned.

After examining production costs closely some of the shrewdest manufacturers in the industry state they have been paying too big a price for distribution. There has been too much careless buying on the part of retailers which has hurt their own interests as well as those of the manufacturer. The solution is a larger volume of business on a smaller margin of profit. This can be partly brought about by using stock limits on seasonable merchandise and other mediums of intelligently guiding buying and selling. The trouble which certain retail grocers claim is facing them today in the form of too many retail stores is fundamentally the same trouble which has been facing the manufacturer for some time past. There have been too many factories and too little buying on the part of the retailer. But the manufacturers have not endeavored to solve the trouble by taking action to curtail the number of producers, they are following out the more constructive plan of adopting more efficient methods so as to shorten the margin and secondly of developing their connections with their retail customers on the basis of service. "We are selling our connection to-day rather than merely a product" says a prominent manufacturer who finds that the plan plus fair prices has solved many of their marketing problems. The same solution will do for the retail grocer.

Foresight of British Traders

GERMANY MADE a big mistake in considering that the people on the American continent were price buyers, stated A. C. Pearson, vice-president of the Dry Goods Economist recently. She assumed America was a cheap market. Great Britain knew different. She has always succeeded in selling in America her quality wares, despite tariff barriers and other restrictions. Printers Ink comments that even the recent United States tariff will not keep out really high-class merchandise. If it has exceptional quality and other distinguishing features, the American people are willing to pay its price.

This bears out Canadian Grocer's contention that those in this trade who are looking for price regardless of quality, are following the wrong path.

Circulars to Dead Men

A BUSINESS man showed us recently a circular from a manufacturer of a beverage that was addressed to his wife, or rather to his wife if he had had one. He is a bachelor and naturally displeased.

Another business man in a certain institution is receiving regularly from financial houses, circulars addressed to a man who has been dead at least ten years. At one time he was connected with the same institution and his name is somewhat similar to the individual who is now getting these circular letters.

This again goes to show how difficult it is to keep mailing lists in proper shape. Not only that, but it gives a very poor impression of the house that sends out such a circular. It would be interesting to know just how many dead men are getting circulars everywhere in Canada. The loss in postage, stationery, and time in getting them out and mailing them, must be enormous. There is far too much waste along this line.

Jobbers Buy Together to Meet Prices of Competing Chain

A number of Saskatchewan wholesale grocers have formed a buying organization, the purpose of which is to be able to buy in larger quantities at better prices. The organization has been divided into sections each of which forms a separate purchasing association within the organization. For instance, two or three men are selected to purchase only canned fish. Jams will be bought by another set of men and so on.

Several reasons are given for the establishing of such a buying organization. Among them are that the wholesale grocers of Saskatchewan may be able to save money by buying in larger quantities; that they may be able to sell goods cheaper to the retail trade who will then be in better position to compete with mail order houses. Still another reason stated is to be able to compete better with an existing chain of wholesale grocers throughout Western Canada.

Former President and Director of Wholesale Grocery, Ltd., Face Conspiracy Charge

J. Kenneth Knowles and J. C. Knowles, of Wholesale Grocery, Limited, Are Charged With Conspiracy to Steal Between $60,000 and $70,000 in Groceries From Wholesale Grocery, Limited

TORONTO, Dec. 27. (Special)—J. Kenneth Knowles of 25 Northcliffe Boulevard, who was president and J. C. Knowles of 263 Main Street, a director of Wholesale Grocery, Ltd., were yesterday arrested by Detectives McConnell and Mulholland on the charge of conspiring to steal between $60,000 and $70,000 in groceries from Wholesale Grocery, Limited. The charge arises out of alleged transactions with a retail store in the East End. The men were later admitted to bail.

Wholesale Grocery, Limited, of which J. Kenneth Knowles was president and general manager, made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to John L. Thorne, authorized trustee, on September 27. The business was carried on at 7 Wellington street, west. J. C. Knowles was a director.

In a sworn statement made before C. W. Adams, a commissioner, on the day of the assignment, J. Kenneth Knowles estimated his total liabilities at $57,790.33. Of the total the unsecured creditors rank for $36,716.31. The secured creditors have claims for $18 880.29 and preferred creditors' claims of $2,193.73. The assets, according to the estimated value placed by J. Kenneth Knowles, amount to $44,450.01. The stock in trade is valued at $30,581.62, and book debts were expected to realize $4,849.

The assets, when compared with the liabilities, are alleged to show a deficiency of $13,340.52. There are 156 unsecured creditors.

Canned Corn Will be Rigidly Inspected, Says Ottawa Report

Claim Made by One Canner's Representative at the Capital That "Choice" and "Standard" Grades Are Masquerading Under "Fancy"—The Various Grades Defined

OTTAWA, Dec. 27. (Special).—Information has come to your correspondent that there may be some changes in the system of grading canned vegetables during 1923; or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that the grading will be rigidly enforced. Not long ago a representative of one canner was in Ottawa and visited the Department of Agriculture that has this matter in charge. He stated that in some cases at least, canned corn was not being graded properly. In other words, his claim was that some corn graded as "fancy" should have been graded as "choice" or only "standard." He went into the matter carefully with some of those in charge. Several tins of corn were sampled and it is understood that the officials of the department agreed that more care should be exercised in the grading for the protection of the canner who is grading his goods properly, as well as for the protection of the merchant who buys according to grade, and of the consumer.

It is understood that assurance has been given that the matter will be gone into thoroughly early in the new year, and that the products of the various companies will be checked up more closely.

The department defines the various grades of corn as follows: Standard Choice, Fancy and Seconds.

"Standard," "Choice" and "Fancy" grades shall be packed from certain varieties of corn known to the trade as sweet corn, or "sugar corn." The corn shall be picked from the stalks when it is young and tender; that is when the kernels are in a creamy or milky state on the cob.

"Standard corn" shall be fairly young and tender and free from any considerable portion of cob, silk, husks or specks. The color must be reasonably white with very little brown in it.

"Choice corn" shall be young and tender; the color should be bright. It must have the distinctive flavor of young corn and be practically free from pieces of cob, silk, husks or specks.

"Fancy corn" shall be selected stock of young and tender sweet or sugar corn. It shall be packed while still fresh and must have the distinctive flavor of young corn. It must be free from pieces of cob silk, husks or specks. The color must be bright and the appearance creamy.

"Seconds corn" shall be packed from sweet or sugar varieties of corn which, while still in the green state, are too matured to meet the requirements of any of the foregoing grades. Certain varieties of corn known as "Indian" corn, "Field" corn and "Common" corn may also be used in this grade but these latter varieties will not be allowed in any other grade. The finished product shall be fairly free from pieces of cob, husks or silk and shall be fairly bright in color.

All grades shall be solid pack and the cans must be filled full. The minimum net weight of the contents of a No. 2 can shall be 20 ounces.

It will be noticed from the above that the "Standard," "Choice" and "Seconds" varieties may have some cob, silk, etc., in them but that the "Fancy" must be entirely free. This was one of the chief points taken up with the department by the visitor to Ottawa.

Letters To The Editor

PRICING GOODS AT INVENTORY

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

We are getting our stock in shape to take stock and would be glad to have your opinion on the following questions:

1.—Should goods be priced at the actual invoice cost or what we can buy them for to-day?

2.—We find that we have some goods which have been in stock for some time and are not selling. In fact it is doubtful whether we could get the cost out of them. How should these be priced?

3.—How should fixtures be priced?

Yours very truly,
G. B. H.

Editor's Note:—The purpose of taking an inventory is to know the actual value of the stock at a certain date in the year. Therefore, to know accurately that value, the stock must be priced at the figure at which it can be replaced on the day the inventory is written up.

2.—To answer this question the merchant should p ce himself in the position of a buyer, or in other words imagine himself as buying the stock. If there are certain goods in the stock which have become shop worn, labels soiled or something else the matter with them which would hinder their sale at the original price, then a price should be set upon them at which they could be moved, no matter whether the actual selling price was cut 50 per cent. or even more. Pricing an inventory should be accurate even if by so doing the merchant shows himself a loss.

3.—There is no hard and fast rule by which a merchant could inventory his fixtures but it is a well known fact that in five or six years or even in a less time, fixtures will not bring in the open market 50 per cent. of their actual cost. The majority of merchants and manufacturers figure that fixtures and machinery should pay for themselves in ten years, so they distribute the cost over a period of ten years writing off ten per cent. of the cost each year. If the fixtures cost say $1,000 last year, then they would be put at $900 this year. This appears to be a very good plan and merchants can hardly go astray in adopting it.

RAPID DEVELOPMENT OF DAIRY INDUSTRY IN MANITOBA

Winnipeg, Dec. 26.—Manitoba's dairying industry has shown remarkable development during the past few years, and out of 51,000 farmers in the province there are now 26,000 of them producing and shipping milk and cream. Immediately prior to the war, Manitoba was an importer of dairy products, but to-day the province is one of the greatest exporting provinces of the Dominion. Seventy carloads of butter were brought into the province in 1914, while exports now total 100 carloads annually.

"It has been one of the most remarkable developments of a new industry that I have ever known," stated J. S. Evans, deputy minister of agriculture for Manitoba, in discussing the history of dairying in Manitoba.

HIGH IDEALS IN BUSINESS

H. C. McLaughlin, vice-president of the McCaskey Systems Limited, Galt, Ontario, in tendering Christmas greetings brings out the high ideals that should characterize business to-day. His greeting reads:

This is the Birthday of Him who stands, of all ages, the bright unsullied example of unselfish love.

Business has been, and is being arraigned as the quintessence of sordid, selfish greed.

And yet, by a strange paradox, business is becoming humanity's highest and finest expression of His spirit and follower of His teaching.

Business is feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, healing the sick, visiting those in prison, opening the eyes of the blind, carrying the lame and the halted, teaching the ignorant, training the incompetent, and printing and distributing the Glad Tidings to all nations.

Business is learning that war is waste. Business is to-day gathering its mighty forces to put an end to class hatred, industrial strife, destructive competition, sectional hatreds, and international war. Thus is Business bringing "Peace on Earth—Good Will toward men."

Business makes friends and brothers of all nations and all races.

Trade knows no color line, nor race prejudice. Community of business interests, means unity in thought and feeling. It is the fruition of the desire of Him who said, "All ye are brethren."

Business has demonstrated the practical truth of the Golden Rule He uttered. Business now rests upon the principle He laid down, when He said "He that would be greatest among you, let him be your servant."

Business, more than any other human agency, has brought, and is bringing, harmony between men and nations. Harmony is an expression of Love, and He said, "This is my commandment, that ye love one another."

TRAGEDY OF CHINA'S TEA TRADE

The decline of China's tea trade is the greatest commercial calamity that has befallen that country, and one for which there is little justification, says Consul General Cunningham, Shanghai, in a report to the U. S. Department of Commerce. Ceylon and India have been wise. The Chinese have been slow. They have failed to read the signs of the times, with the result that their former great tea trade is passing to their southern neighbors. Green, black and brick tea are still being exported from China, but in pitifully small quantities compared to the hundred of millions of pounds exported when the Chinese tea industry was in its prime. The two principal varieties of green tea, known as "Chu" and "Yui" will always be in demand the world over. The leaf of the former has the appearance of a pearl, which is, in fact, the meaning of "Chu." The leaf of the latter variety is longer than that of the "Chu." The best green tea is supposed to be Hyson. The heaviest export now is Green Powder, and the next Young Hyson and Hyson.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

HOLIDAY business is reported from all quarters as quite satisfactory and better than a year ago. Special Christmas lines have been fairly well cleaned up and in fact some lines had become scarce in wholesale houses several days previous to the holiday. Markets during the past week were under the influence of the holidays and generally presented a quiet appearance if not closed until after the turn of the year. The raw sugar market after developing quietness has suddenly turned firmer. Sales of Cubans being made at 3 5-8c c. & f. New York for early January shipment and 3 1-2c c. & f. for the latter half of January, and in addition some 3,400 bags of Cubans in port were sold to operators at 4c c. & f. apparently to cover exchange transactions. This price, however, refiners were not willing to pay therefore nominal spot quotations remain at 3 3-4c c. & f. There are now two definite estimates of the new Cuban crop. Himley, of the Federal Sugar Refining Co., places the crop at 4,102,857 tons while Guma-Mejer estimates the crop at 4,193,000 tons. The U.S. refined situation is quiet at $7.10 seaboard basis. Prices for export are unchanged at 4.75c for prompt shipment and 4.60c for February and March shipment, net cash in bond p. a. s. The Canadian refined situation is without any special feature, but it is understood that there is no pressure at sell. Refiners' lists are unchanged at $8 basis Montreal.

The situation in tea continues to be one of outstanding interest and the tendency remains strong and upward. Markets abroad are closed on account of the holiday season but it is expected that when they again open after the turn of the new year that the situation will show even a stronger tone with possibilities of further advances. Another factor in the tea situation is the advance in Sterling exchange which so far means about one cent per pound on tea imported into Canada. Coffees are firm but no change is noted in quotations to the retail trade. Currants on spot continue scarce but shipments are expected in a couple of weeks on which prices are lower. Raisins are firmer while other dried fruits show little change. Canned vegetables are moving in good volume with the situation steady but firm in tone.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.—The grocery market is quiet and will remain so until the early part of next week when the wholesale travellers will be out on their territories again. The wholesale trade is looking for a brisk month in January since stocks carried by the retail trade are not heavy. This will serve to strengthen a market that is already firm. Grocery lines in general are in a much better condition than at the beginning of the year. Cutting in canned goods has almost disappeared and, in fact, the market in a number of lines is strong. Buying in canned goods will be heavy in January. The sugar market is uncertain for the future and opinions vary concerning it. At the present time it has every appearance of a steady market. Corn syrups have a strong tone on account of the strength of the market for the raw product. There has been an easier feeling in cereals but mainly on account of the quiet market and with a better movement, which is sure to come, a better tone is expected. There is no change in package goods. Cloves and cassia are scarce on primary market but demand has been light here and the local market does not show the effect directly. Coffee is in a steady position but tea dealers claim that another advance in black teas must come in January. The nut market is quiet and weak in all lines except shelled walnuts which show a strong tendency. Dried fruits are all easier for the new year but the importers are well pleased with the holiday business.

ROLLED OATS IRREGULAR

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is some irregularity in local prices on rolled oats due to keen competition for what business there is passing. This is a result of the quiet holiday period but millers are of the opinion that early in January there will be a bigger demand for replenishment of both wholesale and retail stocks and then rolled oats will take on a stronger appearance. For the last three weeks the cereal market has been quiet and the result is an easier feeling for the present.

CANNED GOODS FIRM

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The demand for canned goods has been limited during the past two weeks on account of the holiday season but the wholesale trade is expecting a marked revival of the demand early next week as soon as the travelers are on the road. Stocks carried by the retail trade are small and must be replenished. The feeling locally is that a strong market for canned goods will be a feature for the remainder of the winter with some advances. Tomatoes in particular are looked upon as a good buy. There is a striking contrast between the canned goods market for this year and that of last. Price cutting has practically disappeared.

DRIED FRUITS WEAK

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Dried fruits show weakness in nearly all lines after a brisk holiday trade. Better supplies of currants are now in New York and the shortage, with consequent high prices that threatened, has been averted. The raisin market is easy and more Sultana raisins than were some time ago expected are available for the trade. Figs are in better supply and lower prices may be expected early in the new year. Evaporated apples are easy and wholesale prices will be somewhat adjusted in January.

CLOVES SCARCE

Montreal.

SPICES.—Primary market reports a scarcity of cloves and nutmegs. The local market is quiet and has not yet felt the shortage or shown its effect in price. A strong market nevertheless exists in these lines as well as in cassia. In this line as in others, an improved demand to replenish stocks is expected early in January.

HIGHER TEA PRICES LIKELY

Montreal.

TEAS.—The feature of the tea market is the strength of black tea and the probability of a further advance in bulk tea. The small stocks held locally both by tea merchants and retailers is having a telling effect upon the market. Local importers state that present quotations are not what present import costs warrant. A further advance in prices is expected in January after the holiday season is over. The market for Japan teas is firm without any change.

MOLASSES FIRM

Montreal.

SYRUPS.—A strong market for corn syrup is evident. The demand is good and while there has been no change in prices for some time the cost of the raw product, corn, has been increasing and the syrup has been accumulating strength. Unless corn shows weakness in January it is highly probable that there will be an adjustment of prices. Molasses is firm and is likely to remain so, particularly in view of the contract basis on which it is supplied.

NUT MARKET QUIET

Montreal.

NUTS.—As was expected the nut market showed a last minute demand for supplies that finished the Christmas and New Year trade. With an improvement over the sales of last year and with stocks fairly well cleaned up this market is now quiet and a weaker market for nuts in shell is evident. Shelled walnuts, however, are strong and for the later months of the winter higher prices may be expected.

PACKAGE GOODS STEADY

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—January will certainly bring an increased demand for all lines of package goods. While there has been a steady drain on the retailers' stocks for the last three weeks there has been little buying in the wholesale trade. Rolled oats are stronger and some millers are discussing higher prices on the package line but unless bulk oats show a stronger tone this is hardly likely to take place in the near future. Other lines are steady.

OPINIONS VARY ON SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Opinion varies as to the future of the sugar market. On one point the trade is agreed and that is that for the present at least the sugar market is on a firm basis. Some local wholesalers are of the opinion that before the end of January a lower price on refined sugar will be quoted. The demand is limited at present to small lots to meet immediate requirements and the trade is quiet, but a more brisk market is expected in January. Spot stocks of raws are now selling at New York at 3¾c. c. & f. The wholesale and retail trade is carrying no more sugar than is actually needed and an easier market is expected.

VEGETABLES IN GOOD DEMAND

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—There have come to the market good supplies of imported and hot house vegetables for the holiday trade. This supply was sufficiently large in many cases to afford some reductions. ORANGES AND APPLES EASY

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The feature of the fruit market is the low prices quoted on oranges. Large supplies of oranges came to this market for the holiday trade and although there has been a splendid demand and a good movement to the consumer prices remain easy. Boxed apples are also easy in price and for the holiday trade showed some slight reductions on account of the keen competition. The grapefruit season opens in January with prices ruling easy. The demand for imported grapes for the holiday trade was good and prices were unchanged. A good supply still remains on the market and some easier prices may be expected. The lemon market shows no change and supplies are sufficient to meet all requirements.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—Trading in wholesale circles is fairly quiet this week after the rush of the past few weeks in preparation for the holiday trade. Business has been satisfactory and special Christmas lines have been pretty well cleaned up. Market conditions show practically no change, being under the influence of primary markets which are mostly closed until the turn of the new year. Speaking generally, a firmness continues and there is no indication at the moment for any lessening. The raw sugar market which a week ago was somewhat easier, has since developed a firmer tone and buyers' and sellers' ideas are much stronger. This condition is reflected in the refined market and although there is no actual change it is understood there is no pressure to sell sugar. Potatoes are weak while cereals and beans are steady to firm. Teas continue to indicate an upward movement and coffees are also firmer.

BEANS STEADY AND FIRM

Toronto.

BEANS.—The market shows little change as compared with a week ago. Prices are steady but firm. Ontario hand picked are quoted at $3.65 per bushel and one pound pickers at $3.40 per bushel. Limas are steady in price.

COFFEE.—The spot situation in coffee continues with a firm tone and although there is some talk of higher prices in certain quarters, so far nothing has developed in that way. But judging by conditions in primary markets the tendency is upward rather than downward.

CANNED VEGETABLES IN DEMAND

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—The movement in canned vegetables continues good and wholesalers are of the opinion that after the first of the year a brisker demand will develop. Prices are steady at the moment and little change is expected in the near future. Canned fruits and jams so far are not moving in large volume but prices are fairly firm. Fish shows a steady movement with quotations unchanged but firm.

RAISINS FIRMER

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Supplies of currants are still very low. Some wholesale houses are out of currants entirely, while those that have any are holding prices around 22½c per lb. Direct shipments, however, are on the way and should arrive within the next two weeks. Seeded raisins are quoted slightly higher at 16c per package.

FIRMER FEELING IN NUTS

Toronto.

NUTS.—Nothing new has developed in the market for nuts. Prices are steady at the moment but some lower prices are likely after the first of the year on shipments purchased at the lower point sometime ago. Primary markets for both walnuts have developed a firmness.

HONEY MARKET QUIET

Toronto.

HONEY.—The honey market during the week was rather quiet, no doubt feeling the effect of the holiday season and buyers apparently paying more attention to other lines. Quotations, however, are unchanged and as there appears to be considerable stock still in producers' hands there is no likelihood for a stronger tone developing.

STRENGTH IN TEAS CONTINUES

Toronto.

TEAS.—There is no indication of any slacking in the strength which has been displayed in teas during the past few months. But on the other hand, there are indications for the strength continuing with a possibility for further advances when the markets abroad reopen after the holidays. The local spot situation is indeed very strong and supplies are none too large. In wholesale circles, some parcels have changed hands at a figure on the same basis as those quoted to the retail trade, which plainly indicates that quotations to the retail trade are still below replacement and naturally the trade can expect higher prices to prevail.

RAW SUGARS FIRMER

Toronto.

SUGAR.—There is nothing of special interest in the refined sugar situation other than the market is fairly quiet and we understand there is little pressure to sell sugar. The raw market developed a firmer tone after the recent weakness and prices for prompt shipment are nominal at 3¾c c. & f. New York, while some Cubans in port sold to operators at 4c c. & f. Cubans for first half of January shipment were sold at 3-5/8c and for latter part January at 3½c c. & f. New York.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 27.—The grocery trade is in a more healthy condition than it has enjoyed for some time. The holiday trade has been exceptionally good and both wholesalers and retailers report that they are practically cleaned up on many lines. Collections are showing a slight improvement. The tea markets continue to advance under a stimulus of a short crop and heavy demand. The coffee market is marking time. Canned goods are moving in fair volume. Cereals are strong and a temporary shortage on barley is noted. Evaporated apples are ruling easier and sales locally have been stimulated. Southern rice is firm with Oriental easier. Sugar is showing an easier tone and after the first of the year a gradual decline is expected. Fruits and vegetables are enjoying seasonable sales.

COFFEE CONTINUES FIRM

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—There is practically nothing of interest to report in the coffee situation. Markets are marking time and indications are that the last crop of Santos is getting into small compass. Local prices are steady under a fair demand.

CANNED GOODS IN FAIR DEMAND

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—There is a fair demand for all lines of canned goods. Wholesalers and retailers report that old stocks are practically cleaned up, and after the turn of the year preparations are being made to stimulate the sales of these lines. Buying for future is based on immediate requirements, and an improvement is expected.

CEREALS CONTINUE STRONG

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—The temporary shortage on barley still exists. Rolled oats continue firm. Beans are advancing. There is a limited quantity of B. C. offered as well as fair quantities of Oriental. The tone in package cereals is firm and the only change of note has been the reduction in price on cream of wheat. Present quotations for three dozen to the case is $6.90.

EVAPORATED APPLES EASIER

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—Evaporated apples on primary markets are ruling easier, and this will be reflected on the local market shortly. Packers state that only sufficient quantities of evaporated apples were packed this season to meet the necessary requirements. Locally there is a good demand at the low quotations. Other lines of dried fruits however show practically no change.

JAMS MOVING SLOWLY

Winnipeg.

JAMS.—Jams continue to move in small quantities. Manufacturers state that they are carrying only small stocks and if this is the case when the normal demand is felt prices will be well maintained.

Winnipeg.

SPICES.—All lines of spices are firm on the increased demand. Peppers have firmed up considerably and there is an active movement in practically all lines.

ROBBERS TAKE 600 IBS. OF BUTTER FROM DELHI CREAMERY

Robbers visited a number of business places the other night at Delhi, Ont. At Delhi creamery 600 pounds of butter were taken, a quantity similar to that stolen one year ago. The Delhi Manufacturing Company was visited and a number of pairs of mitts taken. The office of Quance Bros., flour millers, was entered, but nothing is reported missing except a fountain pen, which was left on a desk. At the Delhi garage an attempt was evidently made to obtain gasoline, but nothing is missing.

REVIEW OF GROCERY TRADE

the end of the year pretty much on the same level as at the beginning.

Potato Market Sees Low Prices

The position in potatoes is one of particular interest, and the sentiment in the market was much different this fall than for many years past. Speaking generally the market has been extremely quiet and the quantity moving from producers' hands has been based entirely upon consumer demand. Prices too were very low, the average this season so far being 54c. per bag as compared with $1 last year and against $1.20, the average for the three preceding years. Apparently the principal reason for the low prices prevailing this fall is the lack of buying of a speculative character. Dealers have evidently kept in mind the heavy losses of last spring and are quite content to let the farmer hold the stock and take a chance on the market improving later on.

Another factor in the situation is the large crop in the United States which is nearly a million more bushels of potatoes this year than a year ago, and nearly half a million bushels greater than the average crop during the past five years. This large crop together with the high tariff will tend to prevent heavy shipments of potatoes to the country to the south of us and will no doubt be factors in determining future prices of potatoes and market conditions.

The total crop of potatoes for all Canada this year is estimated at 2,990,250 tons produced from 683,594 acres as compared with 3,220,380 tons from 701,912 acres last year. The average yield this year is 4 1-3 tons as against 4½ tons in 1921.

WRONG SLANT ON PROFIT COMPUTATION

stores where money was made in satisfactory ratio.

True, also, in 1921, the wholesale grocers of the continent, as a body, lost 46/100 per cent. They did this though they, too, figure margins and profits correctly. So correct computation did not save them. Therefore, it must be poor stuff. Not necessarily. The answer is that correct computation is only one element necessary to success. Let us compare it to the human heart which carries on only 20 per cent. of the work of the body. Jobbers would have lost more had they figured incorrectly, and again, by figuring as they did, they not only did not lose more but they were able to know—know, not guess—exactly what they did lose.

How "Per Annum" if Not on Sales

"Reasonable interest" can be earned on the "per annum" or any other basis only by insuring a return on each sale. What, how much, in what circumstances a real profit accrues, are questions so intricate that no swivel chair ruling will get us far—unless, as in some cases, the swivel denotes graduation from behind-the-counter ranks. And, by the way, what is "reasonable," and who shall set the limits, and does our friend not know that the hope of liberal earnings is what stimulates men to go into business, remain in it and develop acceptable service?

This Conference Favors Federal Grading of Eggs

Winnipeg, Dec. 27.—Representatives of the four western provinces interested in the production and marketing of eggs, decided in conference in Winnipeg, the other day, in favor of federal grading of eggs. The resolution passed was drafted by Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, Ottawa, and moved and seconded by A. P. McLean, Canadian Packing Company, Winnipeg, and W. A. Wilson, general manager, Saskatchewan Co-operative Creameries. It was as follows:

"Inasmuch as under the present system of handling eggs from producer to consumer, much loss is incurred by all parties concerned, due to inequitable payment to producer as based on quality and decreased consumption as a result of the poor product sold.

"Therefore be it resolved, that this meeting do declare itself in favor of some system of grading and handling eggs by grade, from producer to consumer, as a means of correcting this unsatisfactory condition of affairs.

"Be it further resolved that this meeting is of the opinion that the proper procedure to follow with a view to the early and effective solution of this question is the nomination of a committee, to include representatives from the producer, the wholesaler, the retailer, the provincial and federal departments of agriculture, to consider ways and means of bringing this end about."

It was decided this committee should consist of two representatives of the federal department of agriculture and one representative from each provincial department of agriculture with four representatives of the producers, wholesalers and retailers. A. P. McLean was appointed convener of the committee, which will meet about January 15 in Winnipeg and will report its findings regarding the most suitable regulations, direct to the department of agriculture at Ottawa.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.—The feature of the produce and provision market is the weaker tendency in live hogs and the consequent reduction in prices. The demand for dressed pork is only fair and for the beginning of the year an easy trend is evident. The demand for smoked meats is limited but during the Christmas season a slight increase in the call for smoked hams was evident. Prices on smoked meats are steady but show the influence of the easier hog market. Lard and shortening are unchanged. The egg market is strong but without any change in price. Prices on new laid eggs are high and vary considerably. Local dealers do not favor a higher egg market and although prices are much lower than a year ago dealers feel that the peak of prices has been reached and that a firm market will hold at the present basis. Butter is strong with a good export market. Some Australian butter is now on its way to Canada but the quality is not known and, therefore, its effect cannot be judged yet. It may, however, cut off part of Canada's export trade to the United States. The cheese market is firm with a good movement for local and country account. The steady cold weather has facilitated the handling of fish and increased the demand. Prices are easy on frozen and salt fish.

EXPORT MARKET FOR BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Canadian butter is finding a splendid demand in the United States and with this drain on supplies the local market is steadily gaining strength with indications for an advance. There is some Australian butter now on the way to Canada but the quality is not yet known and its effect upon the market is uncertain.

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—An unsettled feeling prevails in the local live hog market and prices are irregular. Selected light weight hogs show a reduction of 25 cents per cwt. and local prices range from $10.85 to $11 per cwt., weighed off cars. There is a slight improvement in the demand for fresh pork, but on the whole the market shows a weakness which would indicate another reduction unless supplies of live hogs are withheld.

WEAKNESS IN SMOKED MEATS

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—There is no change in the smoked meat market. Prices have an easy trend on account of the lower values on hogs and the quiet state of the export market. There is a slight improvement in the demand for ham, but on the whole the smoked meat market is weak.

SHORTENING MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

SHORTENING. — The market for shortening is steady with a fair demand and follows closely the trend of the lard market.

LARD PRICES UNCHANGED

Montreal.

LARD.—A fair demand exists for lard for the local and country trade and there is a steady undertone. There is no indication of a change in price.

FROZEN AND SALT FISH EASIER

Montreal.

FISH.—The continued cold weather has not only increased the demand for frozen and salted fish and the number of dealers handling it but by facilitating the handling it has eased prices in many lines. Fish dealers are looking for a good fish month during January with prices steady.

Montreal.

POULTRY.—There is a firm market for dressed poultry after the Christmas trade and in this province there is a particularly good demand for the New Year holiday. After the fairly easy prices on turkeys for Christmas and the good demand the market is steady and produce dealers are well pleased with the poultry trade this year.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Production of eggs in the country is showing an increase but the demand for this class of eggs is heavy which tends to hold the market firm although prices are a shade lower than a week ago. The situation in butter is strong with a slight advance in quotations. Cheese also holds firm under influence of small holdings in Canada and a good export inquiry. Live hogs are in an easier position while lard and shortening are unchanged. Smoked meats show little change but the tone of the situation is a shade easier. Fish prices are well maintained, with good supplies. Poultry supplies are plentiful in a firm market at the moment, but dealers are not anxious to take on further supplies. The demand for all kinds of poultry has been heavy and a good clean up is expected.

BUTTER PRICES HIGHER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The strength in the market for butter is slightly more pronounced and in consequence prices are advanced one cent. The best grades of creamery prints are bringing 42c to 44c and second grades 39c to 41c per lb. The strength in butter is due largely to the demand for export, particularly to the United States where stocks are lower than last year as well as for the last five year average.

Toronto

FRESH MEATS. — The markets throughout the week for cattle and hogs were fairly quiet and offerings were not heavy. Cattle prices showed little change from those of last week. But in hogs, due to light receipts, prices advanced 50c per cwt. making the fed and watered basis $11. Most sales at this price went to outside sources as the packers' ideas were around $10 at which figure they continue to offer for the balance of the week. Dressed meats are unchanged.

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

THE SOUTHERN RICE SITUATION

Practically all of the rice in Texas has been harvested with but little damage from recent rains. The average yield per acre will run close to 48 bushels in Arkansas, 47 bushels in Texas, and 36 bushels in Louisiana. Blue Rose variety makes up approximately 60 per cent of the acreage in Arkansas and 71 per cent in Louisiana. Early Prolific is the second variety of importance in both States. Louisiana ranks first in rice production, with California second and Arkansas third.

Why The Grocer Must Be A Selector

One retailer interviewed recently carried only 2 brands of jam. Yet there are about 40 on the market.

Another sells one of 2 brands of corn syrup.

A third has selected 1 brand of soda biscuits out of 8 or 10 available.

A fourth was offered an entirely new product—a ready-mixed cake flour. He stocked it and introduced it to practically all his customers.

Careful retailers who keep their stocks properly proportioned, cannot possibly tie up money in every brand of every line offered. For an adequate assortment, they must narrow down their purchases to one, two or three brands, seldom more.

To do this they have to study carefully the various brands offered and SELECT those they believe will give best satisfaction to their customers and consequently to themselves.

That your brands may be among the Selections of as many good dealers as possible, make sure you tell the merchant about them regularly in the business paper he reads for his business information.

Why should your customers trade with you?

Rarely do you have a chance to tell your customers why it is to their advantage to trade with you.

This is but one of the reasons why you need the Toledo Sign—so that everyone entering your store may know that you stand for a square deal on both sides of the counter.

Why not send us your name and address so we can give you some of the other reasons? This entails no obligation, and you will be interested.
